YANKEE WOMAN TELLS OF LIFE IN RUSS PRISON

Was Kindly Treated, Mrs. Harrison Says.

BY MARGUERITE HARRISON.
[Copyright: 1921: By the Baltimore Sun.]

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—On July 28, almost eighteen months after I had crossed the Russian-Polish frontier in war time and without permission, I left Moscow with Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland, who had secured my release from my Russian prison. I had a passport this time, stamped with the visé of the Russian Federated Socialist republic.

During the entire eighteen months I was the guest of the soviet government, the first nine months being spent in one of its guest houses provided for foreigners and the second nine in two of its great prisons. So naturally I enjoyed ample opportunity of seeing the workings of all the departments of that government.

Talks With Leaders.

I met and talked with most of the statesmen and leaders of the soviet movement and came in contact with the men and women who were engineering the great forces which were remolding the social and cultural life of the country.

I knew many persons of all political creeds and opinions, from monarchists to anarchists, and representatives of all classes in a land where all class distinctions were abolished, from the remnants of the nobility who still remained, the members of the bourgeoisie and the not inconsiderable group of intellectuals, to the peasantry, the workmen, and the undefinable masses of the country.

Such an opportunity of studying the forces molding the new Russia was afforded to few foreigners. I was also able to see at close range the reaction of the people to the series of historic events so rapidly unfolding.

Reaches Soviet Capital.

Arriving in the land of the soviet just after Admiral Kolchak's memorable retreat, I was in Moscow when news arrived of the overthrow of the last of Denikin's forces and a year later when Wrangel was finally defeated. I witnessed the great wave of nationalism which arose to meet the Polish offensive, and I followed that campaign to its conclusion with the armistice. I had first hand news of the peace deliberations with Latvia and Esthonia, which were held in Moscow, and I heard, even in prison, the terms of the peace of Riga, also the full story of the Kronstadt rebellion.

The significant happenings in the near and far east; the establishment of the easetrn soviet republics—Azerbeidj, Georgia, and Khiva, as the foundation for a far eastern republic, with the openings of relations with Persia and China—all were intensely interesting, viewed from Moscow.

Saw Red System.

In addition, I saw the machinery of government working during the sessions of the central executive committee of the all-Russian soviet, the Moscow soviet, and the all-Russian council of trade unions. I observed the administration of justice in the People's courts and the revolutionary tribunals. I saw how illiteracy was being abolished through the army and civilian schools, and could watch the work of the public department of health. Last I read the text of the published decrees which formed the basis of Russia's new economic policy. Finally I left Russia just at the point when she was facing the demoralization of famine with the radical changes in her external and internal policy, and the breaking down of her long moral and physical isolation from the rest of the world.

Speaks Well of Bolsheviki.

It was a wonderful experience, and well worth the price I paid, which, after all, was the result of my own action in entering Russia uninvited. I was treated with all the consideration due a woman under such circumstances, and nothing happened to me personally tending to bias my opinion of the men whom and events which I studied in Russia.

So now for my main story:

I passed through the Polish lines near Borisov on Feb. 8, 1920, and spent nearly a fortnight on the Beresina front. Then I arrived in Moscow, by means of a safe conduct through the red army. My experiences during this time shall be told in later articles. While I was told frankly by the officials of the foreign office that my position was entirely illegal and open to serious misunderstanding, I was permitted to remain in Moscow, and was permitted to send out news by radio to

TELLEGEN FILES SUIT AGAINST DIVA THIS WEEK

Farrar and He Hide from Public.

New York, Aug. 6.—[By the United Press.]—Lou Tellegen's formal action for separation from Geraldine Farrar, famous opera singer, will be filed in Westchester county next week, Harry M. Steinfeld, his attorney, announced today.

"The summons and appearance, charging desertion, already have been filed," he said. "Additional grounds will be cited when the formal action is instituted."

Miss Farrar could not be found today. Her house on 74th street had a deserted appearance. There was mail for Tellegen in the box. The curtains were drawn.

Charge She Refused Service.

According to Steinfeld, Miss Farrar refused to accept service in the cast last Thursday night. Four process servers were waiting in front of her house when she drove up with her mother in an automobile.

Tellegen was barricaded behind a wall of bellboys, bouncers and house detectives at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton.

"Mr. Tellegen says, 'Please go away and let me sleep'," was the gist of the message from the besieged actor's bedchamber.

Many of the details of the crash of the romance were still enveloped in mystery today. It appeared, however, that both parties were contemplating separation actions.

Tellegen's complaint is said to be that his wife, in the capricious manner of a Carmen—which part she has sung so often on the Metropolitan stage—locked the doors against him and notified him through her lawyers to tell her where she could ship his clothes.

Ultimatums and Threats.

This ultimatum about his wardrobe reached Tellegen, it was reported, while he was on a fishing trip at Long Beach, N. Y.

Following this, according to Tellegen's attorney, papers were served on Miss Farrar in notification of a separation suit, charging desertion. Farrar's secretary, however, says she is out of town and that no papers have been served.

Miss Farrar's lawyers, furthermore, declare that she is preparing to institution action against Tellegen on "good and sufficient grounds," the details of which will be revealed later.

DES MOINES MAY GET STREET CARS BACK SOON

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 6.—Des Moines wants its street cars back.

The city council has changed from its "irreconcilable" attitude toward the trolleys and virtually agreed to a 7 cent fare, the continuance of the old franchise, and elimination of the busses from car track streets.

Bus service was increased yesterday, the second day of the trolleyless era, 55,000 fares being carried, an increase of 4,000 over the first day.

Bus men promise a fleet of 180 busses and complete service if they are granted a one year franchise, excluding street cars. But no action has been taken.

BRITAIN TO FREE ALL SINN FEIN SOLONS BUT ONE

DUBLIN, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—All members of the Irish republican parliament now in custody will be released, with one exception, in anticipation of the meeting of the parliament called for Aug. 16. Official announcement that the prisoners would be freed was made today. The exception is John J. McKeown, convicted of the murder of District Inspector McGrath.

DIVORCEE OF EVANSTON SEES RICH MAN SLAIN

Killed in Lonely Los Angeles Suburb.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 6.—[United Press.]—Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain of Evanston, Ill., was held by the police as a material witness here today pending investigation of the mysterious murder last night of John D. Kennedy, wealthy Los Angeles insurance man. No charge was against her.

Mrs. Obenchain, who is a divorcee, was the only witness to the murder, which occurred on the steps of Kennedy's cottage at Beverly Glen, fashionable suburb.

"We had motored to El Segundo and the beaches yesterday," she told the police. "We returned rather late, and I accompanied Mr. Kennedy to his Beverly Glen cottage, which he maintained for weekend parties.

"Mr. Kennedy and I left the machine, and started to mount the hillside stairs. Then I remembered that on my last visit to the cottage, a year ago, I had hidden a copper cent under a stone near the front of the stairs.

Hunts for Old Copper Penny.

"I wanted to see if it was still there. I went back a few steps, and struck a match.

"Just as the match flared, the most terrible crash rang out. I was dazed. I looked up the stairs. I could see Mr. Kennedy collapse.

"'Good night, Madalynne,' he said. That was all.

"A dark figure faded into the shadows. I thought I would die of terror out there in the hills alone, with a man dying at my feet and dark shapes around me."

Mrs. Obenchain's screams reached neighbors some distance away. They called the police.

Police Find Loaded Pistol.

The police found a fully loaded revolver at Kennedy's feet. It was apparently his own weapon. No explanation for its presence could be established, other than that Kennedy possibly feared the attack which actually materialized and resulted in his death

Kennedy was murdered with a shot gun. The back of his head was shattered.

Mrs. Obenchain, apparently a wealthy woman and a guest at the Alexandria hotel, said she was engaged to Kennedy. She said she was divorced from R. R. Oberchain, a prominent Chicago attorney, about a year ago. She was hysterical today.

According to the police, she admitted to them that she obtained her divorce because of her love for the murdered man.

CO-ED AT NORTHWESTERN.

Mrs. Ralph R. Obenchain, then Miss Madalynne Connor, was a co-ed at Northwestern university seven years ago. There it was she met her husband, who was president of the senior class at the law school, while attending a dance of the Phi Kappa Sigma.

The pretty college student and Mr. Obenchain were married in Los Angeles on New Year's day, 1919. A few months later her husband returned to Chicago, where he was attorney for the Aetna Life Insurance company. Because of illness she was unable to make the trip then, but joined him in the following November.

Blames Another Girl.

The couple took up their residence at the North Shore hotel. Soon afterwards, she said at the time of her divorce, Mr. Obenchain went to live in a fraternity house on the south side in order to be near a certain girl.

Court action followed. Last year Mrs. Obenchain was granted a decree by Judge Rush on the grounds of infidelity. Leland K. Fishback, a mutual college friend, gave the testimony regarding the "other woman" which won the divorce. Alimony of $80 per month and permission to resume her maiden name were also given the former co-ed.

Congress Record Names 17,000 as Draft Evadaers

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—More than 17,000 names of alleged draft evaders issued by the war department between June 5 and July 4 were published today in the congressional record. The list occupied eighty-six printed pages. The names of twenty-two men previously published in the record as deserters and who have established that they should not have been so classed, were included in the list transmitted by Adjt. Gen. Harris to Representative Johnson, Republican, South Dakota, who obtained permission of the house for publication of all department lists, with subsequent corrections.

TRAPS THIEF IN GARAGE; SHOOTS; IT'S HIS FATHER

Son Says Man Tried to Wield Crowbar.

Every night for a week Robert Schon lay in wait for the man who had robbed his garage at 1844 Allport avenue several times during the last month.

FRANK SCHON.

The burglar made a new raid on the garage early yesterday morning, using a duplicate key to enter a side door. Schon sprang from his hiding place, revolver poised, and called on the thief to surrender.

Instead, the man fled. Schon gave chase, firing four shots. At the fourth he was only ten feet from the burglar. The man stopped, turned, and raised his hands.

"Don't shoot," he said.

And Schon recognized the invader as his father, Frank.

Fifth Shot Drops Father.

"Then he noticed he had a crowbar in one of his hands," said the younger Schon. "He tried to strike me down with it. I had to fire again."

The fifth bullet slightly wounded the elder Schon, who was taken first to the county hospital and then to the Maxwell street police station. His son was released after telling his story.

"I was taking only the things that belonged to me," the wounded man told Lieut. O'Donnell. "My money paid for most of the things in that garage. I figure it belongs to me as much as it does to him."

The elder Schon was divorced last April, his wife charging cruelty. The five children accompanied her to 1844 Allport avenue, just a block from their former home. Robert is the oldest of the family. The other four, three girls and a boy, are still attending school. Mrs. Schon purchased the garage and Robert was given charge of it. The father, living alone in the former home, continued operating his small express business.

Bakery Striker Shot.

Henry Pfab, 1959 Seminary avenue, said to be active in the bakers' strike, was shot and probably fatally wounded shortly before noon yesterday by John Hickey, a special deputy sheriff.

According to Hickey, he and three companions—Robert Bryson, W. R. Shaw, and John Mellon, all special deputies—saw Pfab and Henry Burnstein, another striking baker, go into a grocery at 1103 North Wells street.

The deputies had heard of threats to burn the store if the owner did not stop selling bread which did not bear the union label. Pfab and his companion were therefore stopped, but while they were being questioned Pfab, it is charged, threw red pepper in the faces of the deputies and fled. He was overtaken at Wells and Division and again threw pepper, at the same time making a motion to his hip pocket, it is said. Hickey, thinking he was going to draw a weapon, fired.

Pfab was taken to Henrotin hospital. The deputies gave themselves up to Capt. Morgan Collins and are being held for further questioning. Search of Pfab's pockets disclosed a revolver and a quantity of red pepper.

KU KLUX KLAN DENIES SENDING THREAT LETTERS

Texarkana, Ark., Aug. 6.—Denial that recent letters of warning received by Texarkana citizens, including notices purporting to have been sent by the Ku Klux Klan to managers of all local hotels instructing them to rid their places of Negro porters, were the work of the Texarkana klan was contained in a statement received by the Texarkanian today.

The statement, which bore the signature of Exalted Cyclops Keigcaph, knights of the Ku Klux Klan, offered a reward of $500 "for the arrest and conviction of any person found guilty of posting and mailing the notices purporting to come from this organization."

Mexicans Rob Train of $35,000 Gold, Silver

Monterey, Mex., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Bandits held up and robbed the Tampico-Monterey passenger train a few miles this side of Tampico, according to reports received here today. They got away with gold and silver amounting to $35,000, being shipped by express to the National Bank of Mexico in Mexico City. Soldiers are in pursuit of the robbers.

CONGRESS URGED TO TILT LID ON WARTIME BEER

Would Add Billion to U. S. Revenue.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—A movement asking congress to shift burdensome taxes from the people to nonalcoholic beer has been started throughout the country. Congress is urged to have the revenue bill provide for the manufacture and sale of beer containing 2.75 per cent alcohol and in that way raise from $1,000,000,000 to $1,250,000,000 in taxes, and the proposition is being seriously considered.

A serious effort has been made to get prohibitionists to agree to a tax of $10 per barrel on "nonintoxicating cereal beverages containing not more than 2¾ per cent of alcohol by weight."

Would Not Violate Amendment.

The suggested legislation, it is argued, would not violate the spirit of the eighteenth amendment, but in effect, amend the Volstead act by killing the provision prohibiting the manufacture of beer with an alcoholic content in excess of one-half of 1 per cent. A bill, or an amendment to that effect, will be introduced in the house to be considered when the regular revenue bill is taken up.

Billion to Revenue.

Prof. Edward R. Seligman, professor of political economy at Columbia university, testifying before the finance committee of the senate, made an impression when he said:

"We must remember that had we not adopted prohibition we should be getting at least $1,000,000,000 we will not get under the existing law."

Asked if he favored the repeal of the prohibition law, Prof. Seligman replied:

"No, sir; although I should be glad to see it so interpreted as to permit the sale and the heavy taxation of beer and light wines. That would help us out immensely."

Practical experts have estimated that between 90,000,000 and 120,000,000 barrels of beer would be consumed if it contained 2¾ per cent of alcohol.

Awaits Mellon's Return.

The internal revenue bureau is awaiting the return of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to pass on regulations permitting the prescription of beer as medicine, without limit to the number of prescriptions. The bureau completed all details of the regulation which will be presented to Secretary Mellon Monday. The anti-beer bill was debated in the senate Friday, but no action was taken, and an agreement for a final vote may be reached Monday.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 6.—Lord Northcliffe and his party sailed today for New Zealand on another leg of his around the world tour. He will make a stop at Honolulu.

Woman Kills Mother-in-Law Over a Flower

Mrs. Anna Taugner died yesterday in her home at 1626 North Leavitt street of injuries suffered Friday in a quarrel with her daughter-in-law. She was 53 years old. The daughter-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Taugner, 23, of 1624 North Leavitt street, is in a serious condition at the county hospital. Police are guarding her.

Elizabeth Taugner, 2 year old granddaughter of the dead woman, picked some flowers in the yard of Charles Kuczkuda at 1620 North Leavitt street. Lillian Janicki, 5, of 1630 North Leavitt street, told the mother, who spanked Elizabeth.

The child's screams brought Mrs. Anna Taugner to the scene. The grandmother took the baby home with her and refused to give her to her mother when the latter demanded her child.

Women Battle for Babe.

The two women struggled for the child. Screaming and pulling each other's hair, they staggered about near the head of a stairway. The older woman suddenly released herself and pushed the other downstairs. She followed her daughter-in-law down, the latter said, and the fight was renewed at the foot of the stairway.

In this struggle the daughter-in-law knocked down the elder woman. She was kicking her in the head when she was pulled away by Mrs. Anna Bildel, 1638 North Leavitt street, the latter told the police.

The younger woman then collapsed near her foe. Dr. J. W. Krampe, 2225 West North avenue, attended the two women in their homes. Internal injuries and a skull fracture caused the death of Mrs. Anna Taugner. The fall down the stairway left the younger woman in a serious condition.

Mother Tells Her Story.

"I was told about Elizabeth picking flowers, and so I spanked her," Mrs. Margaret Taugner told Acting Capt. Joseph Palczynski of Shakespeare avenue station. "Then my mother-in-law came and took her away. When I asked for Elizabeth, she refused to let me have her. Then we started quarreling."

Beside Elizabeth there is a boy in the family, Mathias, 3½ years old Henry Taugner is the husband of Mrs. Margaret Gaugner. His father, Charles Taugner, is still living.

SLAYS FAMILY, BURNS HIS HOME, KILLS HIMSELF

Corbin, Ky., Aug. 6.—Richard McHargue, 45 years old, a machinist; his mother, wife, and stepdaughter were found dead in their home near here today with the partly incinerated body of his stepdaughter, Thelma Atkins, 14 years old.

The indications are, the authorities announced, that McHargue, who had been on a prolonged spree, shot his mother, beat his wife to death with a club, and, after slaying the girl and building a fire around her, shot and killed himself.

The bodies were found by a neighbor who came to deliver the family's daily supply of milk. A subsequent examination of the premises disclosed blood stained bed clothing, indicating, the authorities believe, that McHargue slew the members of his family while they slept.

GREEKS ADVANCE SOUTH OF ISMID; TAKE TWO TOWNS

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Two Greek divisions are advancing south of Ismid, a town fifty-six miles southeast of Constantinople, which has been in the hands of the Turkish Nationalists, says a Constantinople dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company. The Greeks are said to have entered without resistance the towns of Vezirnan and Lefke, about thirty miles south of Ismid, and to have obtained mastery of the southern exit of Geivli pass, a strategic position about twenty miles from the city.

Town Quiet, Cop Is Fired, Then Robbers Get Busy

Virginia, Ill., Aug. 6.—This town has been so quiet for months that town authorities recently decided to dispense with the services of a night policeman and remove the burden of his salary from the taxpayers. Last night robbers backed a truck up to the door of J. W. McIntire's store, loaded the truck with merchandise, and escaped.

Rainstorm Sweeps Kansas on Fifty Mile Gale

Kansas City, Kas., Aug. 6.—Kansas was swept by a heavy rainstorm early today, accompanied by a fifty mile wind. Telephone and power wires were torn loose in many sections of the city, branches ripped from trees, and minor damage done to buildings.

GOVERNOR IS MUM ON PLANS AS TO ARREST

Halts "Good Roads" Tour of State.

Gov. Len Small, who has been making an extensive tour of Illinois roads during the last three weeks while Sheriff Mester of Sangamon county has been waiting in Springfield with a warrant for his arrest, based on an indictment charging the governor with embezzlement of the taxpayers' money, arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to attend Illinois day at the Pageant of Progress. Although the governor did not make a speech at the pageant, he issued a statement in which he said he would return to Springfield Tuesday morning.

Whether this means he intends to allow the sheriff to serve him with the three warrants charging him with embezzlement and conspiracy and give bonds or plans to defy the authorities there could not be learned. The governor and his staff denied themselves to newspaper men. The statement was given out through his publicity man.

Here's Small's Statement.

"So that my traducers shall not be permitted through their newspaper mouthpieces," the statement reads, "to misrepresent my official course in the performance of my duties as governor, I shall not resume my good roads program until Friday next week. I expect to finish my state business here (Chicago) on Saturday, and shall be in Springfield on Tuesday morning."

The governor came to the city from Kankakee, his home, where he has been spending the last few days, and after visiting the pageant went into conference with his attorneys and political leaders at the Great Northern. The outcome of this conference is not known, but it was learned the program of the governor's actions following his arrival in Springfield day after tomorrow was discussed, as was the subject of the indictment and trial of Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling.

Seek Sterling's Aid?

Thus far the governor's legal advisers have ignored the existence of Sterling, despite the fact he was indicted on the same charges as those made against the governor. Now it is understood the governor's attorneys have extended an invitation to the lieutenant governor's legal advisers to "sit in," but in all probability this will be refused, for various reasons. First, Small does not wish to be tried in Sangamon county and all the moves of his attorneys have been made with a view of obtaining a change of venue. Sterling already has surrendered to Sheriff Mester, is at liberty on bonds, and in all probability will insist upon going on trial there.

Then, again, it is understood Sterling does not wish to be tried with the governor. He desires a separate trial, and as he is making independent plans for his defense, his friends say he will have nothing to do with the governor's legal advisers. Both the governor and the lieutenant governor visited the Pageant, but Mr. Small went in his official capacity, while Mr. Sterling was simply a visitor.

At Springfield Sheriff Henry Mester, when informed of Gov. Small's statement, said he believed the governor would appear Tuesday and give bond. If the governor does not appear he will probably be notified by telephone before any action is taken, the sheriff added.

Weighs Armory Plea.

While at the Pageant the governor visited the booth of Theodore Roosevelt post of the American Legion in an effort to learn what the legion is doing to relieve conditions among jobless ex-service men. Recently officials of the post wired the adjutant general and the governor asking that the armories of the state be thrown open for the use of the jobless ex-service men. Mr. Small may soon give a decision upon this.

Last night Gov. Small returned to his home in Kankakee.

QUEEN IS CROWNED

Miss Marcella Kinkade of Kenwood was crowned the queen of the Pageant of Progress last night on the Municipal pier. She is 18 years old, a former student at Hyde Park High school, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Kinkade, 4539 Lake Park avenue, and a blonde.

She was chosen by the judges from among scores of girls elected to represent various sections of the city. The announcement was made yesterday morning by Henry High, chairman of the judges.

The coronation, accompanied by the presentation of flowers, candy, a pearl necklace, and many other gifts, was the climax of Illinois day. The parade of the Chicago Women's band, dressed in white and crimson costumes, was one of the features of the afternoon. The women musicians played from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Another feature was the release of eleven homing pigeons and the race from Maywood to the pier between five birds of the United States signal corps and an airplane. The pigeons won the race by two minutes. It took them seven minutes to make the pier. The eleven homers were dispatched to their home in San Antonio, 1,040 miles away. They are expected to arrive there about noon today.

Today the students of Culver Military academy, Culver, Ind., will arrive with their famous Black Horse Troop for an exhibition of athletics which will take up three days.

Tomorrow is Welfare day. The program will be presented in the pier auditorium, under direction of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Bishop Samuel Fallows will give the invocation. Lucius Teter and Mrs. Rose Lave will speak, and a pageant representing the various phases of welfare work will be presented. The children are all invited to this event.

Waterways Show Feature.

An exhibit which is attracting much attention at the pageant is that of the state division of waterways. The principal atraction is a working model of a lock such as is being built at Marseilles as part of the Illinois waterway. The spectators see a toy barge loaded with grain and coal floating on the water below the lock. The operator pulls the barge into the lock chamber, closes the gates behind the boat, opens valves and the water in the chamber slowly rises, lifting the barge until the water is at the same level as the water above the lock. He then closes the valves, opens the lock gates and pulls the boat into the canal above. The reverse operation takes the barge from the high to the low water level and the spectators have observed a complete lockage and have seen how large boats can be raised or lowered by the water itself between high and low water levels.

Painting Shows Project.

A large oil painting shows how the lock dam and power house at Starved Rock will improve the scenic beauty of this famed state park and two enlarged photographs depict the progress made in water transportation methods—one showing the old Illinois and Michigan canal with animal drawn boats of 140 tons or five carload capacity and the other a steamboat towed fleet of barges of 9,000 tons, or 300 carloads capacity. A map on the wall is plastered with grain, each kernel representing a million bushels of grain produced annually within a forty mile truck haul of the Illinois waterway, and another map shows that 60,000,000 tons of Illinois coal are mined close to navigable water and only need the completion of the canal from Lockport to La Salle to provide cheap transportation for Chicago's yearly consumption of 30,000,000 tons at a saving of $15,000,000 per year.

Placards on the walls of the booth and a series of pictures projected on a screen graphically show the wonderful possibilities of cheap water transportation and the benefits to the people of Chicago and the state of Illinois due to the resulting lower costs of the necessities of life which will be realized when the Illinois waterway is completed and the centuries old vision of La Salle, Joliet, and others, "The Lakes to the Gulf Waterway," becomes a fact instead of a dream.

MISS MILTIMORE SAYS SLAYER OF FATHER IS CRAZY

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—"Lena Clarke, who killed my father, should be punished to the limit of the law," said Miss Namo Miltimore, 22, daughter of Frederick A. Miltimore, Orlando, Fla., restaurauteur, whom Miss Clarke, West Palm Beach postmistress, has admitted slaying. The young woman made the statement as she alighted from a train in this city today. She is on her way to Orlando, where her father will be buried. Miss Clarke is held in that city for the murder, which, she admits, was committed in her hotel room there.

"I believe the woman was and is crazy," said Miss Miltimore. "You know there seems to be a trace of insanity in her family. Her brother put the head of a rattlesnake in his mouth just before he died."

Miss Miltimore has been visiting in Lake Forest, near Chicago, for several weeks.

CANADIAN RAIL UNIONS PROTEST PAY CUT PLANS

Toronto, Aug. 6.—The four big railroad brotherhoods in Canada announced today they would jointly contest the 12 per cent wage cut, which has been put into effect on the Canadian railroads. They have applied to the government for a board of conciliation.

Representatives of the Order of Railway Conductors, the Order of Railway Telegraphers, the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen reached their decision after a ten day conference in Montreal. They also considered taking a referendum vote of the membership on the wage reductions.

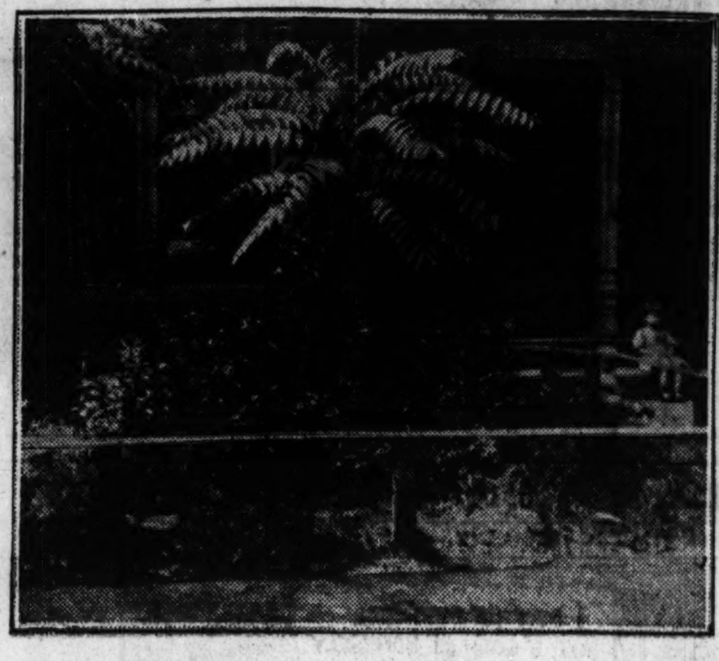
David Campbell, solicitor of Calgary, formerly president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, was designated representative of the railroad organizations.

HEALTH BAD; KILLS HIMSELF.

Charles Wyatt, 353 West 37th street, died yesterday at the County hospital of bullet wounds self-inflicted at his home. His wife, Minnie, found him lying on the floor with a revolver in his hand. Ill health is declared to have been the cause of the suicide.

THE ELEMENTS OF TRAGEDY

Young Elizabeth Taugner picked flowers in a bed that was forbidden.



Here is the little flower bed at 1626 North Leavitt street in which Elizabeth, 5 years old, was at large.

Mrs. Taugner's mother-in-law, Mrs. Anna Taugner, interposed, with the result that she was killed.

And here is Lillian Janicki, Elizabeth's playmate, who "told" on her.

START BOOM FOR KRAMER AS NEXT OHIO GOVERNOR

Dixon, Ill., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—The Hon. John F. Kramer, former federal prohibition commissioner of Mansfield, O., was the principal speaker at the Rock River assembly today. Mr. Kramer had little to say about prohibition and the work in which he was recently engaged, but he made a strong plea for obedience to the law, local, state and federal.

His candidacy for the nomination of Governor of Ohio at the next state election was indicated by the Rev. Simon Peter Long, D. D., of Mansfield, who introduced him.

"When I introduced the Hon. William McKinley to a big Lutheran conference at Columbus, O., a number of years ago, I predicted that he would become a President, and in introducing Mr. Kramer to you this evening I predict that he will become a governor of Ohio," said the Rev. Mr. Long.

The school for religius workers closed this morning and will be followed Monday morning by the school of msisions. Mrs. Hattie Linn Hall is in charge of the international committee of missions of the central west. Tomorrow Riccardo Martin, tenor, will sing.

SCOW CROSSING SHIP'S BOW BARS IMMIGRANTS OUT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Frantic midnight racing of immigrant laden steamers into American harbors to land monthly quotas in the first minutes of the first day of new months may be done away with here Monday when ship line officers and immigration officials get together to formulate a new agreement.

Commissioner General Husband of the immigration bureau, in announcing the conference today, said he was willing to "wipe the slate clean," admit under bond the 400 or so August quota excess now in harbors, and begin all over again if the companies would reach a binding agreement among themselves not to exceed quotas hereafter.

Due to such a race July 31, the Greek, Turkish, and other small quotas for August were exceeded in the first two minutes of Aug. 1. One ship lost out because of a lighter crossing her bow and risked carrying back her load of immigrants at the company's expense rather than take a chance of running down the barge.

CONVICTED SLAYER APPEALS.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 6.—Attorneys for Francis X. Willy, convicted in the Jo Daviess county Circuit court for the murder of Earle A. Fitch in June, 1919, today filed an appeal to the Circuit court alleging that improper evidence was presented at the trial in which Willy was sentenced to life imprisonment at Joliet.

WASHINGTON NEWS
—IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 6.

Republican senators are becoming impatient over the White House silence regarding peace negotiations with Germany. They know nothing except that negotiations of some kind are in progress. Because of this situation they are daily expecting taunts from the champions of the Versailles treaty.

A movement has begun to shift some of the tax burden from the public to 2.75 per cent beer, which, its advocates urge, would raise at least a billion dollars of revenue annually.

Desertion in America of German seamen who ship from Germany at the rate of 1 per cent a month emphasizes the violation of the immigration laws which is going on continuously under cover of the seaman's act and not a move is being made to stop the flood of inadmissible aliens to the country. More than 13,543 deserting seamen entered the country illegally in 1920, and the number this year, it is estimated, will be much larger.

Prohibition leaders are now convinced that there is a well organized filibuster operating in the senate against the passage of bill to prohibit the use of beer as a medicine. Opponents of the bill by holding it up are hopeful that the treasury regulations to permit consumption of beer by prescription, long held up, may be forced out of the internal revenue bureau.

Treasury officials say that the predictions of house leaders for a cut of $500,000,000 in the estimated government expenditures can be realized if congress will actually take action and not talk so much about it.

The I. C. C. has ruled that the railroads cannot figure in their maximum maintenance of operation accounts "the inefficiency of labor."

The department of justice is preparing to enforce an old law preventing former government officials as lawyers pressing claims against the government until two years after the expiration of their federal service.

CIVIL OFFICIALS TO PROBE DEATH OF CAPT. FERRIS

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Frankly expressing dissastisfaction over the report of the Camp Grant board of inquiry on the mysterious shooting of Capt. Robert Ferris, camp prison officer, Winnebago county authorities today announced they would make an independent investigation.

Subpoeanaes were issued for five Camp Grant officers to appear before the Winnebago county grand jury in October. The men subpoenaed are Maj. C. R. Abraham, Maj. E. L. Titus, and Capt. Adam Richmond, who composed the camp board which investigated the shooting; Chaplain Ford, who is said to have revealed a letter had a bearing on the affair, and Sergt. Goetheh, who was a witness before the board. He was Capt. Ferris' assistant.

The camp board concluded in its report to Gen. Bell that Ferris was wounded by a bullet from a revolver in hsi own hand, and that he also fired the bullet which shattered the windshield of his car, but that he did not shoot with suicidal intent. No motive for the act was revealed.

Gen. Bell declined to discuss the action of the state authorities.

DONOVAN INQUEST CONTINUED.

Inquest over Deputy Sheriff Malachy Donovan, 3270 Palmer street, was continued yesterday to Aug. 19 at the request of the police. Some witnesses nad members of the family failed to appear. Donovan was shot by William Brinder, a saloonkeeper at 2159 South Robey street.

OLD LAW MAY KNOCK EX-PRESIDENT OUT OF GOOD LEGAL FEES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Interest was aroused here today by the statement that steps would be taken to enforce strictly an old law which would prevent former officials from appearing as lawyers to prosecute claims against the government arising in their tenure, or until they had been two years out of office.

This would affect uany officials of the last administration now practicing law here, including Woodrow Wilson and Bainbridge Colby, who have a law partnership; Robert Lansing, A. Mitchell Palmer, Joseph P. Tumulty, Edgar A. Clarke, until recently chairman of the interstate commerce commission; Robert W. Wooley, a former member of the commission; Robert T. Scott, former secretary to Mr. Palmer; Daniel C. Roper and William N. Williams, both former commissioners of internal revenue; William H. Lamar, former solicitor of the postoffice department, and other well known men.

The statement was made at the same time that the department of justice was backing an even more stringent proposal made by Representative Edmonds of Pennsylvania, that the prohibition against appearing in the Claims court should be lengthened from two to three years, should extend to former members of any governmental activities, and should be punished by a fine of $10,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both. The Edmonds proposal is in the form of a bill which the author has already introduced.

CROWDS DRIVE NEGROES FROM DIXON RESORTS

Stage Demonstrations as Murder Aftermath.

Dixon, Ill., Aug. 6.—A number of Negroes were driven from Dixon late last night by a mob of 200 white men of this city and Polo. Though the exodus was unaccompanied by violence, a severe rainstorm which broke early in the morning is thought to have prevented serious trouble.

A band of eight unidentified white men set fire to a Negro-White resort and it was destroyed early this morning.

Both demonstrations are outgrowths of the murder of William Coffey, world war veteran, who was shot Monday night after he had been robbed in a Negro resort. Three Negroes, arrested for the crime, have been held to the grand jury and preparations were made to remove them from the local jail if necessary.

Sheriff Schoenholtz asserted today that practically all undesirable and transient Negroes have fled the vicinity and he has no fear of further mob action by the white residents.

The Negroes who were driven from the town offered no resistance. City authorities assured Negro residents known to be law abiding citizens that they will be given protection should a mob be organized tonight. Extra guards were placed about the jail housing the suspects in the murder case.

No intimation was given that an attempt will be made to apprehend any of the whites who participated in last night's and this morning's demonstrations.

Mail Robberies in Month Jump Over Million Mark

WASHINGTON, D. C.—More than a million dollars was stolen from the United States mails in thirty-six major robberies between April 1 and May 1, the postoffice department announces. About one-half of the money stolen has been recovered.

ARMISTICE DAY SUITS JAPAN FOR OPENING PARLEY

Tokio Enters Conference Half-Heartedly.

TOKIO, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Japan has agreed to Nov. 11 as the date for the beginning of the disarmament conference in Washington, according to this morning's newspapers.

Foreign Minister Uchida, the newspapers state, told the cabinet he had informed Edward Bell, the American charge d'affaires, that Japan had no objection to Nov. 11 for the conference date.

The disarmament question was touched upon incidentally today by Marquis Okuman, former premier, in an address to the Education society. If Japan, he said, could have 200,000,000 yen annually by armament reduction it should all be spent in education.

Sir Charles Eliot, the British ambassador, had a conference yesterday with Foreign Minister Uchida over the preliminary negotiations for the conference.

TOKIO OPINION SPLIT

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 6.—In certain quarters in Japan it is felt that Great Britain was responsible for the initiative behind Washington's proposal for the disarmament and the far east conference, according to a summary of press and public opinion issued by the Japanese embassy here today and published in the Daily Telegraph.

"The public of Japan seems to have been struck first of all with the suddenness with which the President of the United States brought forward his proposal for a conference," says the statement, "but later a feeling was manifested that Great Britain was responsible for the real initiative lying behind the proposal.

"This feeling changed the character of public discussion from the questions of the conference to that of continuation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance."

Points Raised by Japan.

In the course of discussion the following points were raised:

"Japan is ready to reduce its military plans to the minimum necessary for its own self-defense on condition that America frankly and promptly adopts a similar course.

"Regarding the Pacific question the newspapers ask what is actually to be discussed at the conference. Japans' Chinese and Siberian policy already has been decided upon, and the Shantung and Yap questions surely have been settled under the terms of the peace treaty with Germany.

"Supposing America's real intention lies in a desire to force China into the adoption of the open door and equal opportunities, why does not America adopt a similar course herself and suggest one for Australia?

Point Out "Inconsistencies."

"All these questions are regarded by the Japanese press as indicating inconsistencies on the part of America who seems to be aiming at the lion's share on continental Asia regardless of the fact that she persists in maintaining the Monroe doctrine for South and Central America.

"On the whole it appears, both from press and general discussions, that at the present moment, though American earnestness and disinterestedness is taken for granted, there is a strong current of opinion unfavorable to the American proposition, because it is felt that a practical result cannot be reckoned upon with confidence."

IRISH DIPLOMAT SEEKS O. K. FROM ARGENTINE CHIEF

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Laurence Ginnell, special envoy to Argentina, who is seeking recognition of the Irish republican government by Argentina, today said he expected to be received by Foreign Minister Pueyrredon, but admitted that he might be received only in a private capacity.

There is reason to believe that Ginnell hopes to see President Irigoyen and that Eamonn de Valera, Irish republican leader, has made an effort to prepare the way for such an interview by a personal cable message to the Argentine president.

It was learned today the British legation will not object if Foreign Minister Pueyrredon receives him as a private individual.

Ginnell arrived here recently on the steamship Martha Washington from New York. Since then he has given several interviews. He declared today that a statement of the British foreign office, published here, saying he must be out of touch with recent Anglo-Irish developments and referring to him as a "pseudo-diplomat of a nonexisting republic" was "amusing."

J. G. JENKINS, JURIST, IS DEAD AT MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 6.—James G. Jenkins, 87, a noted Wisconsin jurist, died today at his home here. He retired from the federal bench sixteen years ago. A Democrat, he was offered an associate justiceship in the United States Supreme court by President Cleveland in 1885, but declined.

In 1893 he issued a famous injunction against employés of the Northern Pacific road. The road was in the hands of receivers. The injunction forbade them to combine or conspire to strike, but acknowledged their right to combine for mutual benefit and protection. The strike threat followed the announcement that the receivers must cut salaries of officials and workers 10 to 20 per cent.

Labor unions made an effort to have the judge impeached. Congress sent a committee of inquiry to Milwaukee. But the injunction, with minor alterations, was upheld by the higher courts and the impeachment talk died.

ZIEGFELD EVOLVES THE "SNUGGLER"

'Way back in the good old days the boys of then snickered when the voluminous skirt of Clara Throop swished just enough to offer a slight glimpse of her ankle. And then—

Came the Black Crook debutante of the type found in Ada Chamberlain. It was a hair raising exposition. Mother didn't go to such shows. Pa said he'd been at lodge.

[Newplatz Photo.]

Then came the rise of draped beauty. Anna Held, once Mrs. Ziegfeld, was regarded as the foremost expression of face, figure, and fashion. Florodora was speaking.

Suddenly the bald head was swimming in admiration of the show girl. Vera Michelena was the stately exemplar of the period through which the bald heads have just passed.

But now it is the snuggler, says Mr. Ziegfeld. Such a one is Marillyn Miller. She is not a "cutey." Not a "baby doll." She typifies vivacity, pep, grace. She is modern beauty in America. None other need apply.

THE SNUGGLER IS NEW QUEEN OF SHOW GIRLS

Ziegfeld Wants 'Em Small and Snappy.

This morning there is introduced to you the latest queen of the theatrical world—the snuggler. The era of the snuggler is dawning in dazzling radiance, in sparkling splendor, in bewildering brilliancy. The snuggler's reign is decreed by Mr. Florenz ZiZegfeld Jr., so she will no doubt live for many a day.

The snuggler comes to us after many a type of show girl has passed before our visions. She is as distinctive in manner, design, and appearance as is a hotel clerk in impoliteness. She is—but let us start where the story begins.

Florenz Ziegfeld Jr. is said to know more about women than any other person in the world. He begins where Kipling, Thomas Moore, Arnold Bennett, and all the others left off. He knows their whims, their wants, their likes, their temperaments. He knows how and when they please. He knows how to clothe them.

Knows What Men Like.

More than all that, he knows what the gentlemen who attend the theater wants to see. He has studied the subject as closely as Einstein has watched his theory, as religiously as the Mayo brothers probe their science, as carefully as Wrigley has delved into chicle.

And Mr. Ziegfeld has decided upon the snuggler.

He leaned back lazily in the luxurious chair in his Blackstone suite last night. His shoes were tan and soft. His trousers of the same color, also his shirt, the sleeves of which reach only to the elbow. A small blue butterfly tie, a sound coat of tan, and deep black hair completed the personal picture.

A fat cigar, a pinched bottle of Haig & Haig, and the cooling breeze formed the rest of the picture. The master collector of American feminine beauties spoke of his favorite (and America's, too) subject.

Recalls Show Girl of the '60s.

"Do you remember—of course you don't, and neither do I—the show girl of the '60s?" he asked. "She was a meaty proposition, and coy and modest enough for a parson's drawing room. How the old boys used to gasp when her dressed was flipped above her shoe top! How they sighed!

"Do you recall the day a little later when the Black Crook company first appeared before Chicago audiences? Didn't the woman who owned the show horsewhip an editor because he said the girls were immodest? The show girl of a few years later was big and broad and wide and heavy. She walked across the boards with a twenty pound spear in her hand, a coat of golden mail that would make Ivanhoe sigh with weariness, and a great hips and bust.

"After while they did away with the mail and put the legs, the hips, and the bust in tights. Great big girls, strolling on and off, came and conquered he crowds of Hooley's—then palled. Then followed the girl who sat on a gold divan in a deep red drawing room and smoked a cigaret. Ah, what an adventuress in the theatrical world she was!

Then the Floradora Girl.

"In the 1900 we were given the famous Floradora girl. She was a big girl—and she married well. That was also the day of Anna Held, who sang and danced and acted with a bit more ginger than any of her preadessors.

In 1910 the fashion girl, who merely walked on and off, wearing the latest rags from Paris, pleased the barons of the front row. Not an actress, not a dancer, not a singer—merely a girl who tried to walk as did the great and only Doloros, who could steal the thunder from any star by simply walking.

"There followed the little bitsey baby doll. The blue eyed, golden haired, dizzy, brainless girl, who had the vacant stare—and that's all. What a procession of women!

Mr. Ziegfeld stopped a minute to do just what Haig and Haig intended he should do with their libation. Then he went on.

Now the Snuggler.

"I am introducing now the best girl that has ever graced our stages—the smuggler. I may have a bit of trouble explaining her to you, but if you get the picture—you will agree.

"The smuggler is small, but not too small. She is not the baby doll type. Her eyes may be blue, but they are not wistful. They are as vivacious as her spirited legs, as gay and buoyant as her swinging, dimpled arms. Her hair may be bobbed or curled. Her feet are nervous, her lips smiling, not always pouted.

"The snuggler makes you laugh and makes you cry. She must be snuggled, you believe, and you reach out your arms. She evades. You know she is screaming to be in your arms—yet she always escapes. The snuggler can sing. She can dance. She can act. She can vamp. She is never quiet. She is a delightful combination of perfume, powder, ermine, silks and satins, openwork hosiery, and TNT."

He Names the Champion.

Another pause—a match to the big cigar—then more description.

"The world's champion snuggler is Marillyn Miller," he continued. "She is clever. She has brains. She can sing, dance, act. She has worlds of pep, lots of personality, good looking legs, dancing eyes, and lips that smile, and smile, and smile. Put sixty Marillyn Millers in a chorus and you will pack your house for months and months."

"Why—?"

"Why, that is the exact type the tired business man wants to see. He will travel the loop from end to end to see that girl in the chorus. He wants to see something he loves, and what man loves the big, healthy, stockyards type of woman? Ah, no, he wants something feminine, something delicate, somthing rare."

The Follies Will Bring 'Em.

So when the Follies make their annual bow this year you will see Miss Snugger ruing supreme—and ike the Foiles are most other shows.

CO-ORDINATORS TO BUY AND SELL FOR ARMY NAMED

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Assignments of seven of the nine coördinators who will have charge of purchase and sale of government supplies in the various army corps areas throughout the country were announced tonight by the budget bureau. Two more officials will be appointed later.

The seven coördinators and their headquarters are: Capt. T. H. Hicks, U. S. N., New York; Capt. M. M. Ramsay, U. S. N., Norfolk; Capt. F. F. Arms, U. S. N., Boston; Capt. Ray Spear, U. S. N., San Francisco; Lieut. Col. J. C. Rhea, Indianapolis; Maj. D. A. Robinson, San Antonio, and Maj. J. R. McAndrews, Washington, D. C,

Division of the country into areas for the coördination of government transactions in the interest of economy was effected by Director of Budget Dawes under an executive order.

Bulgaria Protests Allied Order for Demobilization

SOFIA, Aug. 6.—The interallied military commission has demanded complete demobilization of the Bulgarian army within two months and the formation of an army of volunteers. The Bulgarian news agency has published a semi-official note protesting against this action and declaring that the present army does not exceed the number provided by the peace treaty.

FOREIGN NEWS —IN BRIEF—

LONDON.—A dispatch from Moscow, signed by Leo Kamaneff, head of the Russian famine relief organization, states that all American captives will cross the Russian frontier tomorrow.

RIGA.—Moscow newspapers report that famine conditions in Russia are growing worse.

TOKIO.—Japan agrees to Nov. 11 as the date for beginning the international conference on disarmament and the far east at Washington. There is a pronounced public opinion in Japan that the conference will fail to obtain practical results.

PARIS.—Princess Elizabeth Marie of the house of Hapsburg has been condemned to ten days' imprisonment at Vienna for refusing to surrender her children during divorce proceedings.

MEXICO CITY.—Congress to begin consideration of article 27 of constitution, President Obregon intimating that so-called "confiscatory" provisions will not be enforced, thus conciliating Washington and paving way to recognition.

Three Waiting to Rob Club's Pay Wagon Nabbed

Three young man who are said to have confessed planning to rob the pay wagon of the Beverly Country club, were arrested yesterday by Sergt. Michael Grady and his squad, Burns, Bibbons, and Bahr. They are Ralph Moline, 7612 Yates avenue; Morris Mendelsohn, 8908 Commercial avenue, ex-convict, and Abe Sturm, 8733 Commercial avenue, recently placed on probation. The three were waiting for the wagon at Western avenue and 80th street when the detectives flushed them.

HARDING AND OBREGON WRITE TO EACH OTHER

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Exchange of personal letters between President Harding and President Obregon of Mexico, has left unchanged the position of the United States, it was learned at the state department today.

The exchange started when Elmer Dover brought to Mr. Harding a personal letter from President Obregon. This was some time ago, but George T. Summerlin, chargé d'affaires at Mexico City, has just handed Mr. Harding's reply to Obregon. Contents of neither letter was divulged, but it is believed the Obregon letter was a personal appeal for recognition of his government.

It was recalled that when President Porras of Panama tried such an appeal he was told he must go through the regular diplomatic channels.

The position of this government, as outlined to Mexico by Secretary of State, Hughes, is that Mexico can be recognized the instant it enters into a treaty guaranteeing protection of American rights.

Camp Funston Buildings Will Be Sold Aug. 16 to 19

Camp Funston, Kan., Aug. 6.—Preparations are being made here for the final acts in the passing of Camp Funston on Aug. 16 to 19, when the cantonment buildings will be sold at auction.

ARMED POSSES HUNT KIDNAPED FRISCO PRIEST

$6,500 Ransom Is Captor's Demand.

BY M. D. TRACY.

[United News Staff Correspondent.]

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 6.—Heavily armed posses today swept through the Big Basin district, in a lonely forest of giant redwoods, hunting Father Patrick Heslin, who is held by kidnapers.

Guards along one of the roads leading out of San Francisco reported during the night that an automobile, driven at terrific speed, had flashed through Los Gatos—sixty miles away—headed for the Big Basin. In it crouched four men, and the guard said the glimpse he got of them convinced him one was the missing priest.

May Be in Big Basin.

Police Chief O'Brien believed today that if the kidnapers and their victims were in Big Basin, escape for them would be impossible. Other posses, however, were raiding shacks in the mountains and in the wild sea coast district of San Mateo county, running down every clew.

The kidnaping of Father Heslin is believed the result of a carefully prepared plot to force the Catholic church to pay $6,500—the ransom demanded—with regard to which the priest was abducted. The motive for this strange proceeding is unknown.

Archbishop Hanna saw an unkempt man, who appeared at St. Mary's cathedral last Thursday evening, asking that a priest go with him to Colma, a suburb, to hear a death bed confession. He was directed to Father Heslin, parish priest of Colma.

Taken on Sick Call.

Father Heslin started with him for the supposed death bed and vanished. The letter Archbishop Hanna received from the kidnapers, demanding ransom, was neatly typewritten and it had a blank space left after the words, "I have Father ——." This was filled in with the words "of Colma."

The letter stated the writer had knocked Father Heslin senseless with a blow over the head and hidden him in a bootlegger's cellar, where he would be burned alive or suffocated if the ransom were not paid. This is believed false, however—a mere blind to conceal the fact that Father Heslin had been carried to some lonely spot in the woods for safekeeping.

YELLOW CAB CO. MEN TO DIVIDE $100,000 BONUS

There's no depression for the Yellow Cab company. Its president, John Hertz, yesterday announced that on Aug. 17, the company will divide its larges tbonus, about $100,000 among nearly 2,000 drivers.

John Sherler will get the biggest bonus, $173.24. This bonus is part of the profits for the last four months.

"Hereafter," Mr. Hertz said, "we shall divide a bonus every month. The rate to be given the employés will vary from 10 per cent to 25 per cent of a man's earnings, depending on how long he has been with the firm."

MAKES GAS IN ANY STOVE.

New Burner Beats City Gas for Cooking and Baking—Burns 94% Air.

A wonderful new burner which works in any stove and beats city gas, coal, or wood for cooking and baking is the proud achievement of the International Heating Company, 4519 North Broadway, St. Louis, Mo. This amazingly simple and inexpensive invention makes the hottest kind of a blaze, controlled by a simple valve. It is perfectly safe and can be installed in twenty minutes. It does away with all dirt, smoke, and kitchen drudgery, and is ideal for summer cooking. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on thirty days' trial to any reader of this paper. They make a special offer to one user in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today.—Advertisement.

POLICE CHIEF'S SLAYER, TRAPPED, ENDS OWN LIFE

West Chicago Man Dies After Duel with Sheriff.

James Witt, alias Joslyn, wanted for the murder of Chief of Police George Reihm of West Chicago, shot and killed himself yesterday after he had been badly wounded in a duel with Sheriff Martin Hextall of Kendall county in a country road near Yorkville, Ill.

There was a $1,500 price on Witt's head, and a nation-wide search for him had been in progress for nearly three months. He was 29 years old.

Witt's wife and 3 year old son were in another machine near by when he encountered the sheriff, about twenty-seven miles from St. Charles, where Witt lived when Reihm was killed. About six weeks ago Witt was reported in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Trapped in Blind Road.

Sheriff Hextall received word Friday night that Witt had been employed in an Oswego county garage for some weeks. He set out to find him. As he neared Oswego two automobiles sped past him. Both machines had the headlights extinguished. One of the cars turned off into a blind road. Witt was in that car. The other machine sped on.

When the sheriff saw he had one car trapped he ran toward the occupants, gun in hand, demanding that he surrender. Witt made no move to give up and the sheriff fired a shot in the air. Witt turned and ran, firing at the sheriff. The officer then brought down the fleeing man with a shot.

Witt chose death rather than face the gallows. He shot himself through the temple, dying instantly.

Story of Reihm Murder.

On the night of April 29 Chief Reihm and James Seanor of West Chicago were asked the direction to St. Charles by two women in a roadster. After directing the women the chief and Seanor walked up the street and met a man whom the chief questioned. The man, alleged to have been Witt, opened fire, killing Chief Reihm and wounding Seanor. The gunman jumped into the roadster with the two women and escaped.

Mrs. Marian Baune and Mrs. Elsie Betts of St. Charles were afterwards arrested as the women in the roadster. Mrs. Baune confessed that her husband, Leo Baune, Witt, and Henry Cooper had gone to West Chicago to steal some lumber from the Ward Lumber yard. She said it was Witt who did the shooting.

Baune was arrested as he was visiting his wife at the jail. Cooper is still at large.

BOARD OF TRADE BILL AMENDED TO BE LESS BINDING

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—The Capper-Tincher bill to regulate grain exchanges was further modified today by the senate agriculture committee after hearing L. F. Gates, former president of the Chicago board of trade, regarding several features of the bill.

The most important change was the elimination of the provision banning privately owner or leased wires. This provision, Mr. Gates said, was obviously intended to drive the "bucket shop" out of business, but he explained that it would operate to the serious disadvantage of grain producers who were forced to rely upon private wires for accurate market reports.

Another change was the striking out of the amendment giving the federal trade commission additional powers to examine records of the grain exchanges.

WATERWAY LINK POINTS, WAY TO HELP VETERANS

Jobs Galore if Project Is Given Start.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

SAY IT WITH JOBS

Systematic surveys to discover possible reservoirs of work for ex-soldiers out of jobs and out of cash will be launched this week.

Soldier organizations will have men combing the employment field; the Association of Commerce will make a canvass of Chicago's industries to get a more definite line on the extent of the slump, the number of unemployed, the proportion of jobless veterans in the army of the workless, and the prospects for placements in jobs, either permanent or temporary. The state labor department likewise will go over the field and other agencies will swing into the job of getting as many ex-service men as possible connected with a pay roll.

Here's Big Job Source.

Public improvements is one avenue of employment to which attention will be directed. One project which will be inquired into is the waterway link between Lockport and La Salle, a proposition for which the people voted $20,000,000 back in 1908; that is, they adopted a constitutional amendment empowering the legislature to issue $20,000,000 of bonds for the "link," which for thirteen years has been gassed by politics.

It is needed as a barge outlet from the lakes to the gulf, and commerce is shouting that, as industry revives and carrying facilities on the railroads again are strained, it will loom larger and larger as a necessary transportation relief. The project now appears to offer one possible labor reservoir. A jobless ex-service man, a member of the Western Society of Engineers, pointed out that, if the state got busy, the lakes to gulf link would offer far more in the way of jobs than does road building. In highway construction a surprisingly small amount of man labor is used, as the tractor, motor truck, and dump wagon train have displaced to a large extent the man with the mule team, while the power mixer has taken the place of large gangs who used the old time mixing board, and the grading machine, tractor pulled, has supplanted the shovel gangs.

Why Not Start Big Dam?

"But," writes this construction engineer, "what of the waterway between Lockport and La Salle? What has become of the vast dam at Starved Rock, which was exploited as being such a gigantic project that labor would be a problem? True, a start has been made with one lock project, but why not start on the big dam? What is holding it up? Here is one potential avenue of employment for many men, if it were opened."

Canada, it is pointed out, after the armistice found work for many returned men in building the new Welland ship canal.

Other possible but undeveloped sources of work are to be looked into. For instance, fruit picking in Michigan, where the fruit crop is coming along faster than usual. The labor condition in the fruit belt is to be investigated to ascertain whether it will offer any opportunities for temporary employment for veterans. It may be that this season the labor supply in the belt is sufficient, and again it may not be, and American legion posts across the lake are to be asked to report upon the outlook.

Put System into Work.

The last few days have seen the employment movement moving more towards systematic activity. Tomorrow the Legion will require that applicants for jobs produce their discharge papers or other identification. Classification is to be started, with a view of getting the right men into the right jobs as far as possible. The Aviation club and the Buck Privates will take similar precautions to protect the bona fide ex-soldier out of work and anxious for a job from imposters who try to string along, who never saw service, and who do not want to work.

Yesterday soldier organizations and other agencies took up in earnest the matter of policing the armories in case they were thrown open as shelters by order of Gov. Small. The Association of Commerce is backing the movement to open the doors, and so are other organizations outside the soldier bodies. The great necessity, it is pointed out by the ex-soldiers, will be to police the places so that tramps and hobos will not make Chicago a mecca in the mistaken idea of getting a good home for the winter.

Aid By Congress Favored.

Meanwhile the ex-soldier with no job, no money, no disability claim, and no compensation is a growing problem to which congress so far has not given any concern. The idea of out of work compensation for veterans who are idle and penniless through no fault of their own, through a slump following the war in which they fought instead of dragging down wartime wages or wartime profits at home, is growing in favor.

In the vocational end the work has been decentralized for a year and a half and the local authorities pass on the cases. In the others everything is centralized at Washington. When a disabled man files his claim he is given a physical examination and the report is sent to Washington, where it is checked up with the hospital record of the man in service. Possibly additional evidence is asked. Delays are frequent. It has been long distance handling of cases, where the real rating should be made at the place of personal contact. The Sweet bill is to rectify this by decentralizing.

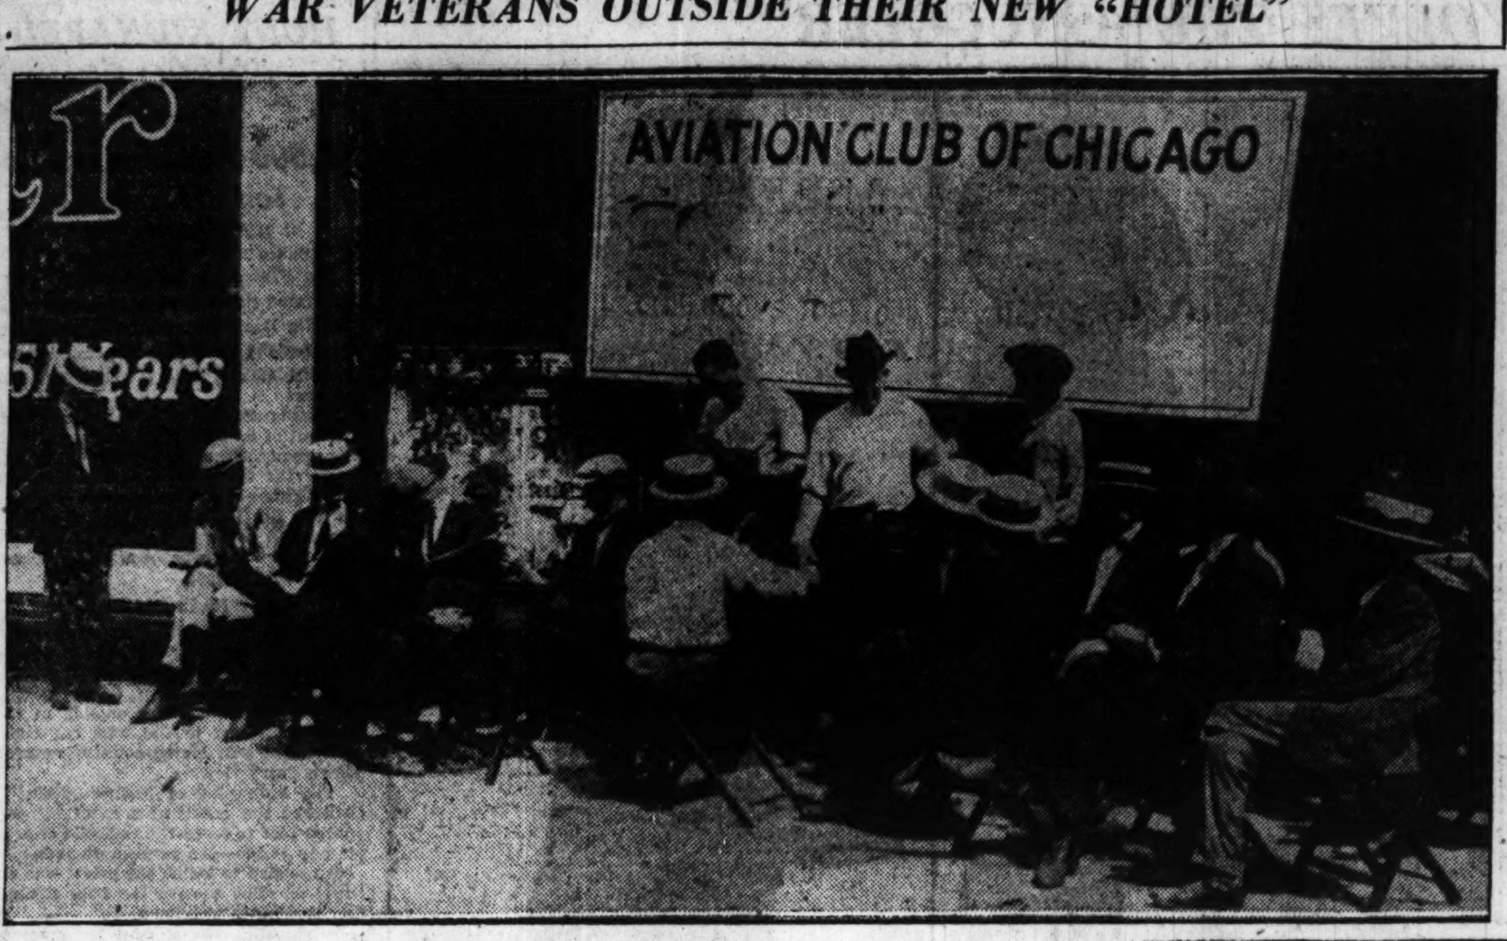
One example of the red tape system is seen at Harvey, Ill., where Homeward American Legion post held a dance at Thornton village hall last night to raise funds for the five orphaned and destitute children of Private Harry J. Coleman. The war risk insurance bureau had failed to reply to letters requesting compensation, and meanwhile Coleman died of tuberculosis. Decentralization is expected to reduce much of the red tape delays.

In the vocational training department, which is decentralized in the three states of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan, 55,000 cases have been registered. To qualify, an ex-soldier must have honorable discharge papers, must have a disability arising from service in the line of duty, the disability must constitute a vocational handicap and training must be feasible. The cases are passed on without recourse to Washington—sometimes a man is on the lists within half an hour after applying. Of the 55,000 registrations, 35,000 have been approved for training. Of these, 13,000 have not taken advantage of the opportuinty, 1,700 are in process of induction, 3,000 are deferred and 9,000 are in training now, 4,000 of them in Chicago.

500 Complete Training.

About five hundred have completed training. The work is carried on in 350 educational institutions, from schools to universities, and in 1,000 other places, and 500 types of training are being given. While the men are undergoing the vocational work they receive training pay ranging from $80 to $170 a month. More than 40 per cent of those in training are men with families.

WAR VETERANS OUTSIDE THEIR NEW "HOTEL"



"Jerry's 77s" are no longer worrying these ex-service men, who are seen sitting outside of their new "hotel" at State street and Austin avenue, provided by the Aviation Club of Chicago. Jobs are what they want, and hunger is their only fear. From the intent look on the faces of the men seen perusing the papers it is evident that the want ads have supplanted in interest the sporting page of the dailies.

10,337 VICTIMS OF WHITE PLAGUE IN U.S. HOSPITALS

Washington, D.C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—During June, 1921, there were 10,337 tuberculosis patients in the hospitals maintained by the bureau of war risk insurance, according to an announcement made today by the director of the bureau, Col. Charles R. Forbes.

In addition to the tubercular cases there were 7,499 neuro-psychiatric and 8,401 general patients in these hospitals. Based upon the total number the major disease of the veterans of the world war is tuberculosis and neuro-physchiatric cases.

During September, 1919, the number of patients in hospitals were classified as follows: 2,232 tuberculosis; 2,100 neuro-physchiatric, and 1,802 general patients.

COURT MARTIAL FREES YOUTH AS DRAFT DODGER

Hans Jacob Zimmerman, son of John R. Zimerman, 1748 North Kedzie avenue, who was recently seized by the military authorities and tried at Fort Sheridan for alleged evasion of the draft in 1917, has been acquitted by the court martial. Zimmerman proved he was on his father's farm, near Alberta, Canada, at the time he was automatically inducted into the service, and did not receive his notice.

"My son came to visit me in Chicago at the time registration for the draft was required of every one of military age who stayed in one place longer than three days," said the father. "He registered here and after a week returned to Canada and then registered there. The American notice was missent and he was inducted without his knowledge.

LEGION MEN TAKE OUT INSURANCE TO BENEFIT POST

North Shore post of the American Legion has evolved a novel plan to raise funds.

At the suggestion of W. E. Howatt, insurance officer of the post, members are taking out not less than $1,000 insurance, making a member of their family beneficiary for one-half of the policy, the other half to go to the post.

This plan was adopted on June 21 and $46,000 insurance was applied for. It has grown so that now the fund that eventually will revert to the post amounts to $180,000.

SUICIDE, CHAMBERS VERDICT.

Suicide was the coroner's jury verdict yesterday at the inquest over Walter Chambers, who shot himself Friday in the room of Miss Dixie Davidson at 208 East 44th street.

SHOT AND SHELL FLASH TOMORROW AT CAMP GRANT

All the noise and smoke and sweating men of a real battle will be seen at the citizens' military training camp at Camp Grant tomorrow, when the 1,200 candidates will go after the "enemy" hidden somewhere on the range near Rockford.

There will be plenty of ammunition for the machine guns, one pounders, and automatic rifles, and to add to the realism of the final charge there will be several tanks operating to the front. The tanks will charge over mined territory, and if the timer is set with precision some of the tanks will be blown up—at least the mines will be exploded when the tanks are going over them.

Many of the candidates have eagerly sought permission to ride in the steel fighting machines, but none will be allowed to try so hazardous a feat. The tanks will be manned by experts, who don't mind going up in the air fifteen or twenty feet and landing upside down. This part of the "fight" should thrill—loving movie fan.

Heavy barrages will be laid down over various parts of the field. Smoke bombs will smudge the landscape. Scouts will crawl through the grass, sneaking up on the enemy. Trench mortar projectiles will swing through the air, and the noise will convince any one that the real thing is on.

On completion of the battle the men will parade at the camp.

The camp is now half over—the closing date is Aug. 20. On that date the men will receive certificates showing that they have completed the prescribed training, and are eligible for next year's "white course"

PRESS IS UNFAIR TO IRELAND, SAYS MISS MAC SWINEY

Sees British Side Only in U. S. Newspapers.

Claiming that the newspapers of America are not giving a "square deal" to Ireland in the negotiations now going on between the British government and Dail Eireann, Miss Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late lord mayor of Cork, whose death resulted from a hunger strike in Brixton prison, London, has issued the following statement to the various press associations and the leading newspapers of the country. The copy for THE TRIBUNE was received through Miss Helen Brady of Portland, Me., where Miss MacSwiney recently spoke.

"Ever since the conference between President de Valera and Mr. Lloyd George began," Miss MacSwiney's statement reads, "I have kept asking myself whether the majority of the American press is willfully blind or hopelessly ignorant.

Says Public Is Fooled.

"The reports coming day after day are, as all you pressmen know, pure invention. But the public does not know it. Nothing has been allowed to leak out as to the nature of the conversations that have been in progress and yet day after day we have the same suggestions: 'The Irish representatives have yielded their demand for a republic'; 'they have been offered full fiscal automonoy'; 'the present home rule bill must be the basis for negotiations'; 'Ulster's right to self-determination must be acknowledged,' etc., ad libitum. And always the words, president of the Irish republic, put in quotation marks. Even the papers usually friendly to Ireland invent the same pro-English 'solutions.'

"If the American press were all one great British syndicate, we could understand it, but from these claiming to be freedom loving Americans—always in favor of a square deal—it is incomprehensible.

How De Valera Stands.

"Not once has there been a word of compromise from the Irish side. Our president, when going to the conference, warned his people not to be too hopeful; the keynote of his speech was: 'Trust in God, but keep your powder dry.' While in London he declared—owing to the misrepresentations in the London press—that he had not abated one iota of the claim of the Irish nation.

"The press was also informed that President de Valera spoke for all Ireland and refused to meet Sir James Craig in London. That gentleman represents a minority party inside Ireland, and, therefore, Dublin was the place to talk to him.

"All through, everything that shows the essential unity of the Irish people—their unflinching steadfastness and readiness to take up the burden of battle again if their independence is not acknowledged—is minimized. It is printed, yes—but in smaller type and usually at the bottom of the page.

Calls Reports Deceptive.

"As the great bulk of the American people seem to read the headlines only—or perhaps the first paragraph—of any news item which does not touch them closely, the result is obvious. The impression is created that Ireland's right to independence is surrendered and that it is only a question of how much or how little Lloyd George is willing to give.

"Are you all deliberately unfair, or just hypotized into misstating the facts? Or is it that your Associated Press and your United Press, and all your other agencies are just branches of the English Press association and working in English interests? Why, even the correspondent of the newspapere always most friendly to Ireland, was among the first to print these false reports 'on reliable authority.'

"You must print something, I am told, and so when you do not get the information you must imagine it.

Sees Bigger Sensation.

"But—why not let your imagination run the other way for a change? You would have a much bigger sensation, and, moreover, the correspondent that first let loose his imagination on big headlines from the Irish standpoint would have the lasting glory of true prophecy and the biggest 'scoop' in the newspaper world for a generation. Any fool can write catchwords, which mean nothing, such as 'Dominion Home Rule,' 'Fiscal Autonomy,' et hoc genus omne. Ireland's martyrs have not died for 'Dominion Home Rule.' The tragedy of Brixton was not endured for 'Fiscal Autonomy.'

"Here are a few statements taken from the most prominent papers in the United States:

"'De Valera has indicated that he will not insist on complete separation from Great Britain provided he is conceded the mastery of both Irelands.'

Only One Ireland.

"That is a pure falsehood to begin with, because there is not and has not been the slightest indication of anything of the kind, and, secondly, there are not two Irelands—there is only one.

"'An encouraging feature is that the Sinn Feiners now seem willing to negotiate within these limits,' i. e., the limits supposed to be laid down by Lloyd George.

"That is another falsehood. It is called 'an encouraging feature.' Encouraging to whom? To Americans? But why should America be encouraged by the surrender of Irish independence, considering that a free Ireland would be a much greater safeguard to American interests than all the 'English speaking unions,' 'Sulgrave institutes,' 'history of the United States, revised' from the English standpoint or any other of the hands across the sea institutions which are designed to sap the very life blood out of real Americanism.

"British Propaganda."

"All these reports from 'reliable sources,' 'highest authorities,' 'inside information,' are inspired by British propaganda, and there has not been one single American correspondent independent enough, American enough, to shake off the shackles of that propaganda and print the truth.

"Think of the type of mind that would so deliberately hurt those who have already endured an agony of sorrow greater than even the most sympathetic can ever realize. Why should the American press help England to cast odium on a name that should be sacred?

"Again, it is the English influence. Why submit to it? We only ask fair play for Ireland—the square deal on which you Americans pride yourselves. Give 'honor to whom honor is due,' and remember—

"Magna est veritas et praevalebit."

RESTRAIN IOWA FROM COLLECTING TAX ON PHONES

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 6.—Injunction suits filed today by the Northwestern Bell Telephone and the American Telephone and Telegraph companies in District court against Gov. N. E. Kendall and other state officers will tie up the collection of taxes against these public service corporations until final determination of the cases in court. Temporary writs of temporary injunction were granted.

The writes restrain the executive council from certifying the findings of the board of review to the county auditors of the state.

Charges are made in the petition that farm property in the state is not being assessed more than 38 per cent of its value.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone company has 16,100 miles of lines in Iowa, valued for assessment purposes at $900 per mile, or a total of $14,490,000. The company claims that it should be assessed at the rate of 25 per cent of the actual value.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company owns approximately 998 miles of lines in Iowa, valued by the board of review at $1,600 per mile, whereas, the company claims, the correct figures under the 25 per cent clause in the statutes is $721 a mile.

HARDING VISITS WAR VETERANS; ENDS VACATION

Portland, Me., Aug. 6.—President Harding ended his vacation visit to the White mountains of New Hampshire today and crossed Maine to board the yacht Mayflower here for the return voyage to Washington.

Accompanied by Mrs. Harding and other members of the vacation party, the President made the 140-mile cross country trip by automobile, starting early in the day from Lancaster, N. H., where he has been the guest of Secretary of War Weeks since Tuesday.

He went out of his way to visit a soldiers' sanitorium at Oxford, Me., stopped at Poland Spring for luncheon and a game of golf and accepted an invitation to pay a brief call and make a speech at West Brook, just outside of Portland, in the early evening. Sailing late tonight, the Mayflower is expected to reach Washington Tuesday noon.

At the hospital visited both Mr. and Mrs. Harding assured veterans the government would do everything possible for their welfare and asked many questions about the needs of the patients, most of whom are suffering fro mthe effects of gas.

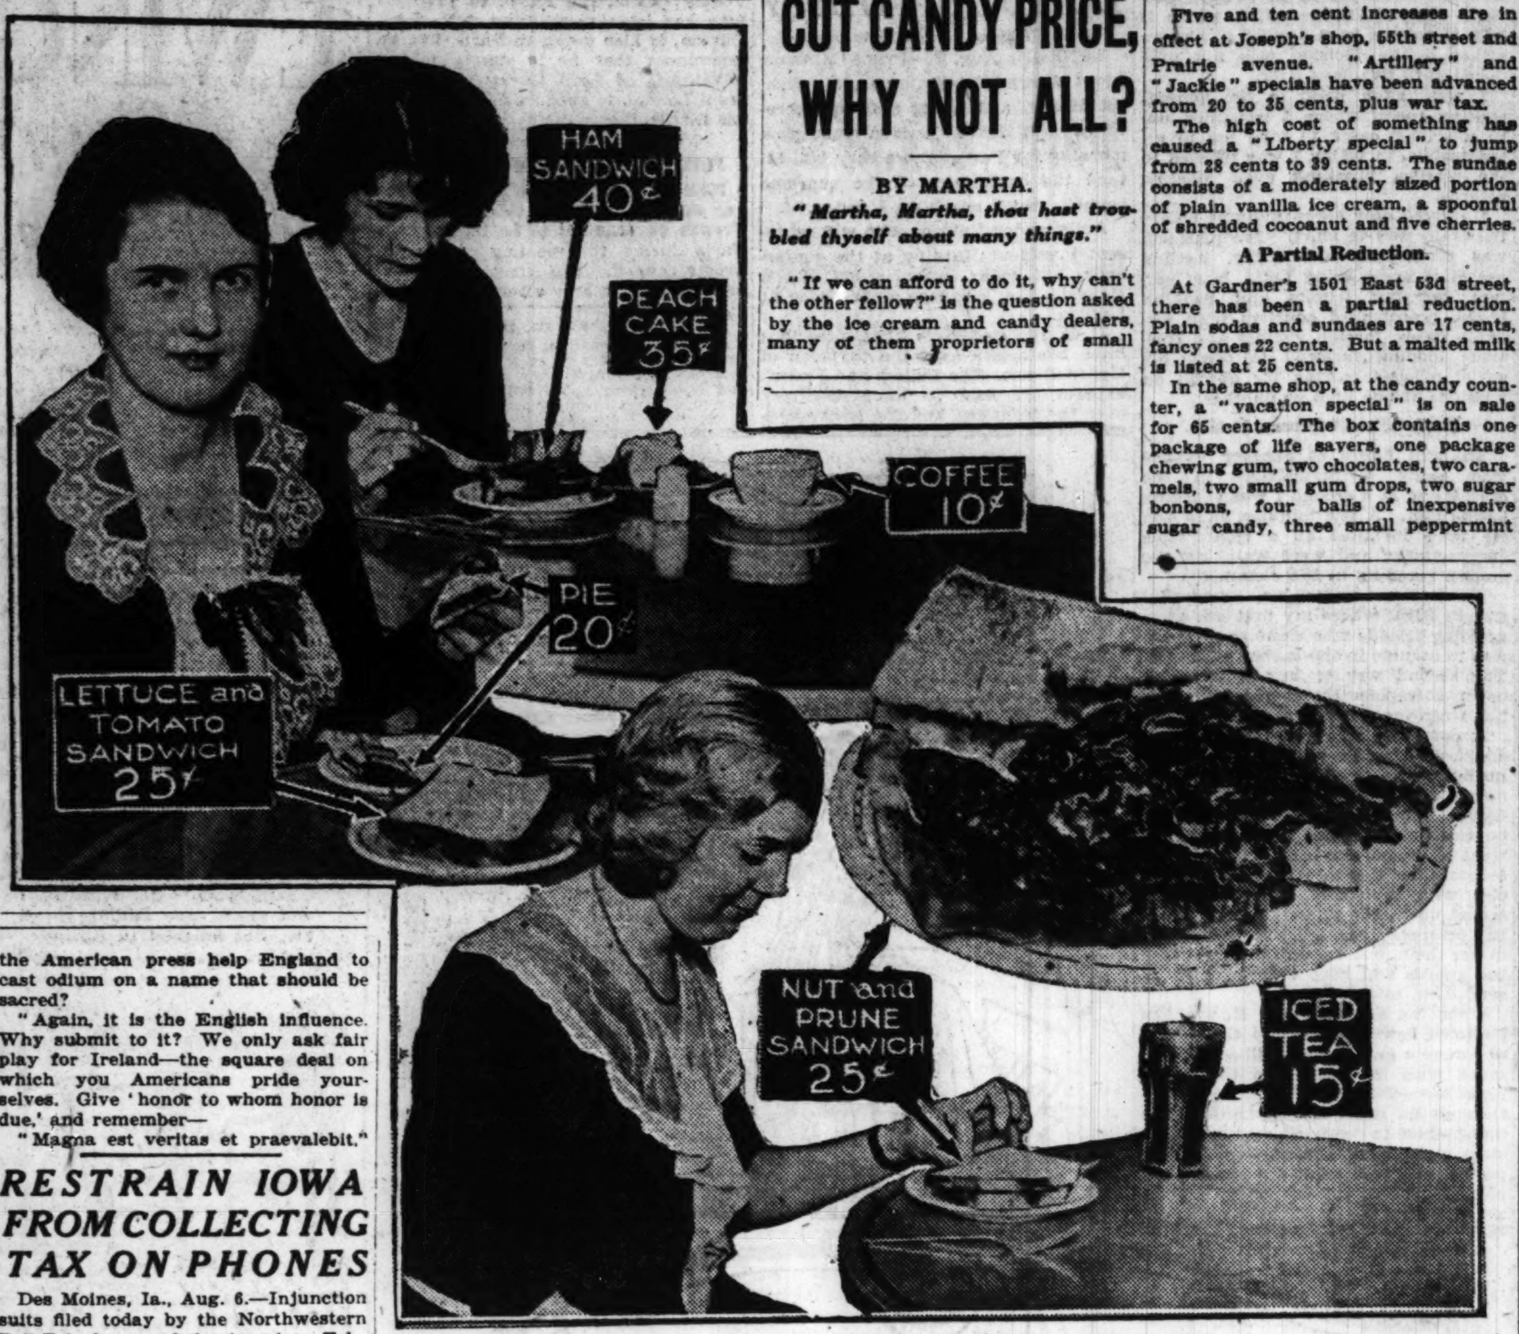
AND SHE MUST EAT



She may eat, she may drink, but how can the "poor working girl" be merry when she pays the bill for her daily luncheon?

In the upper picture we have a simple baked ham sandwich for 40 cents, a 35 cent slice of peach cake, and a cup of coffee for 10 cents. And the check reads 85 cents.

That thin slab which the girl in the upper picture is holding represents just one dime, of half of a 20 cent piece of apple pie. The lettuce and tomato sandwich cost her 25 cents.

It's costing the girl in the lower picture 40 cents to drink a glass of iced tea and eat a slim nut and prune sandwich.

Not a nut can be found in the nut and prune sandwich pictured in the insert. With prunes at 15 cents a pound, and fifty-eight to a pound, the four used in the sandwich couldn't have been so expensive. Yet the sandwich sells for 25 cents.

SOME SHOPS CAN CUT CANDY PRICE, WHY NOT ALL?

BY MARTHA.

"Martha, Martha, thou hast troubled thyself about many things."

"If we can afford to do it, why can't the other fellow?" is the question asked by the ice cream and candy dealers, many of them proprietors of small stores, who have cut prices recently.

"We put in a reduced price list last week," said Miss Daise Emshwiller, manager of the I. C. Pharmacy, 1536 East 53d street, "and our sales increased almost immediately.

"Ice cream sells for 13 cents plus war tax; sundaes and sodas are 17 ecnts. The store serves an excellent ham sandwich for 10 cents. A cup of coffee is a nickel."

Starts Price Cut.

"When we opened our store two months ago," said Mrs. W. A. Hicks of 744 East 63d street, "we knew that a general reduction of prices was inevitable. We didn't want to be the first to start to slash prices; but somebody had to start."

As a result of the Hicks' menu, which lists all sodas and sundaes at 17 cents, and coca-cola and root beer at 6 cents, many other stores in the vicinity are lowering their prices.

But the south side is not all rosy for the soda loving public.

Five and ten cent increases are in effect at Joseph's shop, 55th street and Prairie avenue. "Artillery" and "Jackie" specials have been advanced from 20 to 35 cents, plus war tax.

The high cost of something has caused a "Liberty special" to jump from 28 cents to 39 cents. The sundae consists of a moderately sized portion of plain vanilla ice cream, a spoonful of shredded cocoanut and five cherries.

A Partial Reduction.

At Gardner's 1501 East 53d street, there has been a partial reduction. Plain sodas and sundaes are 17 cents, fancy ones 22 cents. But a malted milk is listed at 25 cents.

In the same shop, at the candy counter, a "vacation special" is on sale for 65 cents. The box contains one package of life savers, one package chewing gum, two chocolates, two caramels, two small gum drops, two sugar bonbons, four balls of inexpensive sugar candy, three small peppermint lozenges, a few Jordan almonds, one nut cluster and a handful of "filler."

Hagley's, 132 East Garfield boulevard, has reduced fancy sundaes. Plain sundaes and sodas are still 22 cents. A patty of sugar and pecans is sold for 6 cents.

Girl Mimics Old Woman for Voyage to Gotham

New York, Aug. 6.—[Speciau.]—Wearing an "old Mother Hubbard" to shoo away men, pretty Rosalia Burdriak, 16, is here en route from Galicia to Chicago.

She has been traveling two months to get to her brothers and sister at 9211 Woodlawn avenue, Chicago.

"My mother thought if I traveled as an old woman I would be safe," she said. "I have been on my journey two months, but I feel safe now that I have landed in America.

"I feel silly, too, with the long skirts. Just wait till I get to Chicago."

District Attorney Hunts '19th Hole' at Kenosha Club

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—District Attorney Frank Symmonds is investigating the charges made recently by Ald. Fred Palmgren that there was a "nineteenth hole" at the Kenosha Country club golf course while the Wisconsin state tournament was played here. Palmgren charged there was a professional mixer of drinks and that the "nineteenth hole" was the most popular place on the course.

KOLZE'S MOTHER TELLS OF THREAT BY MRS. DEMMER

Mrs. Elizabeth Marwood of Bensenville, mother of Mrs. Fred Kolze, one of three persons in whose bodies arsenic was found during the investigation of the Schiller Park poison mystery, yesterday told Coroner Hoffman of a conversation she had held with Mrs. John Demmer shortly before Fred Kolze's death.

"My daughter died eight years ago, Mrs. Marwood said. "Nine months before that John Demmer had died. Three weeks ago Fred Kolze, my daughter's husband died.

"I had a talk with Mrs. Demmer, who acted as housekeeper for Fred, about three weeks before he died. They had bene quarrling. Sh told me then that if she wanted to make it her business, she could tell Kolze what had caused his wife's death.

Tells of Veiled Threat.

"Just prior to Mr. Kolze's death I asked her how he was getting along. She said if he didn't mend his ways he wouldn't have long to live."

Arsenic was found in the bodies of each of the deceased persons. Just how this poison entered their systems is not known. Elmer Kolze, foster son of Fred Kolze, holds the theory that the poison was contained in embalming fluids.

Assistant State's Attorney James E. McShane and Coroner Hoffman believe the poison entered the bodies through the mouth In an attempt to clear up this question, Coroner Hoffman yesterday exhumed the body of Mrs. Lena Kolze, mother of the dead Fred Kolze. Following a hasty examination of her body, the coroner hazarded the opinion that she had died from unnatural causees.

May Exhume Fifth Body.

If arsenic is found in her vital organs, another body which was buried by Geils & Kirkhoff, the undertakers who embalmed the three alleged poison victims, will be exhumed. Should this fifth body contain arsenic, the undertakers will be grilled to see if they have violated the state law against the use of arsenic in embalming fluids.

Mrs. Demer was questioned repeatedly last week by Attorney McShane and police from the office of the chief investigator. She denied causing Kolze's death, but she did admit that he had told her he gave something to his wife a few days before her death.

Rents Reduced?

NO! Rents will not come down this fall. In fact, every indication is that the majority of landlords will again boost rents still higher. The crowds that will return to the city after summering in the country will make the demand greater than ever, and the law of supply and demand will operate with a vengeance.

You Can Reduce Your Rent

Be your own landlord. In sixty days you can build a modest little home in any number of choice locations in and around the city. If you do not know how to go about it, or need advice as to the way to finance it,

HEAR THESE MEN—FREE
Monday, August 8th, and Friday, August 12th, at 3 P. M.

Every angle of the tenants' problem will not only be discussed by these speakers, but all questions will be freely answered.

J. R. Patterson, President of the Chicago Tenants' Protective League, will be the opening speaker, with "Plans for the Fall Rental Campaign" as his subject.

W. H. Junge will speak on "How to Build Cheaply."

A. E. Jessurun, Secretary of the League; E. R. Hammond, former Treasurer of the League, and Representative Sidney Lyon, who sponsored the rent commission bill in State house last spring, will also speak. The public is cordially invited to attend these free meetings, held at the Building Material Exhibit, Home Complete, 6th floor of the Leiter Building, State, Van Buren and Congress Streets.

YANKEE WOMAN DESCRIBES LIFE IN RUSS PRISON

Mrs. Harrison Says Reds Treated Her Kindly.

the Associated Press and to collect material for newspaper articles.

Arrested and Questioned.

I was not interfered with in any way until the renewal of active fighting on the Polish front, in April, when I was arrested and detained in the Tcheka prison for a two days' examination and a further investigation of my papers.

Then I was released and was allowed to work undisturbed for some months in June, accompanying the members of the British Labor delegation into the Volga district, which today is the center of the famine area.

But then came the end of such activities for me, for on Oct. 20 I was again arrested, among the charges being, first, that I had undertaken, after the departure of the British and French Red Cross, to send packages of food to the English and American prisoners; secondly, that I had entered Russia without the customary leave required for foreigners, and. thirdly, that I had associated with persons hostile to the soviet.

Friendly to Americans.

After two of the examinations it became apparent that no formal charges would be preferred against me and no prosecution started for some time at least. This, I believe, was the Tcheka's attitude toward all the American prisoners, due to the soviet's desire from the outset to enter into negotiations with America which would lead to the release of the latter country's nationals without trial.

I received the first intimation of this fact in January, when I was told that negotiations regarding the concessions for the Sakhalin properties were progressing, and that if they were successful we would all be sent home shortly. But there was no further information for several weeks, when I was told that nothing more had come of the matter.

The head of the American section of the foreign office called me before him only three times to receive letters from home, and twice I had a visit from a representative of the foreign office. He came to inquire as to my health and to ask if I wanted anything.

Made Request for Bath.

Once I told him I would like a bath, for I had had none for several months. Imagine my amazement when that same night at 2 o'clock a soldier came and ordered me out of bed and escorted me to a very comfortable room in which there were actually soap, towels, and hot water.

Late in April this concrete proposition was made to me—that I write to the state department or any one else in America that I might select, stating that the soviet was willing to release all American prisoners on the basis of an exchange of the Russian communists imprisoned in America, or even on the American government's formal request accompanied by the assurance of a speedy opening of negotiations for the resumption of trade. This I did not feel that I could do, and there the matter ended.

Goes to Prison Hospital.

On June 6, my health being considerably impaired as the result of a bad cold contracted in the winter, and from which I had never entirely recovered, I was transferred to the prison for women, which was destined to be my home until my release, and where I was made much more comfortable than I had been in the prison itself. Judging from the promptness with which the Tcheka physician granted any request for my relief, I might have been sent to the hospital much sooner had I asked to be, but I had wanted to stick it out as long as possible to see what would happen in the ordinary routine. Also, I got rather proud after a while of being the "oldest inhabitant," for usually people only remain for a few weeks in that special section of the Tcheka.

Thrill in Senator's Arrival.

I had had absolutely no intimation that Senator France or any one else from my home was in Russia until I was brought out to face him in the Novenski prison on July 23. Early that afternoon I received a summons to the commandant's office, and there I found the head of the American bureau of the Tcheka.

"You'll be surprised to know who is here to see you," he said, at the same time throwing open the door to an inner room, with a fine dramatic gesture.

There stood Senator France. I was dazed for a moment, and I remember thinking, with a curious inconsequence, coming at such a time that it was so good to see a genuine American suit of clothes again. Then came sane recollection again and the thought flashed across my mind: "Maybe he had come to take me home." But this glorious thought was promptly suppressed as being conducive, possibly to unbecoming behavior.

Tries to Be Calm.

Steadying my voice with a great effort, I asked as composedly as possible when he had arrived in Russia and where he was staying. It was as casual as a meeting in the senate lobby. But the senator went straight to the point. He told me in a few words that he had seen Lenin, Litvinoff, and Tchitcherin about my case, and if all went well he hoped to take me home on the following Monday. The talk with the senator was a short one, but it kept me busy thinking until Monday, and then as I had heard nothing more I resolutely put this wonderful hope out of my mind and returned dully to my prison duty.

Wednesday evening I had already gone to bed, when the head of the American bureau appeared alone and ordered me to pack my bags and accompany him to the Tcheka, telling me that my case would be brought up for final action in the morning. But he gave me no hint of the probable outcome.

Refuses to Let Her Go.

The hospital nurse, however, refused to let me out at night, so he left, promising to send for me in the morning. But it was just about half an hour later when the door was abruptly thrown open and in came two prison guards and a woman attendant, who without a word of explanation began to search my belongings.

"What does this mean?" I gasped when I had somewhat recovered from my astonishment, for, though they had frequently made such searches in the Tcheka prison, they rarely did so in the Novenski.

"It means that you are to be deported in the morning," said one, a genial looking soldier. The other was a severe personage in a black leather coat. (This is the Tcheka agents' insignia of office.) He annihilated the speaker with a look.

Could Sleep No More.

It may well be believed that there was no more sleep for me that night and I spent the early morning hours between hope and incredulity. At two o'clock came a motor to bear me to Tcheka and for the first time in nearly a year I was whirled through the streets of Moscow at the breakneck speed affected by all Russian chauffeurs.

Once at the Tchheka, I was admitted to the room for prisoners awaiting commitment or examination, and there I was kept for more than an hour, with the thought of the long threatened trial hanging over me, but, in spite of all previous disappointments, unable to down the memory of the interrupted conversation with the genial guard the night before.

Finally my name was called and I was taken by an armed guard to the American bureau, where I found not judges but the chief awaiting me with an insignificant looking bit of paper, very like a department store check at home, but in reality an order for the release of Citizen Harrison, Marguerita Bernardova.

The chief told me that Senator France had not left for home on Monday after all, and that I was to leave with him for Riga that evening.

In a few moments my former examiner, Moghilevski, came in to say a pleasant "good-by," telling me at the same time that all the other Americans would be released shortly. He said nothing, however, of Secretary Hoover's offer of famine relief, which it had, of course, been decided to accept, although the decision was not published until two days later.

I was taken back to the general waiting room, where I remained until a soldier came to take me to an automobile, in which I was whirled to the station, breaking even Moscow records.

I arrived only seven minutes before the train was to start. The platform was filled with a bustling, jostling crowd of home going Letts, busy porters carrying trunks and packing boxes, preoccupied couriers with dispatch cases, foreign visitors and Russians bidding farewell to some big soviet officials leaving for abroad on missions of one kind or another.

Finds Senator France Easily.

The tall figure of Senator France was easily distinguishable in the crowd, and in a second I was standing beside him. A few minutes more and we were installed in a comfortable compartment and were watching the station receding in the distance.

We had a comfortable, uneventful trip to Riga, where my first act after greeting friends who came to meet me was to indulge in the luxury of a bath. The second was to buy a traveling outfit, to replace the costume which I had worn for many months.

It consisted of a very dirty suit of chaka cloth and a man's pongee shirt made in the prison, with a pair of men's shoes, sent by the Czecho-Slovak Red Cross. I was pretty short on clothes and toilet articles when I went to prison, for I was only permitted to take the most necessary articles with me there, the rest being sealed up in the guest house where I had been staying. I did not have time to get them, but am still in hopes that the guards will keep their promise to send them to me.

Since my arrival there, Russia has assumed new policies, and the people of America and Europe will soon be in touch with the masses of the soviet republic. The fact that America, through its relief administration, has undertaken to feed the starving Russians makes it of vital interest for our people to know what the conditions, political, social, and economic, in Russia actually are.

ALLIED COUNCIL DELEGATES LEAVE LONDON TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Prime Minister Lloyd George, Lord Curzon, Sir Robert Horne, and a big staff of secretaries will leave London tomorrow morning for Paris, where they will attend the conference of the supreme council, which opens on Monday.

Ambassador Harvey, who will represent President Harding at the conference, left today, as also did Baron Hayashi, the Japanese ambassador at London.

It is reported here that a serious hitch has arisen over the partition of Upper Silesia. The British and French experts are said to have disagreed over the frontiers, and the whole matter will be referred to the council, where there will be a showdown between the French and British viewpoints.

Adly Pasha, the Egyptian premier, who has been negotiating with Lord Curzon, is also going to Paris, but he announces that he is simply taking advantage of Lord Curzon's absence from London to spend a few days with his family.

HARVEY GUEST OF FRANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Ambassador Harvey has accepted the invitation of the French government to be its guest in Paris during the meeting of the supreme council. The American ambassador is due to arrive this evening.

1921 IS REWARDING FIGHTERS

YANK CAPTIVES CROSS RUSSIAN BORDER MONDAY

Russ Famine Conditions Worse—Moscow.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—All the American prisoners in Moscow and Petrograd will be sent across the Russian borden by Monday at th elatest, according to a message received here today by Walter L. Brown, European director of the American relief administration, from Leo Kameneff, chairman of the Russian relief committee.

The telegram from M. Kameneff, dated Moscow, Aug. 5, follows:

"All Americans detained at Moscow, Petrograd, in prisons and the camps will be sent over the frontier tomorrow, or by Aug. 8 at the latest. The delay is due to unavoidable formalities connected with granting free pardons. The central authorities are unaware of any Americans being interned,or in prison in provincial places, but orders have been given for the release of Americans if there are any.

Plan Riga Conference.

"M. Litvinoff, a member of the all-Russian commission for combatting famine, is leaving for Riga on Aug. 8, and is due to arrive here on Aug. 10. He is authorized to discuss with you and to arrange all details for American relief in Russia and to sign an agreement. He proposes to meet with you Wednesday at the Russian legation at Riga."

If this arrangement for the meeting should be unsatisfactory to Mr. Brown, the message suggests that he "please suggest to M. Litvinoff some other time or place."

Mr. Brown will leave here for Riga tomorrow morning.

The soviet authorities have decided to send three special delegations abroad on behalf of starving Russia, declares a Reval message forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph agency from Copenhagen.

Suspend Propaganda.

Meanwhile, asserts thed ispatch, the soviet representatives abroad have been ordereo to suspend propagnda work. It also is reported that orders for machinery and other goods will be held up, the money remitted being used for the purchase of food.

Famine Conditions Worse.

RIGA, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—The general public in Russia so far is apparently ignorant of the fact that the question of the release of American prisoners is involved in famine relief, as Moscow newspapers received here today make no mention of the recent notes of Herbert Hoover and Secretary of State Hughes.

These newspapers, however, report that famine conditions are growing worse, particularly among children, 300,000 of whom in the Volga district are reported by M. Lunarcharsky, a leader in the soviet relief measures, to have been abandoned by their parents to the care of the state.

William D. Haywood, American Industrial Worker of the World leader, who recently escaped to Russia, is still in Moscow, and apparently has changed his mind about returning to America to surrender to the authorities, according to an arrival here who saw Haywood a few days ago.

EXECUTE TAX DODGERS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, Aug. 6.—An intercepted soviet wireless message states that the Mariupol government authorities have executed several rich peasants who had hidden grain to dodge food taxes. In the Saratof district bandit bands are reported to be committing depredations and in several cases they burned what little was left of the crops.

The soviet government is making examples of farmers who refuse to pay a produce tax.

WHAT RUSSIA NEEDS.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—One million three hundred million kilograms [approximately 2,880,000,000 pounds] of wheat are needed to relieve the famine stricken people of ten provinces of Russia, according ot estimates published today by the Populaire, an organ of the extreme left socialists.

The Populaire itemizes its estimates as follows:

Rural populations, 48,000,000 poods; cities, 17,000,000 poods; for seeding purposes, 15,000,000 poods—total 80,000,000 poods or 1,300,000,00 kilograms.

At the average price of 10 francs per hundred kilograms the newspaper estimates the cost of delivering the wheat into Russia would be 1,30,000,000 francs, and would necessitate 400 ships, or 150,000 freight cars, for transportations.

Bandits Hold Up Cashier, Rob South Dakota Bank

Mitchell, S. D., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Two robbers, unmasked, but carrying revolvers, entered the Farmers State bank at Fulton, twelve miles east of here, this morning, stood E. J. Branch, cashier, up against the wall and took between $500 and $1,000 in cash.

PLANS MEETINGS OF TENANTS TO FIGHT LANDLORDS

Profiteering landlords have adopted a new dodge to circumvent the law, according to A. E. Jesserun, secretary of the Chicago Tenants' Protective league, who is arranging for two loop meetings to combat the landlords. According to Mr. Jesserun the landlords are no longer making their demands in writing for increased rentals.

"The sixty day notices no longer give the amount of the increases in writing," he said. "Instead in the majority of cases they simply read to the effect that 'Your lease has expired. Come in and talk to us about it.'

"The intent of this is simply to eliminate evidence of exorbitant increases, which the tenants might use as a plea for the full benefit of the six months' stay of eviction law passed by the last legislature."

AUSTRIAN JAIL SOON TO HOUSE PRINCESS MARIE

Mishaps Still Harassing Hapless Hapsburgs.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

PRINCESS ELIZABETH MARIE.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—According to a message from Vienna, Princess Elizabeth Marie, granddaughter of the late Emperor Francis Joseph has just been condemned by a police magistrate to ten days' imprisonment. She is the only daughter of the late emperor's only son, Rudolph, who perished in the mysterious tragedy of Mayerling.

The story of Princess Marie, which has ended in the police court condemnation, began nearly twenty years ago with a romantic love affair. At the time the princess was barely 19 she had given her heart to Prince Othon of Windischgraetz. Although a prince, he was neither of imperial nor royal ancestry.

Emperor Frowns on Suit.

The old emperor, when asked to give his consent, refused point blank. There had already been too many irregular and morganatic marriages in his troublesome family.

But the princess was wise in her generation. She set to work to win for her love affair the approval of her aunt, Archduchess Valerie, and of that famous lady, Dame Katherine Schratt, who comforted the emperor's declining years.

Together the three women at last won the old man over. He gave his consent, and on Jan. 23, 1902, the princess was married.

War and ruin of their country saw also the ruin of happiness for the Austrian couple.

Divorce proceedings were begun some time ago and the court ruled that pending a decision Prince Othon should keep the four children of the marriage in his charge.

It was this that led to the princess' condemnation in police court. She refused to surrender her children and barricaded herself in her house with a bodyguard of big dogs. When an officer came to demand surrender of the children it was thus, the Vienna message says, the princess greeted him:

"You are a pig and you have been sent here by a pig. If you try to get in I will give you to my dogs to eat."

Sentenced for Contempt.

The bailiff lodged complaint and the princess was summoned to appear before the court. She replied to the summons with a letter in which she wrote that what she had said was even much more moderate than what she thought.

In her absence the magistrate passed sentence of ten days' imprisonment for contempt of court, and in Vienna the only subject of conversation is whether or not the princess when, if ever, she is arrested, will be sent to jail.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In THE TRIBUNE of last Wednesday the statement was made that L. B. Congdon, village marshal of Antioch, Ill., who was discharged for arresting William Jennings Bryan, never heard of Mr. Bryan. This is denied by Mr. Congdon.

An item yesterday said that the Rev. Joseph Kearney was struck by an automobile driven by Harry Spillman, 2758 West Lake street, who was reported booked for assault with a deadly weapon and driving while intoxicated. J. L. Jones, 1960 North Clark street, was the driver. It was Mr. Spillman who, coming up in another machine, carried the injured priest to the hospital.

In the Pageant of Progress story yesterday, it was stated that Henry O. Shepard would place a wreath for the Old Time Printers' association in memory of Ensign Ronan. The correct name is Henry O. Shepard II.

Farmer Finds Rattler in Oats, Chokes It to Death

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—There was a shock in a shock of oats for Charles Krueger of Half Day when he stopped to pick up a sheaf of the grain today while thrashing. He was confronted by a rattlesnake ready for business. Krueger reached down, grasped the snake by the neck and ended its career. Yes, he wore gloves, but he didn't have on a snakeproof shirt or trousers.

GERMAN 'PENNY' SAILORS DESERT TO GET INTO U. S.

Startling Tale of Evasion of Immigration Act.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—With Germans shipping as seamen at 1 cent a month on American bound vessels and deserting at every point, existing laws to the contrary notwithstanding, the statement of Secretary of Labor Davis in regard to this and other violations of the immigration law under cover of the seaman's act, brings to the front once more a condition against which immigration officials have heretofore protested in vain.

The number of deserting seamen in 1920, according to the report of the commissioner general of immigration, was 13,543, as against 3,888 in 1919, in spite of the fact that 22,738 vessels were boarded by immigration officials, 288,710 identification cards were issued, 1,775 seamen were found afflicted with loathsome or contagious diseases, and removed to hospitals for treatment, or permitted to depart on the vessels on which they came.

Warning to Country.

Warning of the problem afforded by inadmissible aliens arriving as seamen and deserting their ships was given by the commissioner general in his report for 1919.

Formerly a deserting seaman was subject to arrest and return to his ship on application of the ship master to the port authorities. Abrogation of this provision in the treaties between the United States and foreign countries following the passage of the La Follette seaman's act was promptly taken advantage of by aliens arriving as seamen in every port.

"Much good has resulted to seamen under the new order of things," said the commissioner general in his report for 1919. "The right to desert their ships, however, makes it possible for them to enter the country without examination by immigration officers. The seamen's law provides that seamen desiring to leave their calling and remain in the country must present themselves for proper examination under the immigration law.

Undesirables Getting In.

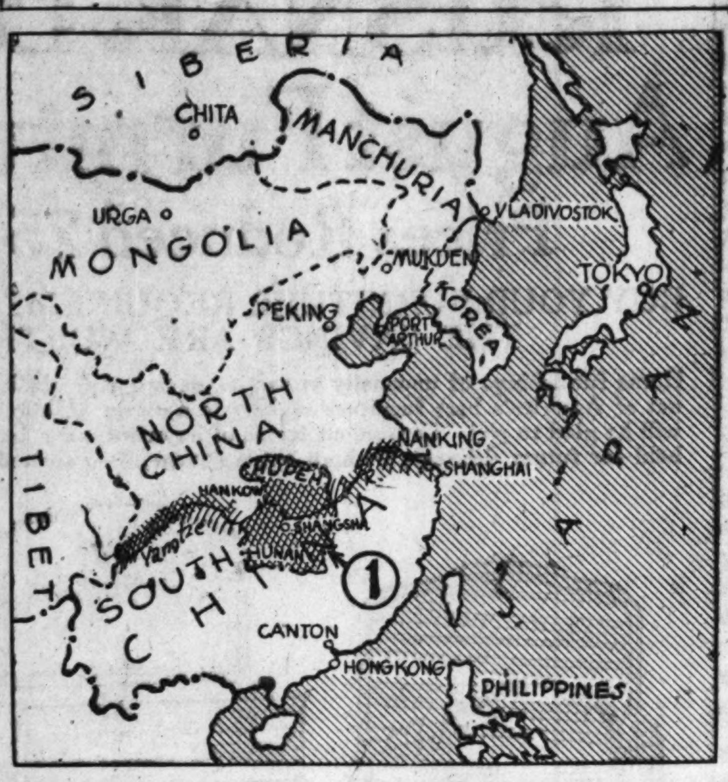
"Many do this, but more do not, and while many of the latter doubtless are admissible and would be regularly admitted on examination, it is believed that numbers of the diseased, anarchistic and otherwise excludable classes choose this method of gaining illegal entry into the country.

"The year's experience," he says in his 1920 report, "has demonstrated the correctness of the oft repeated view that reasonable restrictions could be enforced successfully and in fairness to all concerned in the cases of alien seamen. Experience has developed certain particulars in which the law is not sufficiently detailed or explicit. The follow up system is recommended to apprehend all those who violate the law and apply to them the test of the same."

How Law Is Dodged.

That registration alone is ineffective, either in the case of alien seamen or other aliens, is demonstrated by the fact that in spite of a registration accompanied by photographs the number of seamen who entered the country in violation of the law last year exceeded by 10,155 the number who remained in the country unlawfully after deserting in 1919.

CIVIL WAR IN CHINA



CHINA appears again to be in the throes of civil war. The forces of the province of Hunan, affiliated with South China, or the Canton government, and those of Hupeh, representing the north, are reported engaged in battle along a ten mile front. The Hunanese had invaded Hupeh and Gen. Wang Chan-Yuen thereupon ordered the invaders attacked. The general is inspecting commissioner of both provinces, but Hunan had refused to recognize his authority. The Hunanese invasion is ascribed to a move to oust him. It was said the Hunanese expected reinforcements from the Yangtse territory.

FEWER JOBLESS, MORE INDUSTRY, BERLIN REPORTS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—An improvement in industry, a decrease in unemployment, and the placing of new orders from America and other nations on account of the drop in the mark exchange are the features of the present economic situation in Germany as revealed in the government's monthly survey.

The textile and clothing industry, the building trades and agriculture called for many laborers during July, leaving the number officially reported as jobless at 657,000, as compared with 742,000 a month ago.

The labor unions report unemployment decreased, there being 169 applicants for every 100 jobs instead of 175 as previously.

The steel and iron market, which experienced an upward trend during June, continues to show improvement. Iron prices have ranged upward 300 to 400 marks a ton.

Federal Oil Suit Against California et Al. Settled

Visalia, Cal., Aug. 6.—The suit of the United States against the state of California, the Buena Vista Land Development company, and the Honolulu Consolidated Oil company, has been settled by stipulation among the parties concerned, according to official advices received at the Visalia Land office today from Washington. The action involved title to many million dollars' worth of oil lands.

Meager details of the settlement received here indicated that California had relinquished its claims to eighteen sections of Elk Hills oil land, valued at between $20,000,000 and $35,000,000, ceding it to the government.

CHILD SCALDED TO DEATH.

Wahpeton, S. D., Aug. 6.—The 2 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ruby died a few hours after being scalded by accidentally falling into a tub of hot water.

U. S. INDUSTRY COMING BACK TO NORMALCY

Employment Figures Are Growing Better.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Industrial employment conditions in the United States are not yet on a pre-war basis, but they are working that way.

Although nearly three years have passed since the world war armistice, American industry is still struggling to get back to a normal condition wherein factories boomed and there was plenty of work for all.

Statistics for thirteen selected manufacturing industries and in bituminous coal mining show that in June of this year there was decreased employment in all lines except in the wool industry, as compared with June, 1920. There was in the woolen industry an increase of 3.9 per cent in the number of persons employed in June, 1921, over June, 1920.

The most important decreases in employment shown by these comparative figures were 4.6 per cent in car building and repairing, 39.6 per cent in iron and steel, and 37.5 per cent in automobiles.

Picks Up Over May.

Compared with June, 1920, the amount of the pay rolls in June, 1921, shows decreases in thirteen of the fourteen industries. The one increase reported—8.3 per cent—appears in the woolen industry. The largest decreases appearing during this period are 65.0 per cent in iron and steel, 47.7 per cent in paper, 40.6 per cent in leather, and 39.7 per cent in automobiles.

Comparative data for June, 1921, and May, 1921, show that in ten industries there were increases in the number of persons on the pay roll in June, as compared with May, and in four a decrease. The largest increases, 8.9 per cent, 7.2 per cent, and 5 per cent, are shown in men's ready to wear clothing, leather, and bituminous coal, respectively. A decrease of 5.7 per cent appears in iron and steel and one of 2.4 per cent in car building and repairing.

When comparing June, 1921, with May, 1921, eleven industries show an increase in the amount of money paid to employés and three show a decrease. The most important increases are 11.8 per cent in coal, 9.2 per cent in men's ready made clothing, and 8.8 per cent in leather. Iron and steel show a percentage decrease of 17.5.

Some Wage Reductions.

During the period May 15 to June 15 there were wage changes made by some of the establishments in principal industries as follows:

IRON AND STEEL—All the men in three establishments were reduced approximately 21 per cent in wages. In twenty-two plants wage reductions of 20 per cent were reported, affecting the entire force in twenty-one plants and 94 per cent of the force in the remaining plant. Eight mills reported a general wage rate cut of 15 per cent.

AUTOMOBILES—A wage rate decrease of 10 per cent was reported by three plants, affecting all employés in the first plant, 65 per cent of the employés in the second plant, and 36 per cent of the employés in the third plant. One factory made a 7.2 per cent decrease to 40 per cent of the force. When comparing the per capita earnings for June with those for May, a decrease of 2.5 per cent is shown.

CAR BUILDING AND REPAIRING—More time was worked during the pay roll period, and the per capita earnings show an increase of 3.7 per cent, when May and June figures are compared.

COTTON MANUFACTURING—The wages of all employés in one plant were decreased 8¾ per cent. The per capita earnings for June show an increase of 1 per cent when compared with the per capita earnings for May.

HOSIERY AND UNDERWEAR—An increase of 10 per cent was granted by two mills, affecting 25 per cent of the employés in the first mill and 2 per cent in the second mill. A decrease of 22½ per cent was reported by one concern, but the number affected was not stated.

WOOLEN—There were no changes in rates of wages reported for this industry. The per capita earnings show an increase of 1.3 per cent when comparing May and June figures.

Report as to Silk.

SILK—A decrease of 10 per cent to 50 per cent of the force was reported by one mill. The per capita earnings for June are 1.5 per cent less than those for May.

MEN'S READY MADE CLOTHING—Four per cent of the men in one plant were granted an increase of 10 per cent. All of the men in another plant were decreased 15 per cent. In one establishment employés earning over $30 per week had wage reductions ranging from 5 per cent to 10 per cent.

LEATHER—A decrease of 18 per cent was reported by one tannery, but the percentage of employés affected was not stated.

Shoe Business Improves.

BOOTS AND SHOES—An increase of 11 per cent was granted to 3 per cent of the men in one factory. Business conditions have slightly improved and the per capita earnings show an increase of 2.1 per cent when May and June figures are compared.

PAPER—A 10 per cent decrease was made by one establishment, affecting 83 per cent of the men.

CIGARS—A wage rate decrease of about 15 per cent was made to 80 per cent of the men in one factory.

BITUMINOUS COAL—A decrease in rates of wages was reported by three mines, but no further data were furnished.

What a Car! What a Price!

$900 Reduction on "C-48" Touring

Other Models Reduced Proportionately

The makers of Westcott, the Car with a Longer Life, propose to take the lead in value-giving! The new prices are astonishing in themselves—the value in the car makes the new prices almost beyond belief! For example, a great big, roomy, luxurious seven passenger car of 125-inch wheel-base—equipped with Continental, Timken, Delco, Fedders, Warner, Borg & Beck, Gemmer, Willard—with every possible comfort and convenience—all this for $2090.00! A wonderful five passenger touring similarly complete, for $1890.00! Other models correspondingly reduced. Do you know of any other such values? Do they not demand your immediate inspection, comparison and personal judgment?

To further understand the startling nature of this price reduction, consider again the "C-48" 7-passenger touring which one year ago was $3190. At present it is $2990. The new cut will bring it down to $2090—a saving of $900, and a total reduction of $1100 in one year! The "C-38" 5-passenger touring was $2690, is now $2290, and on September 2 will be $1890—a saving of $400—and a total reduction of $800 in one year! Other savings are proportionate, running up in size to a cut of $1100 on the "C-48" Sedan, which makes a total one-year decrease of $1300 on this wonderful car!

These Are Bottom Prices!

No man can study the car at these figures without deciding that each and every model throughout the list is to be greatly underpriced. He cannot fail to conclude that these are rock bottom prices—that he can in fact buy with full assurance that he will get as low a price as he would secure by waiting. These quotations will be possible only because of a most fortuitous combination of circumstances, that are far from likely ever to occur again. If you know automobiles, the quickest way to show yourself that Westcott is the great buy of the day is to check over every other car at anywhere near the Westcott in specifications, size, power, equipment and finish—and just compare the prices!

A Better Car Too!

Far from being a depreciated car, brought out cheaply to make a showing, the Westcott today is a better automobile than the famous Westcotts which have been so much advertised by their appreciative owners.

Steel, leather and other materials are of higher quality, and labor is able and willing to produce better results, than has been the case for a long time past!

Not a nickel's worth of quality, nor a single item of equipment, has been taken off the Westcott. It still includes thermostatic control of motor temperature, radimeter, electric cigar lighter, clock, spot-light socket, windshield cleaner, gasoline gauge on dash, cowl ventilator, tonneau light, etc. It is the same distinctive, long-lived, dependable car that it has been for a dozen years—only more so!

Standard Units

Westcott owners know that Westcott always has built and always will build quality cars. Everybody knows that no human power could induce Timken to make poor axles, Continental to cheat on their motors, Delco to reduce the quality of their electrical systems, and the other makers of tried, proven, standard parts to agree upon a program of deceiving the public. It couldn't be done! It is utterly inconceivable that a car containing these units can be anything but dependable and satisfactory—the best of its kind.

And in this connection there are two points of extreme importance to remember! They are: (1) that Westcott does not use just one or two of these standard units for talking purposes, but all of them, big and little, in every part of the car; and (2) that, to honest units, Westcott adds twelve years of experience in combining these parts into a completely satisfactory car that lasts long and performs wonderfully during all the years of its long life.

May We Demonstrate?

Any man would be proud to have the handsomely distinctive Westcott seen standing at his door. It is an uncommon car. It bespeaks the taste and discrimination of its owner. If you are not thoroughly familiar with the Westcott—or if you are!—we should like to give you an early demonstration. A phone call or a personal visit will be appreciated whether your interest is active or casual. We shall be glad to give you any information. A call today will put you under no obligation and may lead to your driving the most satisfactory car you ever had, at a price that will not be bettered for many a season to come.

BORDER REPORTS SPURGIN VISITS IN NEW MEXICO

Then Cable Has Fugitive Banker in Porto Rico.

Information that Warren C. Spurgin, absconding head of the Michigan Avenue Trust company, has fled from Chihuahua, Mexico, to the adjoining state of Sonora, and that he frequently crosses the border to Nogales, N. M., reached District Attorney Clyne yesterday.

Mr. Clyne said Spurgin may be in custody before many hours. Warrants for him have been sent to Nogales, El Paso, Laredo and other points on the boundary line.

Mr. Clyne declared that if Spurgin is not arrested in one of the border cities he will ask Washington to negotiate with the Obregon government for the surrender of the fugitive.

Reported in Porto Rico.

A telegram received late yesterday by Ben Newmark, chief investigator for State's Attorney Crowe, suggested the possibility that Spurgin may have escaped to Porto Rico.

The message came from the chief of police of San Juan, Porto Rico, via Maj. Gen. McIntyre of the United States army. It asked for a description and the personal habits of Warren Harrigan, Chicago bank defaulter. It is believed a mistake was made in cabling the name. Chief Newmark wired Spurgin's description and the amount of the reward.

Booze Warrant for Spurgin.

A federal warrant for Spurgin, charging violation of the prohibition statutes, was issued yesterday by United States Commissioner James R. Glass. The complain by Assistant United States District Attorney Roscoe C. Andrews. is based on the discovery of more than $10,000 worth of liquor in Spurgin's private vault in the bank.

DE VALERA'S AND CRAIG'S HELPERS MEET FOR PEACE

LONDON. Aug. 6.—Lieutenants of Eamonn de Valera and Sir James Craig were reported in conference today working toward direct negotiations between De Valera and Craig.

Outlining the present status of peace negotiations, the Daily News today stated De Valera was confronted with the problem of obtaining a peace agreement with Ulster.

Serious developments were feared for Monday, when the government control over Irish railways ends. The railway workers are faced with wage reductions, although they demand continuance of the present scale.

De Valera has appealed to labor throughout Ireland, but it is said he is strongly opposed to a continuation of the present arrangement. This, it was feared, might provoke a break between De Valera and the wage earners.

W. H. Schmidlapp, Son of Late Banker, Sued by Wife

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Suit asking divorce from William Horace Schmidlapp, 38, president of the Monitor Stove company, son of the late J. G. Schmidlapp, millionaire financier, was filed late today by attorneys for Mrs. Jean Maxwell Schmidlapp, 36.

She charges that he has been guilty of extreme neglect and cruelty, and that his conduct has caused great humiliation and physical and mental suffering to her and has made it impossible for her to live with him.

She asks alimony and custody of their four children, ranging in age from 5 to 13 years.

FORMER ATHLETE FOR C. A. A. KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

LLOYD WENDELL HOGG.

Lloyd Wendell Hogg, vice president and secretary of the American Spiral Pipe company, Cicero avenue and 14th street, was killed almost instantly last Thursday in an automobile accident. Mr. Hogg had been a member of the Chicago Athletic association and was formerly a well known athlete. He was born on April 22, 1877. He is survived by his widow, Ida G. Hogg, and a son, Lloyd George Hogg. He had been living at the Grassmere hotel, 4621 Sheridan road.

Genteel Youths in Stolen Auto Hold Up 2 Women

Two well dressed youths driving the automobile of William D. Smith, 1106 East 53d street, which had been stolen from Grant park yesterday, held up Miss Gertrude Sandwall, 5967 Glenwood avenue, and Mrs. Hensinger, 5821 Glenwood avenue, near Catalpa and Clark streets. Miss Sandwall lost $25 and a silver watch. She said the robbers "looked like the sons of gentlemen."

NURSE, SCORNED, TELLS OF HUNTING, KILLING LAWYER

"Happiest Woman in the World," She Says Now.

New York, Aug. 6.—Two women today discussed the death of Ellis Guy Kinkead, a Cincinnati lawyer, more than 50 years old. Miss Olivia M. P. Stone, Cincinnati graduate nurse, who shot and killed him yesterday near his home in Brooklyn, said today:

"Regret it? No. I am the happiest woman in the world."

Kinkead's widow, formerly Miss Maris Louise Gormley of Covington, Ky., according to a friend, said she felt no resentment against Miss Stone, hinting that she regarded Miss Stone as not quite sound mentally by saying Miss Stone, for her own sake, "should be taken care of."

Slayer Held in Jail.

Meanwhile Miss Stone is in jail without bail for examination next Tuesday on the charge of having murdered Kinkead. There are material differences between the story told by Miss Stone and that of the widow's sister. At Lexington, Ky., today, Mrs. Kinkead's sister said the marriage was two years ago. Miss Stone declared it was in 1920.

On one point, however, the story of Miss Stone and that of the Kinkead household agree. Miss Stone had been following and threatening Kinkead for some time. The version told by Mrs. Kinkead's sister was that shortly before his marriage, Kinkead was taken ill and went to the Cincinnati general hospital, where Miss Stone was a nurse. They met there, it was said. and later Miss Stone sued him for breach of promise. This suit, it was said at Lexington, was unsuccessful. The story from the widow's sister and the story heard at Kinkead's house in Brooklyn today make Miss Stone the pursuer. It was said she had visited the Kinkead home and had threatened to kill both Kinkead and Mrs. Kinkead. They had to call a policeman to take her away at one time, it was said.

Miss Stone's Version.

Miss Stone after her arraignment today admitted that she had followed Kinkead. She said she had met him when she was a nurse in Cincinnati and had accompanied him to Atlantic City, N. J. There, she said, he had made love to her.

"O my, but Mr. Kinkead was a very fast worker when he began to make love to me," she said. "He asked me for $1,000 to invest. I gave it to him and I never saw it again. I believe he spent it on Miss Gormley. When I saw that his love for me was waning, I decided he must marry me. The dean of the Cincinnati law school, where he was a member of the faculty, said he mst marry me or be discharged. I had him discharged, all right. That was in 1920.

Woman Traces Kinkead.

"Then he married and disappeared. His friends said he had gone to England. I hired the best detectives and located him in New York city in ten days.

"I retained a Cincinnati lawyer to represent me in a divorce action. as Kinead had made me his common law life. I got judgment for $5,000 alimony, but never received a cent.

"Then I followed him to New York. I showed him up to his friends. I waited for him at his office. I followed him for months and finally met him yesterday near his home in Brooklyn. When I saw him crossing the street I approached him and said: "How do you do, Mr. Ellis Kinkead, you dirty rat, yo uare surprised to see me, aren't you?'

"Then an awful chill came over me. I don't know what I did. I was so excited I felt that I could jump from New York to Mexico."

Five Bullets in Body.

She was asked if she did not regret the shooting. She replied she did not and added, "I am the happiest woman in the world."

What actually happened during the time that Miss Stone said "an awful chill came over me," was indicated by the results of the autopsy. In Kinkead's body there were five bullets.

Kinkead had been well known in Cincinnati where he had been corporation counsel. His widow was calm today as she made preparations to take the body to Cincinnati. She said she had faith in her husband.

"I want it understood," she declared, "that there is no malice in my heart toward that woman. I have receipts for money that my husband paid to her as blackmail, still I believe that the only relations between him and her were those of a patient and a nurse."

Painter Falls 50 Feet from Church Steeple

Charles Lind, 48 years old, of Milwaukee, was probably fatally injured yesterday when he fell fifty feet from the steeple of the German Lutheran church, Paulina and McReynolds streets, which he was painting. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital.

You can choose, too, from the great Tobey collection of low-priced furniture. It is the lowest priced good furniture to be had and is marked at important reductions for the sale.

The Frari Scalzi

The Frari Scalzi has been painted by a Venetian of today with all the brilliant vividness characteristic of Venice's greatest art development in the 16th century.

Pronounced coloring and rococo ornamentation, typified by Saint Peter's at Rome and the works of Bernini, distinguish this style.

The chrome yellow beds, the orange paneled desk, black table, Venetian green commode, and old rose dressing table, antiqued to represent the flight of time since the 16th century, maintain a most entrancing harmony. This is the first suite of this nature to be made in America.

TWO PAY ROLL HOLDUPS NET BANDITS $2,500

Girl Cashier Robbed of $901 at Revolver Point.

Two pay roll robberies in which the loot totaled $2,500 were reported to the police within an hour yesterday. In both instances the bandits escaped.

Two bandits in an automobile snatched a satchel containing $1,600 from Emil Hoss, cashier for the MacMillan company, 2457 Prairie avenue, just after he alighted from a street car at Prairie avenue and 25th street.

Girl Cashier Robbed.

A youth about 24 years old, flourishing a revolver, took $901.15 from Miss Nellie Ramp, 911 Lytle street, cashier for the Angus McKay company, 726 South Des Plaines street, on her way back from the Mechanics and Traders' State bank, 641 West Washington boulevard.

Miss Ramp was carrying a paper parcel containing the money, part of a pay roll, when she was stopped by the youth, who ran out from an alley in Des Plaines street, near Mather street, a few doors from the office in which she works.

He thrust a revolver against her and ordered her to face the brick wall of the building in front of which they stood. As she faced about he seized the paper parcel and fled.

Watchman Is Stabbed.

Thomas Dwyer, 50 years old, 5550 Aberdeen street, a watchman in the yards of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad at West 14th and South Dearborn streets, was stabbed in the neck by George Brown, colored, who was seen taking watermelons from a freight car, and grappled with the watchman after the latter fired three shots at him. The wound is not serious. Brown was taken to the South Clark street station.

HORSE KILLS EX-ALDERMAN.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Aug. 6.—Charles H. Huber, 55, former alderman and retired business man, was found dying in his barn early this morning, having been trampled and badly mutilated by a horse. He was removed to the hospital, dying soon after.

SHOPPERS WARNED TO GUARD PURSES AFTER $5,600 LOOP THEFTS

Three purse robberies in department stores yesterday prompted Capt. Patrick J. Lavin of Central station to warn shoppers to guard their pocketbooks more carefully. A thief, suspected of being a woman, has been operating so cleverly for the last six weeks that, despite extra detectives placed in the large stores, she has not been apprehended.

Mrs. C. F. Smith of the Edgewater Beach hotel reported yesterday that while on an elevator in the Marshall Field store her purse was opened and a diamond barpin, valued at $1,000, stolen.

Mrs. Pauline Sechechpel, 4711 North Central avenue, said that while in Mandel's her purse was opened and a diamond lavalliere worth $2,000, a diamond ring worth $900, another diamond ring worth $200, and a wedding ring worth $25 were stolen, besides $65 in cash.

Mrs. Edward G. Lewis, 422 Clinton avenue, Oak Park, reported the loss of a diamond barpin in the same store, worth $1,500.

Autopsy Shows Moonshiner Was Shot by Accomplice

Petersburg, Ind., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—At an autopsy held on the body of Floyd Reed, the young moonshiner who was killed in a gun battle between officers, Reed and his accomplice, Joe Johnson, at the Johnson home near Muren, this county, a 32 caliber bullet was removed. The officers were armed with 38 and 44 caliber revolvers, but Johnson has a 32, and it is now alleged that Johnson accidently killed Reed in the battle. Officers throughout southern Indiana are hunting Johnson, who escaped.

DROWNING CALLED AN ACCIDENT.

A verdict of accidental death was returned at the investigation into the drowning of Alex Kosky, Cornell and Noble streets, whose body was recovered from the river at 22d and Sangamon streets.

WORTHINGTON'S $461,000 IN ALIEN BANKS IS TIED UP

Order Served on Swindle Suspect in Jail.

An order restraining John W. Worthington, Chicago's "J. Rufus Wallingford," from withdrawing or otherwise tampering with his six accounts in foreign banks, totaling $461,000, was issued yesterday by Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy.

The order was requested by James Rosenthal, attorney for the Central Trust company, receiver for the Worthington enterprises. While the banks are not bound by the order it is customary for them to honor it as a matter of courtesy to the government, it was said.

Order Served in Jail.

The order was served on Worthington at the Woodstock, Ill., jail., where he is being held in lieu of $50,000 bonds. The banks carrying the accounts are:

Deutsche bank, Berlin.

Polish State Loan bank, Warsaw, Poland.

Direction der Disconto Ersellschaft, Posen.

Bohemia Union bank, Prague.

Banca Commercio Italiana, Rome.

Banque Nationale de Credit, Paris.

Yesterday Col. John V. Clinnin, in charge of the prosecution of Worthington, continued his probe into the $3,000,000 Sinclair Oil robbery of New York. Numerous Sinclair officials are being questioned and a complete list of the securities stolen is being checked with the documents seized in Worthington's offices.

Concealed His Assets.

It was disclosed by Col. Clinnin that Worthington has been concealing his assets by having W. S. N. Hughes, now a resident of Terre Haute, Ind., hold title to the property in Highland Park and on the north, south and west sides of Chicago. Mr. Hughes will be used tomorrow in the bankruptcy hearing against Worthington.

The disclosure strengthens the belief of government officials that Worthington was anxious to keep his real financial status from being known to avoid an inquiry into the source of his income.

"Marie" Is Identified.

The mysterious "Marie," whose picture was found among Worthington's effects, was identified yesterday as Miss Marie Ready, a designer, who formerly resided at the Malden Arms hotel, 4555 Malden street. She left the hotel Aug. 1, telling guests she was going to North Dakota.

VANDERBILT SUIT ON INCOME TAX VICTORY FOR U. S.

New York, Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Judge Learned Hand in an opinion filed today in the federal district court overruled the demurrers interposed by Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Frederick L. Merriam, and Henry B. Anderson, to the suits brought against them by the government to recover income taxes upon legacies left the defendants under the will of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who died in 1915.

The will disposed of a large estate and set up various independent trusts of indefinite duration. To his brother, Reginald C., Alfred G. bequeathed $500,000; to his uncle, Frederick W. Vanderbilt, $200,000; to Frederick M. Davies, $500,000; to Henry B. Anderson, $200,000; to Frederick L. Merriam, $250,000; to Charles E. Crocker, $10,000, and to Howard Lockwood, $1,000.

The taxes sued for against Reginald C. Vanderbilt amount to $30,033 plus the penalty provided by law and interest. In the case of Merriam taxes amount to $10,912 and in the Anderson case $7,754 plus penalty and interest.

FIVE HURT IN GAS BLAST.

Detroit, Mich., Aug 6.—Explosion of a gas tank in the enameling room of the Maxwell Motor company's plant in Highland Park last night injured five men and threatened the lives of forty others. The blast and resulting fire caused damage amounting to several thousand dollars.

DOLLAR MARK ON 'BRIDE'S DOOR' OF RICH N. Y. CHURCH

New York, Aug. 6.—What is said to be a dollar mark has been discovered carved in the Gothic decorations over the "bride's door" of fashionable St. Thomas Episcopal church on 5th avenue.

The alleged dollar mark is said to have been put there by the architects who designed the famous church as a joke. It is part of a scroll work design. Beside it is what appears to be a "true lovers' knot," also cut into the stone.

Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector, said the dollar mark was a "figment of the imagination."

Admits Carving Dollar Mark.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 6.—[United Press.]—The dollar sign and the true lover's knot were carved in the stonework over the famous bride's door of fashionable St. Thomas Episcopal church, New York, as symbols of "the motives for marrying," E. Donald Robb, architect who designed the figures, declared here today.

Robb said he did it partly as a joke and partly in earnest. The symbols which have been above the "Brides Door" ever since the church was built years ago, were discovered recently.

"Some people marry for true love as symbolized by the lovers' knot, and others—well, others just marry for money," said Robb. "I wanted to get both symbols in the design of that panel."

EX-MINISTER ARRESTED.

Ottawa, Ill., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—W. O. Bellamy, former Methodist minister, now proprietor of a print shop here, was arrested today on a charge of embezzlement, made by W. W. Hixon of Rockford. The charge results from the publication of a La Salle county atlas by Bellamy and Hixon. "There is nothing to the charge," said Bellamy. "Hixon and I have simply not made a final settlement because all the accounts have not been collected."

FLEX-A-TILE
WIDE SPACE SHINGLES

Flex-a-Tile Wide Space Shingles are laid as illustrated. Beautiful thatched roof effect is obtained and permanent protection is given for years.

One of the most beautiful housetops known to architecture is that derived from Flex-a-Tile Wide Space Shingles, with their slight incurving contour and fine tint of natural slate green (red, if you prefer) that never fades.

The Flex-a-Tile Wide Space Shingle design answers the demand for individuality in roofs, while supplying the famous Flex-a-Tile quality of permanent protection from all weathers and from sparks and fire. Flex-a-Tile Shingles, or roll type, are laid right over old shingles. They are self-spacing, easy to lay, moderate in cost, last for years.

INSURANCE MAN WITH OFFICES IN CHICAGO IS SHOT

Had Woman's Letters; She Denies Knowing Him.

Morristown, N. J., Aug. 6.—The mystery surrounding the shooting early today of Peter Bender, insurance agent with offices in New York, Chicago, and Detroit, who was found on the lawn of Mrs. George Barber's estate, the Oaks, near here, with a bullet lodged just below his heart, remained unsolved, tonight.

The story of attempted suicide was upheld on the ground that a pistol with one cartridge discharged was found beside Bender, and Dr. Clarence A. Plume declared Bender had admitted attempted suicide when first found. Bender later refused to discuss the shooting, and tonight he underwent an operation at a hospital, where physicians said his chances for recovery were slight.

Find Letters from Woman.

In Bender's rooms at the McAlpin hotel, New York, were found letters purporting to be from Mrs. Barber, although she denied that she had any knowledge of him. She declared the first she had ever heard of him was early today when a servant awakened her to tell her that a strange man had shot himself on the lawn of her home. She said the finding of letters presumably from her, in his suite was "very strange." Among hsieffects was also a passport bearing vises for many countries.

It was learned from servants at the Barber home tonight by County Detective Brennan that Bender had called there several times last night, attempting to gain admittance. Mrs. Barber, however, refused to see him, the servants said.

Husband Died Monday.

Mrs. Barber said her husband died in Bennington, Vt., last Monday and that she had sent his body to be cremated. Neighbors said Mrs. Barber entertained quite often.

Although Mrs. Barber said that she had never known Bender, Dr. Plume, who was called shortly after the man was found, said she identified him when he arrived at The Oaks. She refused, however, to give any other information, and Dr. Plume said Bender, who was conscious when he arrived, gave no sign of recognition of Mrs. Barber, nor she of him, other than to [illegible] who he was.

REFUSE TO PAY GASTON B. MEANS FOR 'LOST' $57,000

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 6.—The Southeastern Express company will refuse to pay the claim of Gaston B. Means, on account of the alleged loss of $57,000 which he claims he shipped from Concord, N. C., to Chicago, on June 22 last, and is prepared to prove that no money was lost from the package in transit, Frank M. Shannonhouse, attorney for the company, said today.

"We are ready to show that the very same package, with the identical wrappings, fastenings, and contents, that was delivered to us in Concord was delivered by our agent to its destination in Chicago," Mr. Shannonhouse said.

The package was shipped by Means to Roy B. Keehn, counsel for Mrs. Mary Melvin, administratrix of the estate of her sister, Mrs. Maud A. King, who was shot and killed near Concord four years ago and in connection with whose death Means was tried and acquitted on a charge of murder.

THEY HIKE ON WHEELS

Now the Misses Edna Rael and Ruth Rosenthal, hikers extraordinary, started on July 28 to walk from their homes in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the University of California at Berkeley, where they are to become freshmen upon its opening. And yesterday they walked into The Tribune office and announced that they had come the 1,275 miles over the Lincoln highway, via Erie, Pa.; Cleveland, O.; and Detroit, Mich., in just eight days.

"What's this?" quoth the reporter. "Almost 1,300 miles in eight days?"

"We-e-e-ll," said the misses, who are both just 18, demurely, "you see it was this way: We started to hike it, but—but—well, we cheated and bummed—that is, begged—a lot of rides from motorists along the way. In fact, we have come to the conclusion to walk it via motor."

Congressman James of Virginia Dies Suddenly

Danville, Va., Aug. 6.—Representative Rorer A. James of the Fifth Virginia district died suddenly today at his home here from heart failure. He was 62 years old, and was elected to the Sixty-sixth congress in June, 1920, to serve out the unexpired term of former Representative E. W. Saunders. He was reëlected to the Sixty-seventh congress last November.

Mr. James was publisher of the Danville Register and Danville Bee and had long been a leader in the Democratic party in his native state.

OBITUARY.

LAWRENCE H. PASKO, son of Joseph Pasko, 2427 North Maplewood avenue, whose body arrived in Chicago Thursday from France, will be buried with full military honors from St. John's Berchmans church at St. Arelbert's cemetery by members of Prairie Signal post, American Legion, at 11:30 this morning. Young Pasko, a private in the 108th signal battalion, Company C, was killed at Dannevoux woods during the Meuse-Argonne drive, Oct. 6, 1918.

KISSES VIA PHONE AID HUSBAND TO DIVORCE DECREE

Tells Judge Neighbor Is Too Neighborly.

Telephone kisses and moonlight lovemaking on the veranda of a summer cottage at Grass Lake, Wis., entered into the evidence given yesterday at the hearing of a divorce granted Peterson N. Weber, 1769 Lunt avenue, from Pearl B. Weber.

Judge Thomas J. Lynch granted the decree on the grounds of desertion, after listening to testimony relative to the conduct of Mrs. Weber and Ernest Shanklin, who resides at 1033 North Shore avenue, not far from the Weber home.

Witnesses testified that Mrs. Weber admitted she loved Shanklin and could not help it. Mr. Weber, under examination by his attorney, Raymond W. Beach, told of the love affair staged at their summer home at Grass Lake.

"While my wife was at our summer home," Weber testified, "Shanklin was a frequent visitor there. The first I heard of the affair between them was when friends told me of their friendship, but I paid little attention to the stories until one evening about two years ago, when Shanklin spent the evening at our cottage.

"I was about to retire that night when I saw the figures of a couple on the porch. I recognized the voices as those of Shanklin and my wife. They had their arms about each other and were kissing."

Other witnesses told of telephone conversations of Mrs. Weber and Shanklin in which kisses were exchanged over the wire.

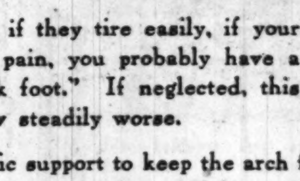
Foot comfort appliances

Don't blame your shoes for tired feet



Your shoes aren't always to blame for tired feet! Shoe comfort depends so much on the condition of your feet. First correct the cause of that pain in your feet, then see how good your shoes will feel.

If your feet ache, if they tire easily, if your insteps or ankles pain, you probably have a tendency to "weak foot." If neglected, this condition will grow steadily worse.

Give the foot a scientific support to keep the arch from falling. Come to our store any time and let our foot expert examine your feet and advise how to have constant foot comfort. Let him demonstrate to you on your own feet.

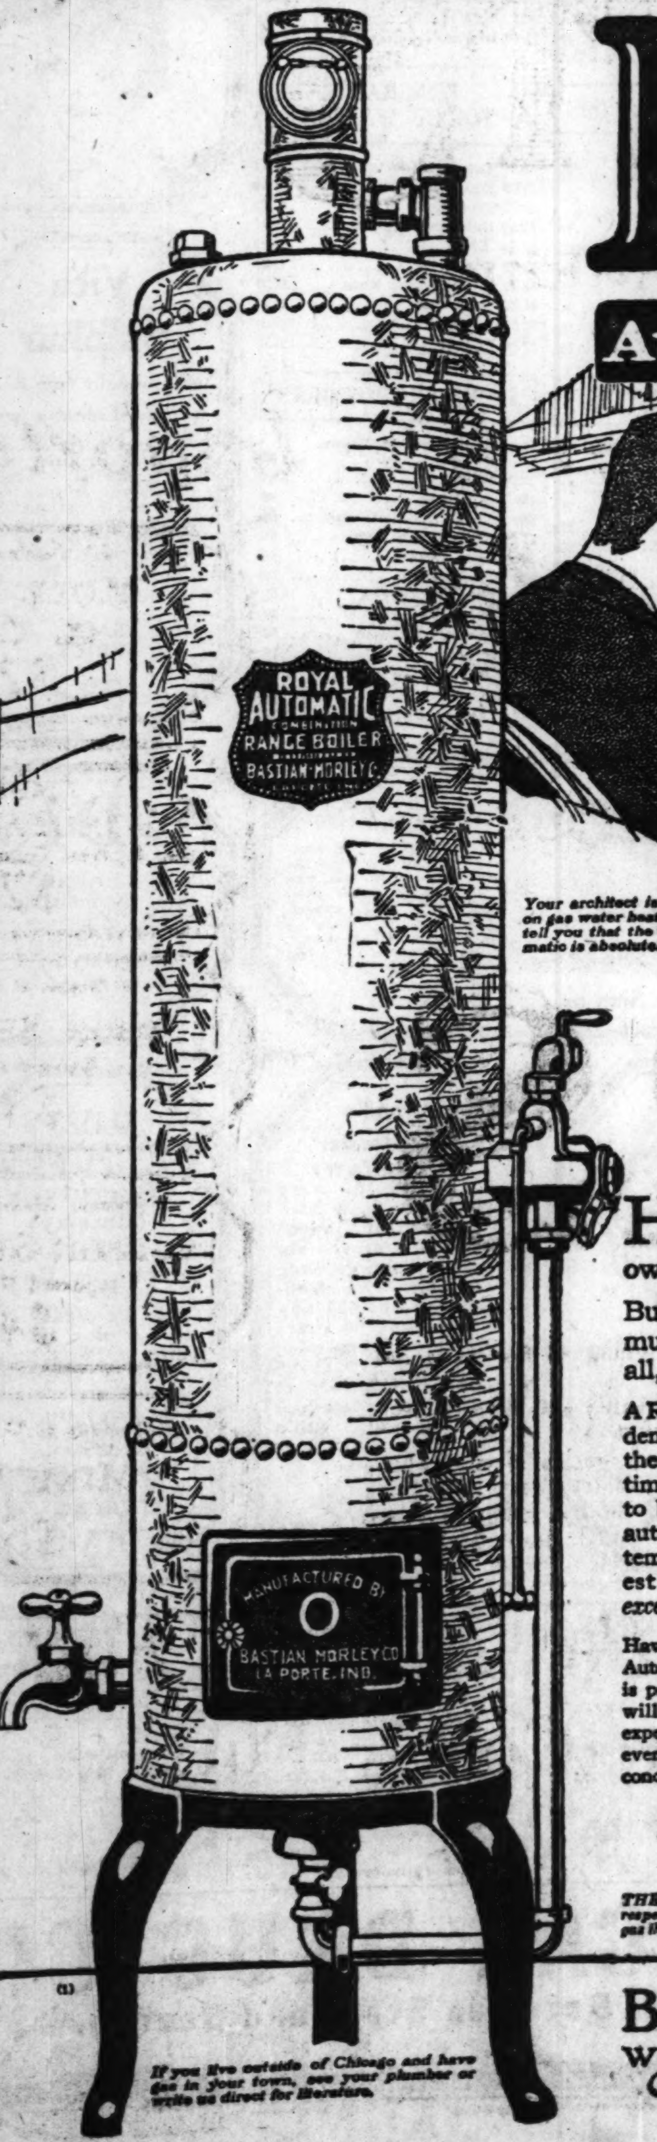
Automatic Gas Water Heaters



If you live outside of Chicago and have gas in your town, see your plumber or write us direct for literature.

B M GAS WATER HEATERS

Your architect is an authority on gas water heaters. He will tell you that the Royal Automatic is absolutely O. K.

The Royal costs less—gives better service

HOT water, in whatever amount you want, whenever you want it—is one of the indispensable comforts every home owner wants to include in his home.

But, hot water service to be practical must be economical—must be sparing with gas—must be free from care. And above all, it must be dependable—always.

A Royal Automatic meets these demands. It will give you all the hot water you need—any time, day or night. It costs less to buy and install than other automatic water-heater systems. It operates to the highest degree of efficiency on exceedingly low gas consumption.

Hot water is delivered from the Royal the instant the faucet is opened. Not a second is lost by waiting. Hot water is there—at any time—in any amount—and at full city water pressure. Royal hot water service is as instant as the flood of electricity at the push of a button.

Having no coils, the Royal Automatic Gas Water Heater is practically lime-proof and will give no trouble nor expense from this cause—even under the worst water conditions.

YOU have never seen a time when $688.00 of your money would buy for you such a bargain as the one we offer here.

This reads like an extravagant statement; you immediately think back to pre-war prices and wonder if we include the bargains of those days when we say what we do in the opening paragraph of this advertisement.

Yes; even before the war we never were able to offer you anything in which we could put more confidence than we feel in offering you this bedroom suite.

The materials and workmanship are superb; nothing could be better; and it is this fact of quality that makes this bargain so remarkable; without considering quality, price means nothing.

Whether you expect to buy or not, do not fail to come and see this suite. You will always remember it as a wonderful bargain.

HAYS TO STUDY BIG DEFICIT SEEN IN PARCEL POST

$70,000,000 Loss Is Expected This Year.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Parcel post rates must be increased, if an investigation shows that this service is responsible for an expected deficit of $70,000,000 in the postal revenue this year, Postmaster General Will Hays told the United Press today.

Accountants and postoffice engineers are now checking through the entire country to learn if the parcel post is, as suspected, one of the two big losing ventures of the department.

Until 1920, postal revenues exceeded expenditures for several years, but now deficits are showing, due to business depression, increased wages and increased compensation to railroads for carrying mail.

Ought to Pay Its Upkeep.

"The parcel post system is a commercial venture pure and simple," Mr. Hays said, "There is every reason, therefore, why it should be made at least self-supporting. This does not hold true of some other services of the postoffice, which necessarily must be accomplished at a loss."

Mr. Hays explained why a deficit is expected this year and gave an itemized statement showing where and how the department plans to reduce operating costs [illegible] nearly $15,000,000.

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920," he said, "the deficit was $17,000,000. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the deficit will be found to be approximately $84,000,000 when the reports are all available.

Due to Increased Costs.

"Of this, about $75,000,000 was due to increase in compensation ordered by congress to employés and $11,000,000 was additional pay to railroads under interestate commerce decisions.

"Since April 1 there has been a serious falling off of postoffice business and in consequence receipts, but economies have been instituted which prevent any deficit other than that for increased wages and railroad rates.

"In the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1921, and ending June 30, 1922, the treasury department has estimated the deficit at $70,000,000. This is based on a probable light amount of business and a probable same expenditure, save only such savings as the postoffice department has estimated it can make, which amounts to nearly $15,000,000.

Man, Found in Alley, Near Death from Wood Alcohol

Suffering from wood alcohol poisoning, an unidentified man, about 50, was taken to the county hospital yesterday. He was found in an alley at the rear of 172 North Ada street. His condition is serious.

MISSIONARIES OF INDUSTRY CALLED CHINA'S CHIEF NEED

JOHN P. MANN.

Declaring that in China ten laborers are doing work that one man with modern machinery does here, John P. Mann of the firm of Morris, Mann & Reilly told his hearers at the weekly luncheon of the Association of Commerce on Wednesday industrial missionaries are the kind most needed in the orient. He has just returned from a business trip to the orient. He said the inhabitans are trying to divide up what work they have among 400,000,000 people, instead of creating more industries and thus producing more work. Persons are needed who can teach them how to use their undeveloped resources and pay reasonable wages, Mr. Mann said. At present laborers are paid about 25 cents a day.

SPANISH NAVY AIDS TROOPS IN MOROCCAN WAR

LONDON, Aug. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Navarro, commander of the Spanish troops in the Melilla area, who was reported to have abandoned the position at Mount Arruit to which he had retreated, is still holding out against the Moors at Mount Arruit, it is declared in an official dispatch received here from Madrid this afternoon.

Cruiser Aids Troops.

MADRID, Aug. 6.—Spanish forces which were landed at La Restinga, on the Moroccan coast, southeast of Melilla, to attack the right wing of the Moorish tribesmen, have encountered serious resistance and their advance has been held up temporarily.

An official statement issue dhere at midnight last night said, however, that the Spanish cruiser Cataluna is protecting the troops that have been landed and bombarding the enemy at Zoco Arbas. Gourougou and other towns along the northeastern Moroccan coast near Melilla have been blockaded by the Spanish war vessels in that neighborhood.

France and the Vatican Resume Formal Relations

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Resumption of formal diplomatic relations between the French government and the vatican was completed today when Archbishop Beneventura Cerretti, papal nuncio in Paris, presented his credentials to President Millerand at the latter's country home at Rambouillet.

The papal nuncio characterized the resumption of relations as "an historical event of exceptional importance." President Millerand replied cordially to the nuncio's greetings.

SAY, HOW ABOUT PEACE? SENATE TO WHITE HOUSE

Statesmen Curious and Also Impatient.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Curiosity accompanied by some impatience is being manifested by the senate concerning the new treaty of peace with Germany which, according to dispatches from Berlin, is now in the final processes of negotiation.

So far, the senate has been kept completely in the dark about negotiations. Although members of the foreign relations committee keep an ever watchful eye on the administration's moves in international diplomacy, their ignorance concerning the treaty making now in progress is paralleled only by their inability to obtain information while the Versailles treaty was being framed.

Denials Add to Mystery.

The only light they have been able to get has come through newspaper dispatches, and this has been dimmed by administration declarations that they are wide of the mark.

Democratic senators may be expected at an early date to begin prying under the veil of secrecy attending the negotiations, and it would not be surprising if some Republicans joined with them in asking questions about the progress of the treaty making.

Inquiries at the state department concerning relations with Germany elicit no information beyond the bare admission that Ellis Loring Dresel, American commissioner at Berlin, is engaged in deliberations with the authorities at Berlin.

Bitter Enders Happy.

Most of the irreconcilables, although they would be better pleased if they were kept more closely informed of developments, were gratified to hear that the administration is actually engaged in the negotiation of a new treaty, because they regard such action as convincing proof that the Versailles pact is scrapped forever so far as the United States is concerned.

The "mild reservationists," however, are not entirely convinced that the Versailles treaty is to be scrapped altogether.

In response to the senate clamor for withdrawing the troops from Germany, word has reached the capitol from the inner recesses of the administration that President Harding and Secretary Hughes are desirous of keeping the American forces in Germany until the peace settlement is finally concluded.

RAID LOOP SALOON; SEIZE TWO.

Stanley Glomski, owner of a saloon at 118 North La Salle street, across from the city hall, and Joe Gusy, his bartender, were held under bonds of $2,500 and $1,000 by Commissioner Glass yesterday and the case was continued to Aug. 11. Agents from the office of Federal Prohibition Director Kjellander found colored alcohol behind the bar and in the basement.

STATE TO PROBE BOYCOTT RULE OF MILK DRIVERS

Indictments Now Face Business Agents.

Angered by the high handed methods employed by members of the milk drivers' union in their efforts to control milk deliveries in Chicago, Assistant State's Attorney Ernest Hodges yesterday announced he would ask for the immediate indictment of several of the union's business agents, among them "Steve" Sumner. They will be charged with conspiracy to boycott customers and acts against the public welfare.

At present the investigation is directed mainly against the milk drivers' organization, which in many instances reported to the state's attorney's office has shut off the supply of milk to stores and private customers who rebel at buying sour milk or milk put up in dirty bottles.

Union Controls Drivers' Acts.

The unions are also accused of threatening to shut off the delivery of bread and other household supplies if their orders were disobeyed. Milk drivers who ignored the union's edicts were threatened with dismissal.

"The 3,000,000 of persons in this city who use milk are at the mercy of the milk drivers, who deliver what they wish and then boycott the purchaser when a kick is made," Mr. Hodges said. "The babies of Chicago are at their mercy. That is one of the reasons we are going to push this inquiry without delay until the conspiracy is broken up.

"From present indications, the big milk companies are throttled in their efforts to deliver milk by the drivers. They are either doing that or working hand in hand with them. In several instances where milk deliveries have been stopped, superintendents of the delivering companies have said they could do nothing. They said the drivers wouldn't deliver to boycotted customers because it meant their jobs if they did.

"This is one of the points that must be cleared up. I am sending out notices to officials of Borden's, Weiland's, th Unied Dairy company and Bowman's, asking them to confer with me Monday. I am going to ask them to cooperate with this office to break the grip of the union."

Mrs. Dena Goldburg, owner of a delicatessen store at 1134 Argyle avenue, yesterday told Michael Kaveney, first assistant to Chief Investigator Ben Newmark that she had attempted to change milk companies, and her supply of milk was cut off and her trade threatened by the unions. She named Steven Sumner, business agent, as the man who had ordered milk drivers to boycott her.

She will be taken before the grand jury tomorrow by Assistant State's Attorney Charles Wharton, who has been called in to assist in the investigation.

Mrs. Goldburg's story follows:

Q.—How long have you been in business? A.—Since last January.

Q.—Whom did you get milk from then? A.—From the United Dairy company.

Q.—Did you have trouble? A.—Yes, when warm weather came, the sour cream seemed to work from the bottles. I complained to the driver, but he objected to making changes when several jars were affected.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said, I couldn't stop—that there was some sort of an agreement, and that if I stopped taking milk from him, I wouldn't get any delivered at all. I went on then for a few days, until one morning he delivered a whole raft of sour stuff. I sold some of it to customers and they returned it and quit trading with me. Then I quit.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I stopped the Borden man and asked him to deliver cream. He said he would. I also talked to the superintendent, and he promised I would be taken care of.

Business Agent Halts Deliveries.

Q.—Did he deliver all right? A.—He did until this morning, then he announced he was going to stop. He said, 'Mrs. Goldburg, I can't bring you any more milk. The business agent came over to the Borden's company yesterday and told them to keep the driver out of your store.'

Q.—What was the driver's name? A.—Charles P. Britt, 1947 Montrose avenue. Steve Sumner was the business agent who warned him to stop.

Q.—Did Britt mention any threats? A.—Yes. He said if he delivered as much as one bottle he would be thrown out of a job.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I called the Borden superintendent. He said he was sorry, but that the drivers dared not deliver.

Says She'll Fight 'Em All.

Q.—Has the old driver ever returned? A.—He has threatened to call out the man who delivers bread and other necessities. I told him to go ahead. I'd fight them all. He said he was simply following the orders of the business agents.

Scores of other letters are flowing into the state's attorney's office. Many of the writers volunteer to tell their stories to the grand jury.

90 minutes from the Heart of Chicago

You Have the Epitome of Charm and Absorbing Interest of the Great Outdoors---the Mecca of Joyousness, Happiness, Health and Wholesomeness for You, Your Wife and Your Kiddies. Miles and Miles of the Most Wonderful Beach in the Middle West Irresistibly Call You to While Away the Idle Hours of Playtime at

LONG BEACH BEAUTIFUL

Summer Homesites of Unsurpassed Loveliness on the East Shore of Lake Michigan in Indiana

Over One-Half Million Dollars

Has been spent for concrete drives, water, gas and electric extensions, so that you and your family can enjoy the charm and unspoiled beauty of this fascinating dunes country, with every comfort of home.

For the First Time the Long Beach Company is announcing that this is your opportunity to fulfill your desire of owning a Summer Homesite, with all modern conveniences, on Beautiful Lake Michigan, near to Chicago and everywhere in the Middle West.

No. 1 Tee of the Long Beach golf course overlooking the beautiful rolling country. No course in America offers a more delightful vista.

No Pioneering

Long Beach—though removed from the hurry, noise and grind of city civilization—enjoys every modern city convenience. You will find here over eleven miles of private concrete roadways winding through thickly wooded hummocks and plateaus for the exclusive use of the residents of Long Beach. These are not public highways.

You and your family will enjoy all the comforts of your city home—electric lighting, gas, hot and cold running water, bath, telephone and telegraph service, two mail deliveries each day, groceries, ice and milk delivered at your door.

You have the bathing beach at your front door and a sporty golf course at your back door. These are just a few of the advantages that make Long Beach your Summer Wonderland for outdoor sports and recreation.

Paradise for Children

Your children need continuous outdoor recreation during the heated summer months—your babies require fresh air and cool nights—they need sunshine and outdoor exercise. You will find Long Beach just such a healthful and joy spot for your children. They can play to their heart's content under the great golden oaks and pines, and midst the flowers and grass, and in the white sand of one of America's greatest fresh water beaches..

Throughout the summer season the silvery sands that border the shore at Long Beach are always popular with bathers and feminine beauty which blossoms in bright colored costuming. Here you may walk upon the cushion cover of pure, clean sand for hundreds of feet out into the blue sparkling waters of magnificent Lake Michigan before you go beyond your depth. Your children may bathe here in safest security and the waters are wonderfully pure, inviting and invigorating. Within a short time they will become tanned and robust, grow strong and rugged, overflowing with childish exuberance.

Transportation Every Half Hour

Because of the convenience and short distance of Long Beach from Chicago, during any part of the summer when business requires you to be in the city, you can spend the night with your family at your summer home and be back at your office the next morning. During your absence you will always have the satisfaction of knowing that your family is surrounded by neighbors of refinement and every possible precaution is taken for their protection. The Long Beach police prevent outsiders from entering the property.

Long Beach is ideal for daily and week end trips. It is located on the east shore of Lake Michigan, 50 miles from Chicago and 3 miles east of Michigan City, Ind. Transportation facilities are most complete. Forty conveyances daily from Chicago—railway trains, electric cars and Lake Michigan boats run on regular schedules to Michigan City. Busses for Long Beach connect every 30 minutes. Motorists find the roads in excellent condition the entire distance, a 2½ hour drive from the Chicago Loop. By Michigan Central and Pere Marquette trains Long Beach is only 1½ hours from Chicago, 2 hours by the South Shore Electric Lines and a 3 hour delightful trip by boat.

Golf—Tennis—Dancing

Long Beach was planned for lovers of outdoor recreation. One of the sportiest golf courses in America has been built for the private use of Long Beachers. Tennis is one of the popular sports of Long Beach—our courts are hard rolled, assuring a speediness of play that provides pleasure in abundance for you who are lovers of this glorious game. You will find a number of these tennis courts well cared for and in good condition at all times—free to all Long Beach residents and their friends.

You will enjoy, too, the Community Club House, with its spacious cool dancing floor on the lake front, where you and your family can entertain your friends and meet your neighbors.

Long Beach Is Restricted

Building and other restrictions are enforced in order to preserve the natural beauty of Long Beach and to maintain its present high character. These restrictions cover desirability of purchasers, location and cost of homes, also restriction as to race.

The Long Beach Company organization includes engineers, architects, contractors, landscape gardeners, and will build your home complete, if desired.

You pay no taxes for two years. You pay no assessments—all property improvements, including a concrete road in front of your lot, are in and paid for.

For sewerage we use the septic tank system—a system approved by all sanitary engineers and adopted by most of the progressive cities of the United States. Using this system, the waters of Lake Michigan at Long Beach are never contaminated, but are kept as pure and sweet as spring water.

Own a Long Beach Summer Home

Long Beach is the only available, restricted lake frontage anywhere near Chicago that will ever be available for high class summer home sites. Because this is true, property in this suburb can be considered from a purely investment viewpoint. A homesite in this restricted suburb will grow more valuable with each succeeding year.

The palatial colonial home of Matthew Cullen, Oil Producer of Wichita, Texas, which we constructed with only a small magazine illustration for our guidance.

Though many of the homes at Long Beach Beautiful are as elegant as you will find on the Lake Shore Drive, you can build an attractive little Bungalow on your Homesite at as low a cost as $2,000.

Homesites Within Your Income

Today there are 300 homes at Long Beach Beautiful, ranging from ideal, cozy Bungalows costing only $2,000 to magnificent dwellings running as high as $40,000. Whatever your income, you can have a delightful Long Beach Beautiful Summer Home.

From an actual photograph of Long Beach Beautiful—young folks enjoying the marvelous beach fronting their homes. The lure of Lake Michigan at Long Beach Beautiful is irresistible.

We have eleven miles of winding, rolling concrete driveways for your exclusive pleasure. Abounding on every side are densely wooded knolls and shady dells.

Today we can offer you a wide choice of desirable wooded lots and some beach frontage at prices ranging from $700 to $2000. Payable on easy monthly terms.

Every family in Chicago or the Middle West who make a practice of spending their summer vacation at a lake or summer resort will find it to their interest to consider this highly restricted family summer home suburb. No more beautiful home can be imagined—no more healthful spot for your children and yourselves.

Over three hundred families of refinement and culture are summering here now, hundreds more will make this one of America's most beautiful, refined family suburbs, not only because of location and accessibility, but because Lake Michigan is the most popular watering place for Middle Western people and is becoming more popular each season.

Act Now! Come Today!

See for yourself this Summer Wonderland that no pen can picture. Come either by train, boat, trolley, or motor over ideal roads blazed with

'YELLOW PERIL' STIRS ALARM OF PERU AND CHILE

Japanese Flock to Lima; Marry Natives.

BY JOHN W. WHITE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LIMA, Peru.—Lima, known throughout the Spanish speaking world as the proud City of the Viceroys, the city whence the Spaniards under Pizarro directed their inquisition against the Incas, has become so infested with Japanese that the Peruvian newspapers have repeatedly during the last three years called upon the government to protect the country from further spread of the "Peligro Amarillo," or yellow peril, as they call it.

Some time ago the Japanese question was made a live subject throughout South America by the statements of the Lima newspapers that the Japanese were not only replacing the lower classes of natives by immigration, but were intermarrying with Peruvians of the laboring class in such a way as to make the yellow peril a real one to the Peruvian people.

Market Place Like Orient.

Tourists in South America usually make their first excursion include the market places, as these show the natives in their own element better than they can be seen anywhere else. But when one enters the big market place in Lima one is inclined to forget that it is Peru and wonder if it might not be some place in the orient; for almost nothing is seen of natives except the servant girls who are marketing. Nearly every stall is kept by Japanese. Japanese women squat in the aisles, surrounded by their chickens and turkeys; Japanese boys sell lard by the spoonful and wrap it in the wide leaves of the banana tree instead of in paper; and Japanese men sell the meat and vegetables.

In most South American countries the street peddlers are largely Turks and Syrians, who push a cart or carry a basket from house to house selling kitchen utensils, novelties, and toilet articles. But on the west coast of South America this hawking trade is almost exclusively in the hands of the Japanese. These peddlers, after carrying a basket or pushing a cart for a few years, save enough out of their penny profits to set up stores, and both Peru and Chile today are covered with these tiny oriental shops.

Rule "Nitrate Ports."

This is especially true in southern Peru and northern Chile, that is, in the nitrate ports of the west coast. In these towns, the Japanese occupy entire sections and it is not unusual to walk several blocks before finding a single individual who does not bear evidence of oriental blood in his veins.

Japanese immigration to the nitrate ports has been on the increase since Japan entered the world war, as Japanese steamers come out to the west coast in ballast to load nitrate for Japan. One of the two Japanese steamship lines recently subsidized by the Japanese government makes regular calls at all these ports with immigrants of the laboring class. It is not unusual to see from two to four Japanese cargo steamers at one time in such small ports as Iquique and Arica.

Jap Huts Line Streets.

The Japanese in these localities line entire streets with their huts, made of corrugated galvanized iron, with the earth for a floor and without windows. And each one of these one or two room huts accommodates several persons and sometimes several families.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 6.—One child is dead and another suffering perhaps fatal injuries as a result of street accidents last night. Gertrude Kolban, 5 years old, was killed when struck by an automobile, and Michael Mallull, 6, suffered a fractured skull when hit by a motorcycle.

OBREGON PLAN PAINLESS DEATH FOR ARTICLE 27

No Retroactive Effect to Oil Clause.

Mexico City, Aug. 6.—Consideration of Article 27 of the Mexican constitution, nationalizing petroleum deposits, will begin in the Mexican congress next Monday. A committee of the lower house, appointed by the Liberal-Constitutionalist party, which forms a majority of the chamber, has submitted to President Obregon a project for the immediate settlement of oil problems. During an interview yesterday afternoon, the committee asked the chief executive to coöperate with the lower house in this work.

The project submitted contained six fundamental points upon which legislation relative to oil might be built, and the president expressed the opinion that they might be reduced to only three, one of which would state that Article 27 was not retroactive in its effect.

Solution of Obregon.

President Obregon stated the problem could be decided upon in two ways, either the chief executive could be authorized by congress to act in accordance with the three conclusive points mentioned and afterwards send his project to congress, or congress might study and reach a decision immediately. The committee accepted the second proposition.

More than 150 protests against the application of Article 27 will be taken up by the supreme court here next week. These have been filed with the court since 1918 by petroleum companies.

Says U. S. Note Is There.

George T. Summerlin, American charge d'affaires, yesterday delivered to the foreign office a note from Washington, declared the Excelsior this morning.

It was declared that Washington's demands incident to recognition had not been changed, but that the new note contained certain important stipulations acceptable to the Mexican government.

It was said to have insisted upon a treaty of amity and commerce, but that this convention should be negotiated after the present Mexican government had been accorded recognition.

Washington Is Silent.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Officials would throw no light today on the Mexico City report that Charge Summerlin had presented a new communication to the Mexican foreign office. The impression was given that there had been an interchange of personal letters between Presidents Harding and Obregon and of the character of these, officials, as a matter of course, declined to talk.

TINCHER BILL'S PRIVATE WIRE BAN REMOVED

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—In response to strong protests the senate agricultural committee today agreed to eliminate the "private wire" provision from the Capper-Tincher "anti-grain gambling" bill.

This provision would have prohibited the use of private telegraph wires from grain exchanges to branches throughout the country. It was placed in the bill, Senator Capper of Kansas, coauthor, explained, to correct evils in "grain gambling." The Board of Trade admits that the practice gives rise to abuses, and representatives have declared that they will take steps to correct them.

The committee heard pleas from L. F. Gates, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade, and others to strike out the provision admitting coöperative farmers' associations as members of the boards, but voted to retain the provision.

SOLDIERS HELD AS THIEVES.

John Sterling, 3066 5th avenue, and George A. Conley, 2521 West Van Buren street, former sergeants in the 2d Illinois infantry, were held to the grand jury in $1,000 bonds each yesterday on charges of stealing sixteen government automatic pistols and selling them for $15 each.

WEEKS, DENBY, CHAMPIONS OF DYE EMBARGO

Urge Necessity of War Industries.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—The propaganda for an embargo on dyes was championed today by Secretaries Weeks of the war department and Denby of the navy. They have urged restoration to the Fordney tariff bill of embargo provisions stricken out by the house on dyes and chemicals.

The attitude of the cabinet officers was learned today, when Chairman Penrose of the senate finance committee made public their letters to Mr. Fordney on the subject.

Warfare Needs Cited.

Mr. Weeks and Mr. Denby explained they favor the embargo because of the needs of national defense.

"It is of great value to the navy," Mr. eDnby said, "to encourage the development of chemical activities in connection with explosives and gases. The restoration o fthe embargo clause will be of material help and I will greatly appreciate your assistance to this effect."

Mr. Weeks declared the chemical industry was vital and that "it is of the most vital importance to our perparedness that the dye industry be developed to the fullest possible extent in this country. I urge the enactment of the embargo feature of the Fordney tariff bill as submitted to the ways and means committee as the only way to prevent crushing of our chemical market by German competition."

Ask About Propaganda.

Expenditures by the American Dyes institute in connection with propaganda for dye embargo legislation were inquired into during today's hearing before the senate finance committee. Joseph H. Choate Jr., counsel for the Dyes institute, was questioned.

Mr. Choatte said he had no knowledge of the expenditures of the Dyes institute outside of his own compensation. He said he was paid $25,000 for work done in connection with legislation up to October, 1920.

Questions were asked relative to the formation of the Chemical Foundation and the part played by persons connected with the office of the alien property custodian, which sold enemy alien dye and chemical patents to the Chemical Foundation at prices claimed by some to be less than their actual value. Mr. Choate denied that there was anything irregular in the proceeding.

Mr. Choate said that there are 158 stockholders in the Chemical Foundation, none of whome has any direct interest in the daye or textile industry.

Germans Clear 16%.

Mr. Choate in speaking of the German dye corporation, said that it had assets of $400,000,000 before the war and that dividends of the German companies have not fallen below 16 per cent since the armistice.

Senator Simmons, ranking Democrat on the committee, indicated that he does not favor an embargo.

"Difficulties are common in all lines of business," said Senator Simmons. "It is not right to tax the people for the benefit of any particular industry. It is unreasonable to ask a permanent embargo."

Bonding Firm Becomes Surety for J. W. Keller

J. Walter Keller, alleged head of a national gang of automobile thieves, appeared before Judge Wells M. Cook in South Clark street court yesterday and had his bonds transferred from the bondsmen, who deposited $10,000, to the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland. Keller explained he had always done business with that company. His case has been set for Aug. 23.

Triangle Airways
Inc.
Announces

The incorporation of passenger carrying Flying Boat lines to all points on Lake Michigan.

During the Pageant of Progress passengers will be carried on short flights up and down the lake shore over water.

These boats are the U. S. coast patrol flying boats of the H S 2L type, driven by the famous 12-cylinder Liberty Motors, and were found to be the most successful and safe of all those used by the Allies during the war.

Our pilots are all registered navy flyers who have received a post graduate course in Commercial Flying.

We do not permit our pilots to do any but straight flying—stunts are prohibited.

Tickets may be had at our salesroom or at Section Y, Nos. 76, 77, 89 and 90, at the Municipal Pier.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Sea Food — Premium Chickens — Juicy Steaks

Each of these is a Specialty at the North American

A whole Baby Lobster, hot or cold, with melted butter or Chili sauce, for 65 cents is only one of many good things to eat at low prices in the North American Restaurant.

The North American Restaurant is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of "Rector's." But this does not mean that sea-food is the only food you can get here. It makes no difference what you prefer to eat—you can always get just what you want.

Sea-food, juicy steaks, chicken—each of these is a specialty at the North American.

And because you serve yourself you pay only for food, and the cost of preparing it. So our prices are way below what any other good dining place must charge to include "service." Imagine a Breast of Chicken with Bacon, for 65 cents—or dark meat of Chicken with Bacon for 55 cents; a delicious portion of Pork Tenderloin for 35 cents; Halibut and Peas for 35 cents; Lamb Chops and Peas 65 cents; or for dinner a juicy Sirloin Steak—a real Sirloin Steak—for 75 cents.

Prices such as these, for food which can't be beaten anywhere, have made the North American the most popular dining place in Chicago.

"Fill 'Em Full"

You will go a long way without finding pies crammed as full of "goodies" as those we bake. Our pastry cook has instructions to fill 'em full of fruit only—no substitutes or fillers are used to fill space and cut the cost.

For instance: Two quarts of pitted cherries go into every cherry pie we bake. Pies are cut into five pieces and each piece sells for only 20 cents. Figure it out yourself, or ask your wife, or mother, or sister. They will tell you we make very little profit on such pies.

And whatever you do, Eat Breakfast Here!

The restaurant is big, and cool and comfortable. You can have your breakfast, read the paper, and smoke your morning cigar in real comfort. You are welcome to stay as long as you wish—there is no one to hurry you.

Your favorite fruit will be ready for you. Then for 30 cents you can have two fresh eggs—fried in butter to make them taste even better—and four strips of the finest bacon money will buy. Or a big serving of calves liver and bacon for 35 cents. For 25 cents a fluffy honey waffle, with three strips of bacon, butter, pure maple sap or honey. Crisp, fresh toast, made before your eyes for 5 cents. And for 10 cents an individual (two cup) pot of coffee with plenty of real cream.

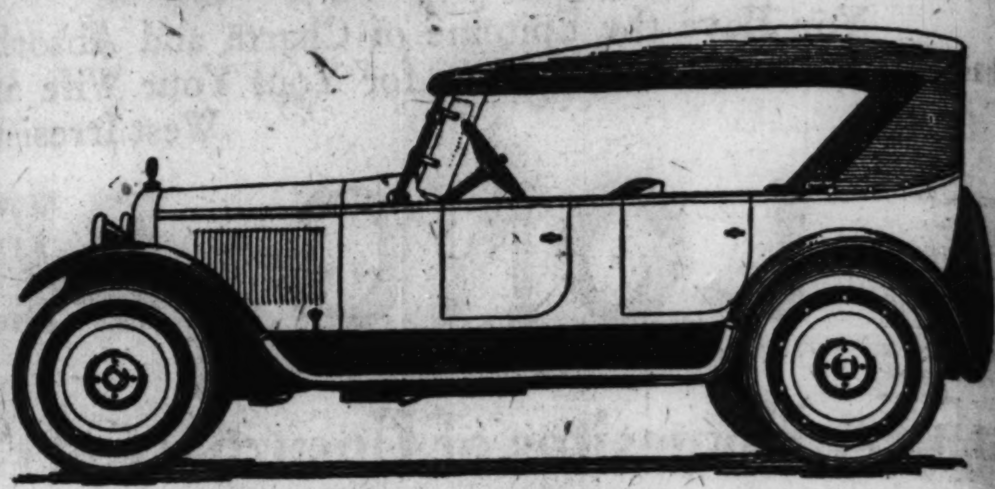
Saxon-Duplex



In This Case There's More Than One Reason

Most popular priced cars have just one real "feature" to sell you. Otherwise the car is just an ordinary—though fairly good car. But that's all.

But the Saxon-Duplex is literally covered with features.

The motor, for example. Try it out against any competitive car. Try it for speed—for abundant power—for fast getaway—for smoothness. Take the meanest hill in your neighborhood and see it fairly leap over it on "high."

Take the body design. Really, it's one of the smartest looking bodies on wheels. Low hung, simple lines—a graceful swing to the whole job and finished like a thoroughbred.

You'll be proud to own a Saxon-Duplex!

Few people know of or realize the great convenience of the Romon Lubricating System.

For with this invention you just flip a lever and oil is pumped to 28 chassis bearings. Some invention! No other car has it. Just another Saxon-Duplex feature. Most cars would sell on this one feature alone. But with the Saxon-Duplex it is but one of the many features.

We want you to drop in and look over this little beauty. She really is an extraordinary car and that's what you'll say after you have seen and felt its performance.

The Saxon-Duplex looks, acts and is a $2000 car. But shrewd raw material buying and price reductions give it to you at $1495 F. O. B. Factory.

I. C. C. REJECTS LABOR CLAIMS OF RAILROADS

Change in Wages, Not in Efficiency, Counts.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Claims of the railroad for additional compensation on account of alleged inefficiency of labor during the guaranty period of six months following the termination of federal control were rejected by the interstate commerce commission today.

The committee held in a formal decision that in fixing the maximum amount to be included in operating expenses for maintenance under the guaranty provision of the transportation act, the basic measure shall be the expenditure for maintenance during an average six months of the test period, adjusted to differences in the cost of labor and materials, and in the amount and use of the property in accordance with the provisions of the so-called standard contract. It held that differences in "the cost of labor," as those words are used in the standard contract, "do not include changes in the quality or effectiveness of labor, but only changes in wages."

Plan for Computing Expenses.

The commission also held that the maximum amount to be included in operating expenditures for maintenance under the guaranty charges representing depreciations and retirements, shall be computed upon the same basis as those which were used during an average six months of the test period.

In making its decision relative to the question of inefficiency of labor, the commission concurs in the view held by James C. Davis, director general of railroads. Such settlements as have been made by Mr. Davis with the railroads for the period of federal control have been in accordance with this position.

Recognition of the claim of the railroads for the entire period of federal control and the subsequent guaranty period would mean an additional cost to the government of several hundred million dollars.

Agreed to Waive Labor Claim.

It was announced by President Harding recently when railroad funding legislation was sought from congress that the roads had agreed to waive temporarily their claim for additional compensation because of labor inefficiency. They did not bind themselves not to press the matter in the courts later.

The decision of the commission was by a majority of votes, but was not unanimous. Dissenting views were filed by Commissioners Daniels, Potter, and Campbell. Seven members approved the majority findings, while Commissioner Hall did not participate in the case.

In the majority findings of the commission the question of efficiency of labor is commented upon as follows:

"The maintenance expenditures during the test period were the basic measure, but it was recognized that because of changes in wages and prices and in the amount and use of the property these expenditures would not serve the purpose fairly unless they were equated in accordance with such changes.

What Contract Provides.

"It is conceded that the contract provides for such equation, and there is little difference of opinion as to the process to be followed, except in the case of labor.

"So far as labor is concerned, the director general confines the equation to the change in wages, including the effect upon wages of reduction in hours of service. In the administration of his duties he is acting upon his interpretation and has already made settlements with a number of important carriers upon that basis.

"Representatives of the carrier, however, contend that the equation process ought not to stop with changes in wages, but should allow also for changes in the quality or effectiveness of labor. Unless this is done, they say, the carriers will be unjustly deprived of very large sums of money."

HUNT 'MEANEST AND CHEAPEST MOTOR VAMPIRE'

The Chicago police are seeking "the meanest and cheapest motorist in the country" and a woman who was with him Friday afternoon when his car struck Edward Nuszynski, 6 years old, 4927 South Wood street, at Wood street and Garfield boulevard.

The driver of the car, seeing another auto approaching, stopped his machine and put the boy into it. The other machine went on. Then the driver turned his car, lifted the boy out, stretched him on the grass, and gave him 25 cents on his promise not to tell any one how he was hurt. Dr. Benedict Aron, 1849 West 51st street, took the boy home.

Julius H. Mittelfuscher, 4740 Grand boulevard, was injured when he lost control of his car and it crashed into one driven by A. S. Epstein, 9 North Linden street.

Mrs. Mary Zurek, 728 North Ada street, was struck by the auto of Joseph Fisher, 1110 North Hoyne avenue.

Edward Gopinski, 10 years old, 2417 Logan boulevard, was struck by an auto driven by E. W. Schellhorn, 1530 Roosevelt road, and sustained a broken right leg.

All Parties Are Busy Organizing New Wards

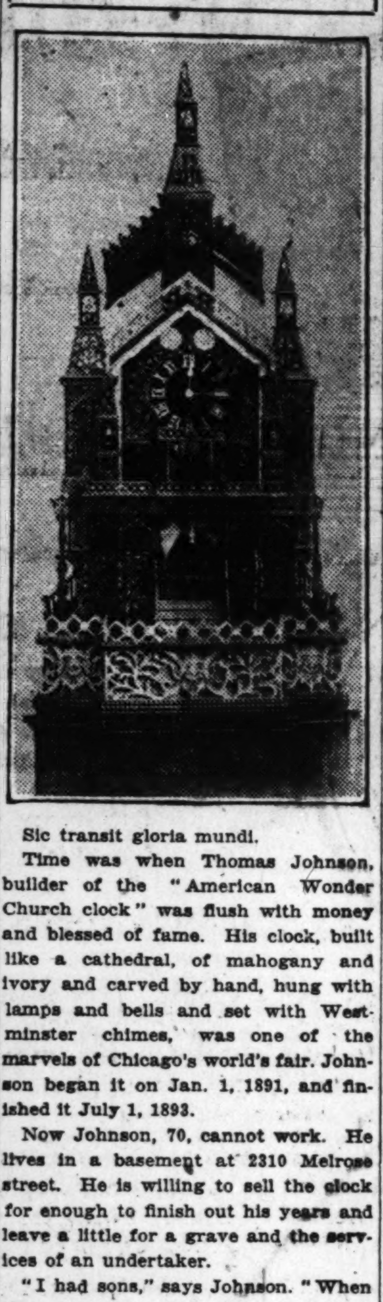
Political reorganization necessitated by the redistricting of the city is well under way. In nearly all the fifty new wards clubs are being formed by the anti-Lundin-Thompson Republicans, and it is believed the city hall forces are just as active, although they are keeping their plans to themselves. The Democratic organization also is getting its new ward units into shape, and probably will announce its local leaders soon.

JUST LIKE OLD TIMES!

Reports of a "double murder" in the saloon of Frank Wanilista, 1100 South Jefferson street, yesterday sent the police rushing there. They found Harry Burke, 1129 West Congress street, and Gus Waidula, 516 Bunker street, fighting. The pair sang together in their cell. Wanilista said the liquor was of strictly legal per cent.

HIS LAST FRIEND

Builder Would Sell Wonder Clock of Chicago World's Fair to Keep Self in His Last Years.



Sic transit gloria mundi.

Time was when Thomas Johnson, builder of the "American Wonder Church clock" was flush with money and blessed of fame. His clock, built like a cathedral, of mahogany and ivory and carved by hand, hung with lamps and bells and set with Westminster chimes, was one of the marvels of Chicago's world's fair. Johnson began it on Jan. 1, 1891, and finished it July 1, 1893.

Now Johnson, 70, cannot work. He lives in a basement at 2310 Melrose street. He is willing to sell the clock for enough to finish out his years and leave a little for a grave and the services of an undertaker.

"I had sons," says Johnson. "When they were young I cared for them. Now that they are grown up they have forgotten. They do not care for me. But this old clock, this last friend, may be my salvation. I hope to exhibit it at the Pageant of Progress. Perhaps I cannot manage that, but any one desiring it can find me here in my home."

CONSERVATOR OF WEINMAN ESTATE ASKS ACCOUNTING

A bill for an accounting was filed yesterday in the Circuit court by William E. Golden, recently appointed conservator of the estate of Parker Weinman, 84 years old, former head of the lumber firm of Weinman Brothers.

The bill asks that Mrs. Lillian G. Beardsley, 1553 Oak avenue, Evanston, be enjoined from selling any of the property Weinman is said to have given her.

Golden was appointed conservator at the request of Mrs. Jessie Barker, 5311 West Washington boulevard, a daughter of the lumberman, a week ago. The court was told Weinman had entered into a contract with Mrs. Beardsley to convey property valued at $18,000 to her and give her $2,500 in cash, for which she was to make a home for him and give him $20 a week as long as he lived.

Mrs. Beardsley said she had made such an arrangement, but that when she learned Weinman's daughter objected she refused to sign it.

TREASURY O. K.'S PLANS TO AVOID NEW TAX LEVIES

Must Be Actual and Not "Just Talk."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Treasury officials have informed the house ways and means committee that suggestions of Chairman Fordney, Republican Leader Mondell, and Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee for avoiding new taxes are excellent if the contemplated savings in expenditures are actually put into effect, instead of merely being talked about.

The treasury officials do not attempt to take issue with the estimates of the house leaders as to the possible $500,000,000 reduction in expenditures of the treasury.

They point out, however, that on the basis of appropriations as they now stand, together with unexpended balances, revolving funds, and other provisions under which the treasury actually has to pay out money, the government cannot be run during the coming year without some additional tax levies. They admit that the reductions can be made, but emphasize the fact that the treasury is powerless to make them and that such cuts are up to congress.

Congress Must Slash.

Unless congress withdraws authorization for expenditures already made or otherwise takes steps to keep expenditures down, the treasury officials insist it will be a mistake to reduce taxes on the theory that department officials can make both ends meet somehow.

As an example of the manner in which reductions could be made, it is pointed out that while the army appropriation bill carries a total of something more than $300,000,000, the official estimates of the war department as to actual expenditures run considerably more than $400,000,000. The difference is accounted for in that there is an unexpended balance from the previous year which the war department is authorized to spend.

Another saving can be made in connection with the shipping board, it is said. The board has estimated that it will need at least $200,000,000 additional, and the question remains whether congress actually will keep this appropriation down to $100,000,000 or less.

Chairman Fordney reiterated again today that the estimated expenditures can be kept down to $500,000,000 less than the $4,550,000,000 estimated by the treasury. If this can be done the problems of the committee are greatly simplified.

Approve Surtax Increase.

It is the understanding that the treasury officials do not believe that congress will approve all of the new taxes suggested. It is the treasury belief that surtax rates on incomes between $6,000 and $50,000 should be increased, not only to furnish revenue which will be lost by the reduction in the higher surtaxes, but to equalize the surtax scale. The rates on incomes between these amounts, it is contended, are too low in comparison with those on incomes below $6,000 and those above $50,000.

However, the sentiment of the committee is against any increase in surtax. It is estimated that eventually the increased yield due to the elimination of the higher surtax rates will make up for the loss due to the repeal of the present maximum rates.

1921 Income Vs. 1922.

Whether the reduced income tax provisions shall be made effective for income of 1921 or for 1922 is being discussed as a result of the constantly dwindling estimates of the revenue. The promises by the Republican leaders have been to the effect that the reduced tax law would apply on incomes of the calendar year 1921. The estimates of the treasury show that if the revision is made effective for the income of 1922 the revnue for 1922 will be $55,000,000 greater than if it is made effective for 1921. Whether this additional revenue furnishes sufficient incentive to cause the leaders to go back on their promises has not been determined.

Republican members of the committee today practically completed consideration of the administrative provisions of the proposed tax bill as prepared by the treasury department. The committee approved substantially the entire draft so far as administrative sections were concerned.

FIVE UNDERSELL MARKET DEALERS; ARE ARRESTED!

Market Master August Schultz of the Randolph street market had five men arrested for selling from wagons. They appeared before Judge Laurence B. Jacobs in the Desplaines street court yesterday.

"What did they do to merit such action?" asked Judge Jacobs.

"Why, they're killing trade around there," said Schultz. "These fellows come in from the suburbs and sell tomatoes for 60 cents a basket while other dealers in the market sell the same article for $1.20."

"Underselling your men in the market is not sufficient reason to hold them," said Judge Jacobs.

Schultz then hastened to explain that he did not have the men arrested for underselling lessees of the stalls in his market, but because they were operating without a license. The case was continued until Aug. 11.

PRICE OF BACON BELOW NORMAL, BULLETIN SAYS

"The wholesale price of fancy bacon is only a few cents above that of fancy hams," says the bulletin of the Institute of American Meat Packers," and standard bacon weighing twelve to fourteen pounds can be obtained at wholesale for 25 to 30 cents less than ham of the same grade.

"As compared with ham, standard bacon is cheaper than normally and should offer an advantage in retail stores to the consumer choosing between these two cuts.

"The export trade during July, although it naturally slackened somewhat following the vigorous buying revival in June, was of encouraging proportions, far exceeding the foreign business during the same month last year. England was the best buyer."

Fear Two Racine Men Lost in Launch in Midlake

Fear was expressed last night for the safety of Philip Racine and Anthony Marsch, who left Racine, Wis., last Monday in the launch Sunshine for Benton Harbor, Mich., to return with a load of fruit for a Racine commission house. The launch should have arrived at Benton Harbor Tuesday noon, but it has not reported at any Lake Michigan port. It is feared the boat foundered in mid-lake with the two men.

Select Your Bank With Care

When choosing a bank in which to deposit your money, you should consider—the prominence, experience and integrity of its Officers and Directors; the long years of continuous service and the reputation of the bank;

the volume of Capital and Surplus protecting the deposits;

the Stockholders are liable for an amount equal to the Capital, and are people able to meet that liability.

If these suggestions are of value to you, then we submit them in the interest of our Bank, which has served its depositors continuously for more than 48 years, has a combined Capital, Surplus and Undivided Profits of $16,000,000, and whose Officers and Directors are favorably known to the citizens of Chicago.

In 4 Trips Across America
Essex 4 Times Breaks Record

Fastest Time Between New York and San Francisco Beaten by 12 Hours, 48 Minutes
New York - Chicago Record Also Falls

Four Essex touring cars, carrying the first United States transcontinental motor mails, between New York and San Francisco, have set the time records for their respective directions across the American continent. The distance each car travelled was 3347 miles.

The New York to Chicago automobile record was also beaten.

The fastest Essex time was made from San Francisco to New York in 4 days, 14 hours and 43 minutes, breaking the record by 12 hours, 48 minutes.

A Reliability Proof That Speaks for Every Essex

The average time for all four cars was 4 days, 21 hours. These records cover the actual time from the moment the cars were checked out of New York and San Francisco with U. S. Mail, until they checked in at their respective destinations on opposite sides of the continent.

The purpose of this Essex test was to prove its reliability, not merely with one car; but with four. The closeness of the respective transcontinental time for the four cars, proves the consistency of performance and endurance that characterizes all Essex cars. Every requirement of motor car performance was met a thousand times by these cars, in their cross continent run.

Consider that hundreds of cars have attempted to break the transcontinental record. You have rarely heard of these attempts for the failures have not been given circulation.

Yet isn't it a remarkable and convincing proof of Essex ability and endurance that the only four Essex cars that ever challenged for the coveted transcontinental record were in every case successful?

The foregoing announcement was published a year ago. It is republished today in celebration of the first anniversary of this memorable record, and because Essex position today remains unchanged and unchallenged. More than 50,000 owners know its endurance, service and quality.

GIANTS ROUTED BY O'FARRELL'S HOMER

ORAL PLUNGING; S O S FOR FUNDS; IT'S GREAT GAME

Betting System at N. Y. Racetracks Explained.

BY AL COPLAND.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—"The game is good. Send more money."

This could easily be the S. O. S. sent out from any track by turf pilgrims who have been made financially weary by inconsistent running, or manipulation, or any one of the innumerable other reasons which govern this entrancing and uncertain sport.

It is a sure thing that the wires out of this Mecca of horsedom will hum requests for the whitherwithal to get back to the old home town if there isn't a rightabout face movement which will argue for a condition the opposite to the present one, through the medium of which the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

No Betting; No Breeding.

The race course test is concededly the groundwork which supports the breeding edifice. Without betting, however, there would be little or no chance for the continuation of racing and the necessity for the breeding of thoroughbreds. In England and elsewhere "killjoys" have tried to put on the full stop pedal in order to shut off betting and of necessity racing, which would mean the stoppage of the breeding industry.

While, in order to perpetuate the ...e, which must have the right sort of blood coursing through his veins, it is necessary to have racing, it must be said that the latter couldn't exist without the speculative side, in which the public is most seriously concerned.

Jockey Club Not "In."

The Jockey club does not recognize betting. According to the law, it is permissible to wager on the ponies on tracks within the jurisdiction of the Jockey club via the oral system. This permits John Jones to ask John Doe what he is willing to "lay" on a certain horse, any horse. If the odds are acceptable he writes on a slip the horse's name, the amount of the bet and his name, handing the slip to the "layer," which completes the transaction until the next day, when payment one way or the other is made.

No money changes hands once the ...es show in the paddock for the ...ing race. Those who are known as the "oralers"—the present day impersonators of the former bookmaking trade—do business "on the nod," tendering the customary ticket once a ... has become satisfactory.

The "Deposit Gents."

Those who are practically unknown ...want to speculate on the speed and stamina of the "gee gees" are "accommodated" after they have put up a "deposit," which they play against ... having been "introduced" to an ...er before the beginning of the day's ...gs.

As a general proposition the "punter" who has credit and "nodding" acquaintance with many of the lawn merchants, has a percentage shade on his brother who is at the tender mercy of the "layer" with whom he has his deposit. The first named can "shop," ... he can ask everywhere the price that hits his fancy. He does not have to confine himself to one "layer" and ... price like the moths about the flame. The gentry who put up deposits generally wind up in being "percented" to financial death. They are forced to take what is quoted by the man with whom they can bet or can leave it alone. Inasmuch as they must bet if they are to win or they must take what is quoted like it.

Any One Quotes Odds.

The open system has done away ... former generally known bookmakers. The lawn, about which the successor of the one time "bookie" perambulates—he is kept moving by the Jockey club "pinks"—shows a hundred or more who are willing to take a chance with their "nodding" acquaintances. Whereas in times gone by "some one" collected a tax from books which was paid so that they could do business, the assumption being that the different racing associations profited by the $100 per day from each odds purveyor, nowadays, any one can "quote" odds.

No one pays anybody anything for the privilege of "doing business" with ... condition, resulting in an influx of many "bookies" who know about as much about what they are doing as they do about the fourth dimension.

Exclusive in Clubhouse.

While the lawn in front of the grandstand sometimes shows as many "layers as players, the clubhouse inmates has a vastly limited number. There are nine, to be exact. While on the lawn it is a case of any man being a layer, the opposite is the ... the clubhouse, where those who are enabled to "quote odds" do so because they have received a special dispensation and do business on credit only.

The scheme here is as near the Tattersall system in England as can be ..., the only difference being that Tattersall's settlements are made weekly, while here the operation is concluded daily. That is, the operation is concluded daily if the punter settles. Sometimes the poor "bookie" ... a day and days before some ... comes to the surface and gets ... the financial sea and sometimes the punters never come to the surface with what they owe and become ... with the steadily growing band ...

While the "bookies" are heard to ... the "runouts" times without

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

REFEREE'S DECISION FINAL.

"WHAT is the remedy, then, for conditions such as took place at Cleveland if the decision of the referee cannot be overruled?" inquired a friend with whom we were arguing the Wilson-Downey fiasco at Cleveland.

"Employment only of referees appointed by the commissions of states or cities which recognize boxing," we replied.

That sounds simple enough, but it answers the whole question. By its sanction of a referee, the commission is estopped from attempting to overrule his decision. If he is incompetent or dishonest, he will not be allowed to officiate again. Cleveland's commission accepted an outside referee for whom it did not feel responsible. This was a mistake of judgment.

Experience for a referee is almost as necessary as honesty. In states where decisions are allowed, the manager of a visiting fighter attaches even more importance to experience because he fears the cheers of the crowd for the home product may influence the arbiter's judgment even if the latter does not realize it.

Inexperience has produced many weird mistakes in the squared circle. Honesty of the third man in the ring seldom has been questioned, except as an alibi by disgruntled managers or bettors. Perhaps the most noted case was that at San Francisco in 1896 when Wyatt Earp awarded a victory to Tom Sharkey over Bob Fitzsimmons on a foul.

Endless confusion would ensue if referee's decisions were subject to review by every state or city boxing commission.

New York Board's Edict.

New York's boxing commission, in our opinion, showed exceptional judgment in its solution of the Wilson-Downey problem. It recognized the referee's decision as final, which is axiomatic in sport, but in view of the unusual circumstances decreed that as a condition precedent to the appearance of either Wilson or Downey against other opponents in that state the pair must settle their title dispute in the ring.

The two battlers accepted the gauge, and Tex Rickard secured the match for Labor day. Wilson thus has taken the step we deemed necessary for him if he hoped to retain the good opinion of fistic followers.

The Lively Bawl.

Dear Harvey: I have a suggestion whereby every major league ball club may be placed upon paying basis, i. e., make the vendors pay the usual admission fee. They could make the wheat pit resemble a convention of deaf mutes. Recently I learned the "Batteries for today's game were, for the visitors, peanunts and kushens, and, for the home team, crackerjack and chewin' gum. Yours for a less lively bawl, Tubbie.

A PASS WE ONCE GAVE.

Agitation over the propriety of charging a 50 cent admission fee to the Pageant of Progress on the city owned Municipal pier reminds us of an office boy who swarmed on the sporting department for passes to all events, no matter what their nature.

When THE TRIBUNE silver skates derby, held every winter on Humboldt park lagoon, came round he was on deck as usual and insisted on a pass. So we gave him a politely worded request to the west park police to admit him to Humboldt park on the day in question. He returned that night delighted with the race, and related: "When I showed that note to the cop he told me to step right into the crowd and get a good view. You must have a great drag out there."

Poker Series—No. 1.

THE AMATEUR WHO GUMS THE GAME.
He deals three cards when you call for two,
He bets a red when he means a blue;
When the pot is won, he holds his hand,
And snorts and yells to beat the band.
We grind our teeth and dumbly wait
While he tries to figure out a straight.
A sickly grin spreads o'er his face
When he learns a deuce won't beat an ace.
When he holds three hearts he paws the air
As I take the chips with one small pair;
It never occurs to his half-baked mind
That three of a suit aren't three of a kind.
Let's try to kepe the old game pure
And raise the bars to the amateur.
HOOSIER PAT.

Hoosier Pat neglected to mention one other perfectly good reason for barring the amateur, which is—he usually wins.

KANGAROOS PUSH BRITISH OUT OF DAVIS CUP PLAY

Australasians Divide the Singles for 3-2 Win.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 6.—J. O. Anderson of Australasia defeated F. G. Lowe of the British isles, 6—2, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2, in the first match today of the Davis cup tennis second round on the courts of the Alleghany Country club near here. This eliminated the players from the British isles and entitled the Australasians to play the Denmark team at Cleveland next week in the Davis cup semi-final round.

In the last event of the series here Maxwell Woosnam of the British isles defeated J. B. Hawkes of Australasia, 6—3, 0—6, 6—3, 6—3. This made the result of the completed series three matches to two in favor of Australasia.

Anderson Forces Play.

Anderson was in splendid form in the first set, scoring 28 points to Lowe's 18. He served in splendid fashion, and was adept with his returns, in both first and second sets. In the latter set he scored 44 to Lowe's 38 points.

Lowe was faulty in serving and also seemed unable to judge his placement shots accurately. Anderson had Lowe on the jump from side line to side line, while he himself had no trouble in reaching the ball.

In the third set Lowe made a desperate stand, and at the same time Anderson appeared to grow careless. Lowe won the second, third, fourth, and fifth games by placing his shots almost perfectly. His footwork improved materially, and after the eighth game went to deuce, he took the extra points necessary to win. Lowe had 50 points to Anderson's 20 in this set.

Unable to Continue Pace.

Lowe was unable to continue the pace, and Anderson had it all his own way except for the sixth game of the fourth set, a deuce game won by Anderson. In the last two games the Australian scored 8 points to 2 for Lowe. The final point scores for the set were Anderson 28, Lowe 16. Point and stroke analysis:

	S.	G.	P.	N.	O.	Pl.	Sv. a.	Dbl. ft.
J. O. Anderson, Australaisa	3	21	120	24	47	55	5	6
F. G. Lowe, British Isles	1	13	102	25	32	21	4	3

By Net Play by Woosman.

With the issue decided by the first match the closing contest between Woosman and Hawkes did no excite a great deal of interest, although the play was closely watched. Woosman won the match by his superior work at the net. Point and stroke analysis:

WASHBURN WINS FROM WILLIAMS IN TENNIS FINALS

Newport, R. I., Aug. 6.—Watson M. Washburn, New York, defeated R. Norris Williams II., of Boston, in the final round of the singles in the annual Rhode Island invitation tennis tournament here this afternoon. The scores were 4—6, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2.

Watson M. Washburn and R. N. Williams II. won the doubles championship, defeating Robert and Howard Kinsey in straight sets, 6—0, 6—0, 6—4.

NET HONORS FOR MRS. MALLORY

Glencove, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, women's national tennis champion, won the Metropolitan women's championship today by defeating Mrs. Marion Zinderstein-Jessup of Wilmington, Del., 6—1, 7—5, in the final match.

GOSSOON WINS CHICAGO CLUB CLASS R RACE

E. M. Railton's Marconi rigged R boat Gossoon won the series contest yesterday afternoon over the Chicago Yacht club's regular course in handy fashion, beating Ogden T. McClurg's Yank, second boat to finish, by fifty-nine seconds. The yachts sailed in a northwest breeze which suited the windjammers. The winner's time was 1:32:23.

Gossoon took the lead in the first round and kept it all the way, although Yank was coming fast at the finish and cut Gossoon's lead a half a minute on the second lap.

Webster brothers' Minnow took first place in the one design contest, its time being 1:06:07, forty-eight seconds better than that of Ancona II., which was next to cross the line. Alert was third. Summaries:

RED SOX CLOUTS DOWN GLEASONS IN 9 TO 4 SCRAP

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Boston made it three out of four from the White Sox by grabbing the final game of the series today, 9 to 4.

The Red Sox hit Wilkinson hard and he retired after six innings, Davenport finishing. Pennock and Russell hurled for Boston and held the Sox safe in all except the fourth round, when the Sox scored four. Mostil tripled in that inning with the bases filled.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

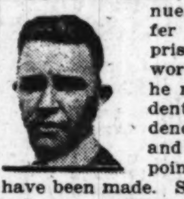
The Question.

What do you think of the change in management of the Cubs?

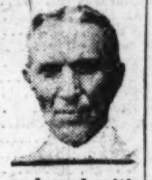
Where Asked.

Municipal pier.

The Answers.



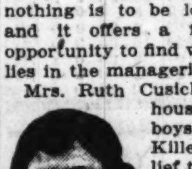
Leslie F. Muter, 7359 Harvard avenue, secretary—Killefer will no doubt surprise us and is well worthy of the position he now holds. He evidently has the confidence of both owners and players, or his appointment would not have been made. Success to him.



James A. Pugh, Benton Harbor, Mich., hotel owner—I believe the change will have a stimulating effect on the players and put more pep in them. Killefer's years of experience in the big leagues should fit him admirably for the managership provided he is endowed with the right temperament.

Gertrude Haffnere, 1059 Foster avenue, home girl—I think it is a good change, as Evers did not come up to expectations with the material he had on the Cubs' team. Killefer's appointment should be a pep injector, as he is one of the boys, and through his years of association should have a good knowledge of how to handle the men.

Mrs. Tunis Everly, 2400 Congress street, housewife — I think the switch in managers should prove beneficial to the team and that it will show a great improvement in every way. Certainly nothing is to be lost, and it offers a fine opportunity to find whether the trouble lies in the managerial end.



Mrs. Ruth Cusick, Danville, Ill., housewife—I think the boys will work hard for Killefer. It is my belief that the trouble lies with the pitching staff. Vaughn, Tyler, and Alexander have all fallen far below what their past records led us to expect. This condition offers Killefer a wonderful opportunity to profit by his catching experience.

ANOTHER HYDRO SINKS IN LAKE; RACES CUT SHORT

The speedboat races off the Municipal pier in connection with Chicago's Pageant of Progress were called off at 3:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon because of rough water. Three races already had been run at that time and when Meteor III., owned by Walter B. Wilde of Peoria sank, it was decided to cancel the day's events. The crew of Meteor III. was rescued. The boat was the third to sink in the three days of racing.

The race course, although protected by breakwaters and by the pier, had been unusually rough all day, and when a freshening breeze rendered navigation even more difficult, it was decided not to risk further accidents.

Pekin Boat Is Winner.

Miss Margaret III., owned by L. E. Selby of Pekin, Ill., won the first race of five miles for boats of the 151 class. Miss Quincy IV. [C. E. Padgett, Quincy, Ill.], was second. Miss Peoria also started. The time was 10:41.

The second race, class 705, of ten miles, was won by B. & B. II. with Doc's (Van Sant and Whipple, Peoria, Ill.], second. It was in this race that Meteor III. sank in twenty-four feet of water. The time was 16:48.

Gunboat Crews in Cutter Race.

Preceding the speedboat races, crews from the United States gunboats Antic, Essex, and Wilmette, staged a cutter race, with the Essex representatives winning easily.

SHEBOYGAN BARS ACQUITTED SOX FROM PLAYING

Sheboygan, Wis., Aug. 6.—Eight former members of the Chicago White Sox recently acquitted by a jury of charges that they took part in a gamblers' conspiracy to throw the 1919 world series games, were refused permission to play against the Chairmakers of the Lake Shore league, it was announced today. It was declared that E. L. Siekmeyer of Chicago sought an exhibition game here for the former White Sox.

"We realize that a game between the Chairmakers and the 'Black Sox' would be a big financial drawing card here," said an announcement issued by one of the directors of the club. "But we refused to sign for such a game. It is true that a jury has acquitted these players, but they are still under the shadow of shame, as far as the principles of organized baseball are concerned, and until that stigma has been removed we will not permit our team to play with them."

Mexican Embassy Denies Johnson-Dempsey Interest

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—The Mexican embassy today issued a statement denying that the Mexican government wants to arrange a bout between Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Jack Johnson, former titleholder. "Official advices deny the hnwarranted report," the annosncement stated.

INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE SPORTS.

International collegiate track and field sports are likely to be an annual fixture now that the recent sports between the combined Harvard and Yale and Princeton and Cornell vs. Cambridge and Oxford was so successful.

BOB O'FARRELL.

Bob O'Farrell does not aspire to break any Babe Ruth records, but he broke up a ball game as effectually as Bambino ever did when he whaled a fly over the right field wall at Cub park yesterday with the bases full in the fourth inning and drove in the runs which enabled his pals to lick the Giants in the first of a four game set, 7 to 4.

That body blow by O'Farrell followed a rally in the first half of the fourth in which the Giants had tapped Virgil Cheeves for triplets, giving them what listened like a commanding lead the way Ryan was slabbing for them. When the dust raised by the scurrying Cub feet cleared away the home team was leading 5 to 4 and Cheeves held onto that lead while Ryan gave way to Phil Douglas in the fifth and allowed the Cubs two runs in the seventh.

Grimes and Barber Aid.

Grimes and Barber aided Cheeves materially in the defensive end of the game with some plays that were life savers, but the Cub hurler had to contend with some support that was not so good.

Barber raced in and scooped a low liner off his shoetops in the sixth inning with a runner on third and one out, then winged the ball home true as the traditional arrow, nailing the Giant runner at the pan by a wide margin. Grimes made a circus catch of a liner from Bancroft's bat in the fifth, staving off a probable run, and in the ninth he wound up the scrap with a fast and clever double play off a hot bounder from Rawlings' bat.

Opening Innings Airtight.

There were three innings of placid, airtight baseball before the explosive fourth gave the rooters cause to weep and then to shout. In the first half Bancroft opened with a single. Frisch hit a hopper which looked good for a double play, but it bounded over Kelleher's head for a single and let Bancroft to third. Young beat out a slow bounder to Kelleher, scoring Bancroft. Frisch made a dash for third. O'Farrell threw him out but Deal dropped the ball.

On an attempted double steal Frisch was headed off at the plate and finally got back to third alive, but they ran Young to death between second and third. Kelly walked. Meusel singled, driving Kelly to third, and he scored on an infield out.

Cubs Take Running Jump.

Hollocher led in the home half with a single. Kelleher followed suit and so did Grimes, scoring Hollocher. Barber sacrificed, but Maisel popped out, then Deal was passed as a precautionary measure, filling the bags with two down. O'Farrell chose that time to wallop the ball over the wall into Sheffield avenue and chase three runs in ahead of his own. Cheeves fouled out, and Douglas went in to pitch the rest of the way.

The Giants scored once more in the seventh on a Texas league double by Meusel. Two long flies enabled Meusel to complete the circuit.

The Cubs came back with two in their half. One was down when Douglas slipped a pass to Cheeves. Flack popped out, but Hollocher whaled a fly over Meusel's head for two bags and Cheeves registered. Kelleher gave Hollocher a ride home on a single to center and stole second himself, but Grimes took a look at a third strike.

Sanders and Hutchinson in Interstate Net Finals

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 6—Clarence Sanders and Myron Hutchinson of St. Paul, won their way to the finals of the doubles event of the interstate tennis tournament here today when they defeated Clark Stone and Carl Stuckeman of Sioux Falls, S. D., 6—0, 6—1, 6—2. As a result of their victory, Sanders and Hutchinson will play the winner of the Brown and Smith, Meyer and Gross, semi-finals match in the finals tomorrow.

NO. 39 FOR RUTH, BUT HIS MISCUE HANDS TYS GAME

New York, Aug. 6.—Detroit took a close game from New York, 9 to 8, today, despite two spirited rallies by the Yankees late in the contest.

39

Ruth hit his thirty-ninth home run of the season in the sixth inning with two men on base, but his failure to get under a short fly in the ninth let in the winning run. Blue hit a double and four singles in six times at bat. Score:

LOGAN SQUARES UPSET FIREMEN

The galloping firemen made the Logan Squares battle to the limit to gain a 6 to 3 win at Logan Square park yesterday. The firemen ran into a batch of bad breaks in the fourth round and this mess resulted in four tllies and the game for the Squares. Freeman was nicked for two scores in the ninth, bu tthe firemen lacked the finishing punch. Score:

WAR VETS CHEER AS ROBINS BUMP PIRATES, 3 TO 2

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 6.—Brooklyn defeated Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, today in the first game of the series between the Dodgers and Pirates. Seven thousand veterans of the Eightieth division, gathered here for a reunion, watched the game and presented John Miljus, Brooklyn pitcher, who is a war veteran, with a loving cup. Miljus' sore arms prevented him from pitching and after walking the first two men up he was relieved by Cadore. Brooklyn scored the winning run in the third on two hits and a sacrifice. Score:

WOODS and WATERS

GETTING THE FISH HOME.

When good luck is on the side of the vacationist and there is a surplus of fish, he often is confronted with the problem of shipping some to the folks back home. At some resorts where they have "knocked down" boxes and plenty of ice in the ice house, it is a simple matter, but the angler in camp, miles from an ice house and the railroad, has a different problem.

LARRY ST. JOHN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

If ice is to be had, by all means pack your fish in it. There is a tradition, entirely without foundation, we believe, that fish lose in flavor if they come in direct contact with the ice. Commercial fish men, who know their business, pack fish that way with good results, but they use enough ice to prevent it from melting away before the fish reach their destination. If the ice supply is limited, the fish may be wrapped in wet grass or wet paper and surrounded with the ice.

If the fish are shipped without ice, they should be opened and cleaned, but not washed, the gills removed, each fish wiped perfectly dry, and wrapped in numerous thicknesses of thick paper, or paper and hay; grass should not be used because it "heats." Fish that are shipped wet should never be allowed to dry until ready for use, and fish that are shipped dry should be kept free from moisture.

Fish shipped in ice and frozen should be thawed in ice water before being cooked. Incidentally, we have observed that fish are washed too much before being cooked. Walton and the other old fishing writers, who were experts at cooking fish as well as at catching them, took great pains to warn the reader about too much washing, and they always direct the cook to wipe the fish with a cloth before cooking them.

The angler camped in an out-of-the-way place should smoke his surplus catch in warm weather. Smoking fish is not at all complicated, nor does it require a great deal of apparatus. A practical smoke house can be rigged up with the use of a barrel or packing case. It should have some sort of chimney or egress for smoke at the top and a small door at the bottom, for putting in fuel and providing a draft. Any dry wood may be used for fuel except fat pine, which gives a resinous flavor. Dry driftwood is about the best fuel a fisherman can get; corn cobs are good; green wood or damp wood should not be used.

Small fishes, such as trout, bass, herring, mooneyes, and the pan fishes, should be oponed and cleaned, but not scaled. Then they should be put in a brine, made with one pound of salt to every gallon of water, and left over night. The next morning they should be taken from the brine, washed thoroughly in fresh water, hung up to drain well, and smoked from three to four hours.

If the weather is damp and the fish not thoroughly dried in the air before being smoked, they should be dried in the smoke house by allowing a little flame at first.

Large catfish should be skinned, pickled in strong brine, and smoked seven or eight hours. Eels also should be skinned, and require about five hours of smoking. Dogfish should be opened and eviscerated, the backbone removed and then packed in dry salt to form its own brine. They should stay in this brine twelve hours and should be soaked in fresh water an hour before being smoked.

Carp are smoked in the same way, except that the fish is "fleeced" by removing the scales and the underlying skin with a very sharp knife, working from the tail towards the head.

The whole trick in smoking fish lies in the manipulation of the draft. It requires a little practice, but once "the hang of the thing" is acquired, smoking is not much more bother than packing in ice. Try smoking carp, dogfish, garpike, and other varieties supposed to be "not good to eat," sometime. The results will surprise you.

MAX CAREY TIES RECORD WITH 11 OUTS IN FIELD

In aiding Pittsburgh to win over the Giants July 25, Max [Scoops] Carey, Pirate center fielder, equaled the major league fielding record by catching eleven flies hit by Giant batsmen, made two doubles, a single, scored half of his team's six runs, and called it a day.

Carey's achievement is said to equal the mark set by Hap Felsch of the 1919 White Sox, when he took twelve chances without a slip in a game with Cleveland. One of them was an assist, however.

$25,000 PURSE FOR GRIFFMEN IF THEY WIN FLAG

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—The Washington American league baseball club having won eleven straight games, the last three from Cleveland, the league leaders, local enthusiasts are aroused to hopes for a pennant in the national capital. As an incentive for continued victories by the Washington club a group of business men fans have agreed to raise a purse of $25,000, $1,000 for each man on the Washington club, if the team wins the American league pennant.

"We are going out for the pennant," said Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, "irrespective of any special incentives offered."

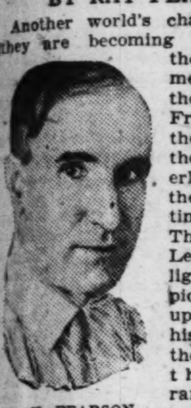
TENDLER IS ONLY BOXER WITH HOPE TO UPSET BENNY

Gets His Big Chance in Title Bout Friday.

BY RAY PEARSON.



RAY PEARSON.

Another world's championship tilt (they are becoming quite common these warm summer days) is on the card for next Friday and with the staging of it the City of Brotherly Love hops to the pugilistic "big time" once more. This time Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, is called upon to defend his title against the only boy in the lightweight ranks who is conceded a chance to dethrone him. That boy is Lew Tendler of Philadelphia.

For no less than two years promoters, big and small, in all sections of the country have been trying to "hook" this match, because Leonard as titleholder was going along invariably knocking over the boys who were sent against him, while Tendler, who is one of those sou'paw battlers, also was cleaning up the competitive crowd in masterful style.

Neither Knows Defeat.

In this time neither has suffered a trimming. The worst that happened to Tendler was a tough and rather even quarrel with Sailor Freedman of Chicago. Early in that contest Tendler broke his right thumb and damaged a finger on his sou'paw.

No excuses were offered by Tendler for his showing against the sailor, but the fact that he was out of the game for nearly four months after that contest is plenty of evidence that his alibi wasn't manufactured. During his layoff Tendler submitted to a couple of operations, having the damaged finger sawed off at the first joint, while a large piece of splintered bone was removed from his right mitt.

Tendler's hands are strong again, and as he is youthful, he's at his best for his supreme test next Friday.

Rickard Wanted Match.

Just how he happened to get the big chance is interesting. Tex Rickard was planning to pull this match on Labor day in the big Jersey City arena in which Dempsey and Carpentier fought, but Tex had so many irons in the fire that he couldn't give this one bout the necessary attention. This gave Herman Taylor, the Philadelphia promoter, who had plenty of time, the opportunity to snatch it, and when Taylor grabs for a thing he usually comes away with it.

In this respect Taylor resembles Rickard.

Each Asks Big Money.

Herman didn't find it easy to sign Leonard and Tendler, because both demanded a huge pull at the box office swag. But being a good business man, he made terms which were acceptable and didn't let it get away. That's the reason these two lightweights are going to battle in the Philadelphia National league baseball park next Friday.

With what has been happening to champions in recent weeks, the fellows who follow this glove wielding game are beginning to wonder if Leonard is due for an upset. Benjamin, of course, will enter the ring favorite over Tendler, but betting odds don't decide battles, as has been often demonstrated in recent years.

The most recent happenings we refer to were the dethronement of Champion Joe Lynch, by Pete Herman, and the lambasting that Middleweight Champion Johnny Wilson suffered in the encounter with Bryan Downey at Cleveland, which ended in one of those disgraceful jams.

Scheduled for a Knockout.

The fact that Leonard and Tendler are billed to settle the issue in eight rounds gives promise of a world of action in this limited tilt. Both are prepared to punch, for that is the long suit of each. It is Tendler's big chance—a chance he wouldn't have grabbed if he thought he was scheduled for a loser's end. Talking with Tendler a little more than a month ago—just before the match was clinched—he said to me:

"I'm ready for Leonard right now and my work in this contest will mean everything to me. It will be necessary for me to put out Benny to win the title, and I'm going right out to land a knockout. There won't be any of this stalling in my work. I've simply got to fight this way, because if Leonard beats me, I'm practically through as a card.

"If I upset him, and I think I have a mighty good chance, I'll be on top of the lightweight world, and that's where I aim to be after Aug. 12."

Leonard Is Cocky.

The cocky Leonard never enters a battle looking for defeat. He's the personification of confidence. As far back as a year ago, when promoters were making an effort to match him with Tendler, I talked with Benny about such a contest.

"Say, Benny, isn't this fellow Tendler with his sou'paw attack liable to get you all knotted up?" we asked.

"Oh, yesh, yesh, yesh," answered the champion jocularly, a smile playing over his face. "Have you ever noticed that I'm so easily knotted up by the way these other fellows pile into me with their wallops? Of course, I know that there's something different about these sou'paws, but I'll figure it out all right and in plenty of time.

"If I have to do any guessing, I won't be at the job very long. A fighter's a fighter, right or left handed, and the champion will go right along and show why he is the champion."

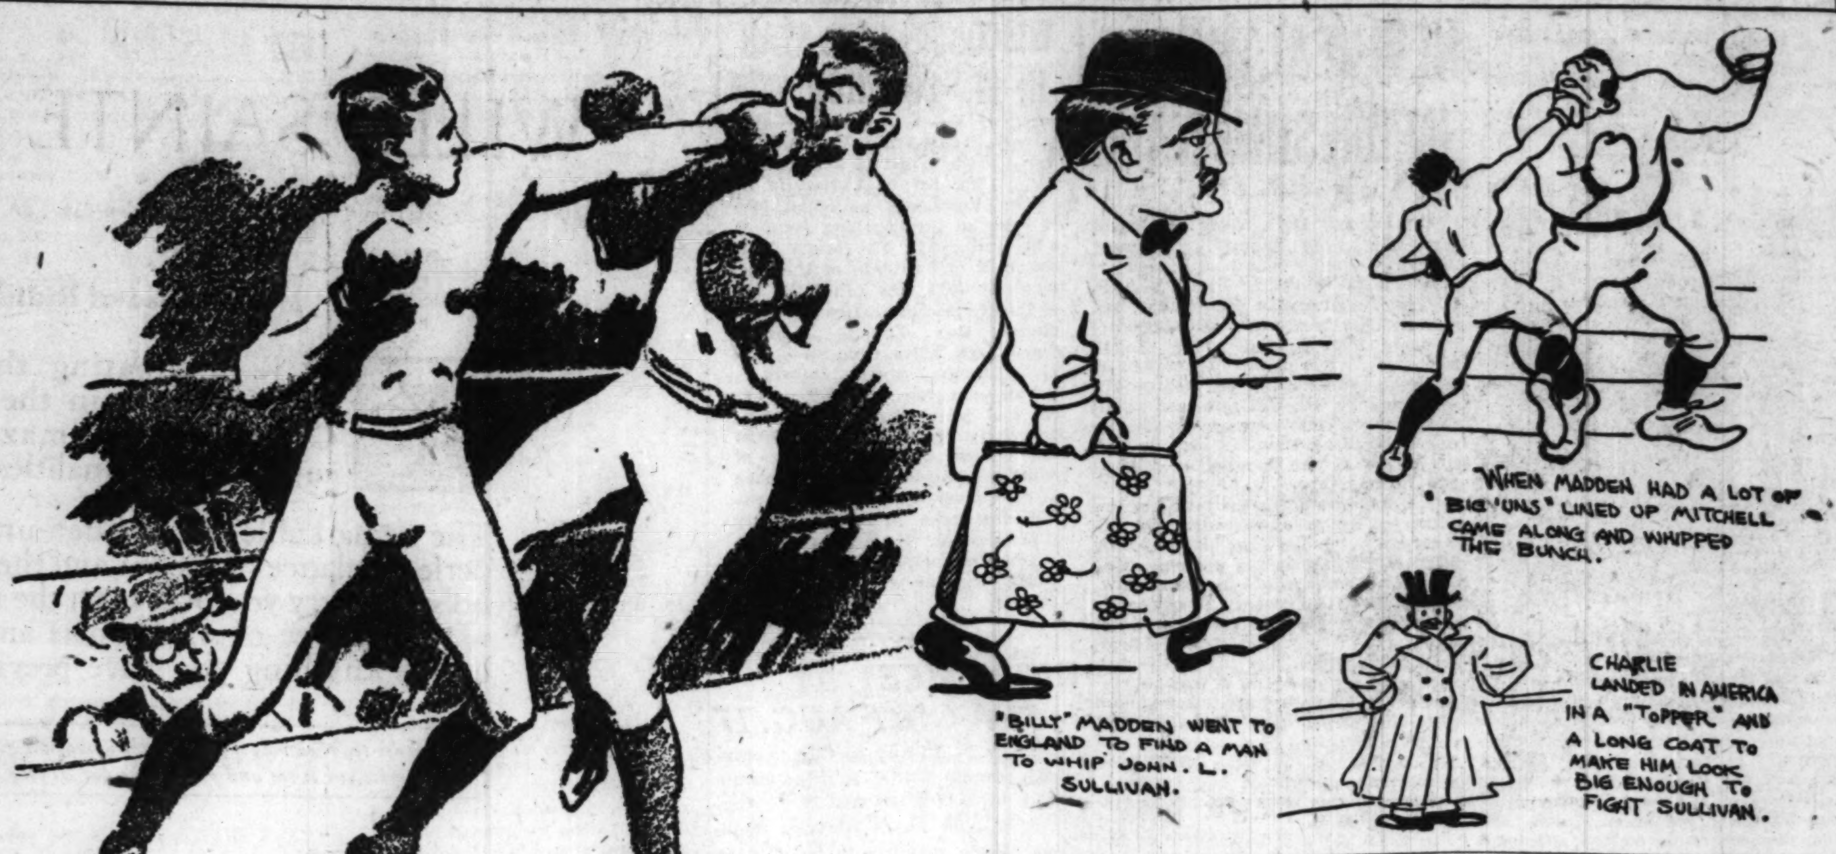
"Wait and See," Says Benny.

"Have you ever figured a way to beat a sou'paw?" we asked. "I've been told by some of these scrappers who have battled 'em, that the best way is to take a right jab on the bugle, make the sou'paw miss with his left, and then sock said sou'paw with the right for a K. O. while he is off balance. Is there anything to that dope?"

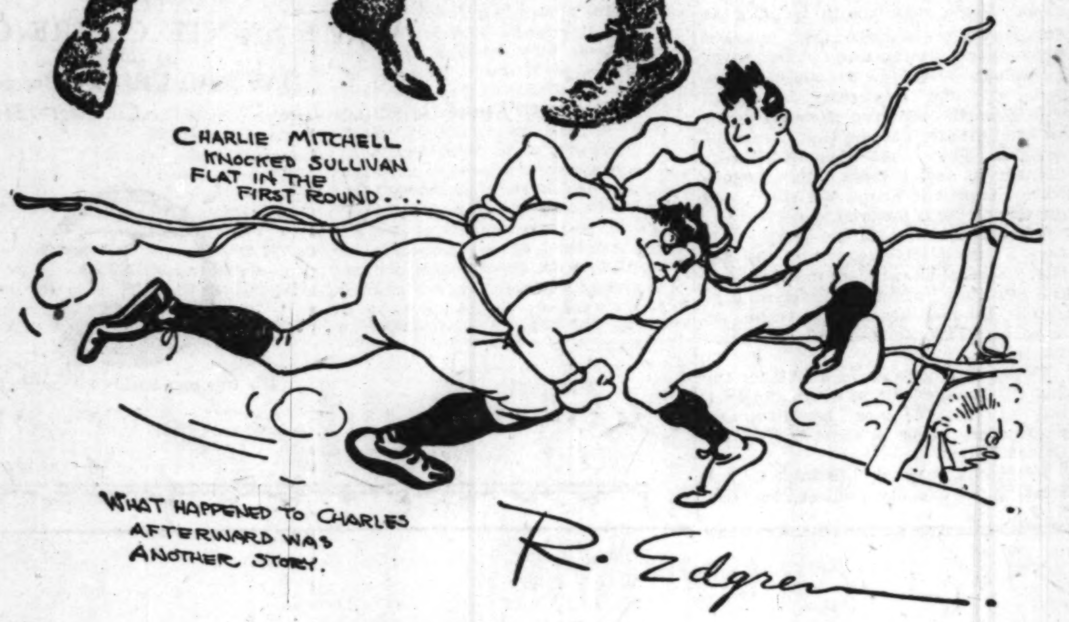
Benny smiled prettily, but wouldn't answer that question. The only thing he said was: "Well, just wait until the time comes for me to mix with Lew Tendler, and you'll see what you shall see."

The time arrives next Friday night and it should be a whale of a wallop party.

BILL MADDEN DISCOVERS CHARLIE MITCHELL, CHAMPION OF ENGLAND



WHEN MADDEN HAD A LOT OF "BIG 'UNS" LINED UP MITCHELL CAME ALONG AND WHIPPED THE BUNCH.
"BILLY" MADDEN WENT TO ENGLAND TO FIND A MAN TO WHIP JOHN. L. SULLIVAN.
CHARLIE LANDED IN AMERICA IN A "TOPPER" AND A LONG COAT TO MAKE HIM LOOK BIG ENOUGH TO FIGHT SULLIVAN.



CHARLIE MITCHELL KNOCKED SULLIVAN FLAT IN THE FIRST ROUND...
WHAT HAPPENED TO CHARLES AFTERWARD WAS ANOTHER STORY.
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

THE greatest heavyweight champions ever produced in England have been middleweights, or only removed from the middleweight class by a few pounds. I met Jem Mace in London in 1902, during an international tournament in which many English and American fighters met. Mace at that time was 71 years old, a brown-skinned, dark featured man of middle height, with a profile bearing the marks of many battles. He had been heavyweight champion of England many years before, under London prize ring rules, when his best fighting weight was about 160 pounds, now the recognized middleweight limit.

When I saw him he had recently returned from a trip to South Africa, where, nearly 70 years old, he had engaged in three fights with fair success. He was a wiry, rugged looking old fellow, and proud of his health and strength. A gypsy, he had spent nearly all of his life out of doors and roaming. He died in 1911 at the age of 80. Mace was a small man among heavyweights, being only 5 feet 9½ inches tall.

Wins Title in 1862.

Mace became champion of England in 1862, at 31, by knocking out Tom King in forty-three rounds. King was a big man and a great fighter. This fight was for the championship belt and a purse of $1,000, winner take all. Championships were cheap in those days. Imagine Carpentier and Dempsey in the ring for $1,000 instead of $500,000.

King met Mace again ten months later, and stopped him in twenty-one rounds. Later he beat John C. Heenan of America, famous for his fight against Sayers, in twenty-four rounds. King retired from the ring, became a great oarsman, winning several championships, and made a fortune of $300,000 on the turf.

Jem Mace reclaimed the championship after King's retirement and fought in Australia and America. In Australia he established the Mace school of boxing, which developed such great men as Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Hall, Peter Jackson, Dan Creedon, Young Griffo, and the Murphys. He was an extremely fast, clever boxer, who combined a hard punch with his speed, and when glove fighting took the place of bare knuckles the Mace style of boxing was adopted all over the world. Fitzsimmons, Ketchel, and Dempsey have improved on it in America, but the English boxers still box in the fashion Mace made famous.

Madden's Quest.

Charlie Mitchell was of a later school in England, and in his time as famous as old Jem Mace. Billy Madden "discovered" Mitchell.

Billy Madden was manager of John L. Sullivan for a short time when Sullivan first began knocking all the other champions out of the ring. He and John had a quarrel, and Madden went on a hunt for a man to whip Sullivan. He first sailed to Ireland, where he looked up all the heavyweights in sight and decided that none of them had a chance. Then he visited England and started a traveling tournament, held in several English cities, in which he developed several huge fellows who looked pretty good until one evening when a slight, slender little fellow came along and asked to be given a chance. On successive nights this youngster stopped or knocked out all of the ponderous giants, one after another. His name was Charlie Mitchell.

Mitchell Had Nerve.

Mitchell was a dapper, pert little fellow—little more than a welterweight, but he had all the nerve in the world, amazing speed, great skill, a hard punch and unlimited audacity. When Mitchell "cleaned up" all the big fellows Madden had been grooming for John L., Billy was discouraged. One night he had a talk with Mitchell.

"You've knocked all my plans into a 'cocked hat," complained Madden. "Here I've been working for months to get a man good enough to fight Sullivan in America, and you've spoiled the whole show."

"Well," said Mitchell cheerfully, "what's the matter with my fighting Sullivan?"

"O, you're too small," said Madden.

"Not a bit of it," said Mitchell. "I'll bloomin' well fight 'im and beat 'im, too."

Comes to America.

Impressed by Mitchell's nerve, Billy Madden put him through a few more matches, which he won easily. Mitchell was recognized as "the boxing champion of England." Madden wrote to America that he was coming home with a man to fight Sullivan, and sailed with Mitchell.

As Charles was so short—only 5 feet 9—and so light—less than 160 pounds—Madden felt a little embarrassed over the reception that might be accorded him in New York. So he had Mitchell wear boots with high heels, a tall silk hat, and an overcoat with padded shoulders.

Mitchell was standing at the rail with Madden when the steamer docked in New York. At once a score of newspaper writers scrambled aboard to see the man who was coming to fight Sullivan. Having no advance data on Madden's find, they expected to see a burly giant.

"Where is he?" they asked Madden.

Not Kidding at All.

"Right here," said Billy, introducing Mitchell, who was standing as tall as he could and trying to look imposing.

"But—why—he's only a little fellow. Don't kid us—where is Mitchell?" chortled the reporters.

"I'm Mitchell," said Charlie, growing indignant, "and I'll bloomin' well knock Sullivan's 'ead off. That's me."

When Sullivan saw Mitchell he retired in a sulk, saying that he wasn't to be made fun of. Let Mitchell fight Mike Cleary—a burly friend of Sullivan's, and if he could beat Mike, why, John L. would look him over again.

Joke on John L.

Mitchell fought Cleark, and Sullivan was in Cleary's corner as a second. John L. was in his shirt sleeves, with no collar, wearing a silk hat. Mitchell, as he neatly polished off Cleary in three rounds, kept up a fire of remarks at Sullivan, offering to knock Cleary into his lap.

In those days fighters indulged in a line of conversation that would startle a longshoreman. Sportsmanship, as we find it in the ring, is a later development. Mitchell got Sullivan's goat by inviting him into the ring to follow Cleary.

"Come up 'ere," said Charles, with many embellishments, "and I'll knock you out from under that 'at.'

This, so far as history relates, was the first time the expression was used. Sullivan, frothing, accepted the challenge, for a later date.

New York Fight Stopped.

Mitchell fought Sullivan in Madison Square Garden. Sullivan threw Mitchell off his feet several times in the first round, in his bull-like charges, but just at the end of the session Charlie hit the great John L. on the chin with a left so neatly timed that he knocked John flat on his shoulder blades. John got up roaring with rage. In the next two rounds he smothered Mitchell's cleverness with furious rushes, throwing him against the ropes and finally through them, when the police stopped the bout. The referee named Sullivan as winner.

Mitchell next fought Sullivan in Chantilly, France, in 1888, with bare knuckles. The fight was on a private estate, in the woods, on turf, in a cold, driving rainstorm. Sullivan was on the down road from dissipation then, and after stamping around in the mud, trying to land a blow on the clever, dancing little fellow, contented himself with turning to face Mitchell and trying to get over a heavy counter blow. The fight went thirty-nine rounds, when both men were so exhausted that neither could hit effectively, and the seconds agreed to stop the fight and call it a draw. Sullivan was well scarred by the spikes in Mitchell's shoes—for they fought in spikes under the old prize ring rules—and swift footed Mitchell fairly walked on the lumbering Sullivan in going around him. The champion's backers tried to "alibi" John L.'s poor showing by saying that he was chilled through by the cold rain.

This brought out the famous retort by McDonald, one of Mitchell's seconds:

"Bli' me! I didn't see anybody 'olding a bloomin' umbrella over Mitchell."

Mitchell fought many other good men, with a fair average of success, but his health broke down from irregular living, and when he met Jim Corbett in 1894, weighing less than 150 pounds, he was an easy victim of a three round knockout.

This was Mitchell's fifteenth year in the ring. He retired with a fortune and for years afterward was a follower of the sport and often seen at the ringside when newer champions met.

LIONEL BELL NAMED AS HANDICAP LEADER OF GRAND AMERICAN

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With the closing of entries yesterday for the Grand American handicap, blue ribbon event of trapdom to be held over the traps of the South Shore Country club, Aug. 22 to 27, announcement was made by Stoney McLinn, secretary of the American Trapshooting association, that Lionel A. Bell, Chicago amateur, has been appointed chairman of the handicap and classification committee.

Other members of Bell's committee are George V. Mackie, Lawrence, Kas.; Guy V. Dering, Columbus, Wis.; Fred Plum, Atlantic City, N. J.; Sam H. Sharman, Salt Lake City, Utah; Isaac H. Andrews, Spartansburg, S. C., and H. E. Dickerman of Cleveland, O. Mackie, Dering, and Andrews have served on handicap committees for so many years that they know the averages of practically all shooters.

Two Veterans as Officials.

Secretary McLinn also stated that two veterans of Grand American tourneys will again serve in official capacities. Fred Whitney of Des Moines, Ia., will be cashier of the shoot for the nineteenth consecutive year, while Bernie Elsesser will compile score for the twelfth straight year.

Although Elmer Shaner, president of the national body, will not have active charge of the tourney, he will be on the grounds to act in an advisory capacity. Secretary McLinn will be active manager, while members of the South Shore club trap squad already are making arrangements to entertain out of town shots.

Team Match Scheduled.

Over 10,000 programs have been sent out to shotgun experts in all sections of the country. The regular list of events will be held in addition to a few new contests. There will be a five man team race, with a squad representing each of the five zones. This event will be held on Aug. 22 and the winner will be proclaimed the champion of the United States and Canada.

As the Columbus cup has reverted back to the southern zone tournament, the South Shore Country club has offered the Governor's cup to take its place. This trophy must be won three times to become permanent possession of any contestant. It will go to the shot who makes the best average in all events except the national amateur championship race, which is closed to state champions.

When all nominations are registered for this year's contest, the list is expected to run over 1,000.

RACING ALL MONTH AT SARATOGA.

Horse racing at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., will continue all this month.

FOX TROT AND SHIMMY AID TENNIS TRAINING, SAYS MLLE. SUZANNE

HAVRE, Aug. 6.—"The fox trot and the shimmy are excellent aids to training for lawn tennis," Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen blithely declared today just before sailing on the steamer Paris for New York, after she had been informed there would be no opportunity to practice tennis on board the liner. She intended, she said, to do her training in the ballroom, smilingly adding; however:

"Don't take this too literally."

None the less, the French tennis star, on her way to a part in the American women's championships, volunteered the information that she was taking along a number of pretty Parisian dancing frocks.

PAL MOORE OFF ON CAMPAIGN FOR HERMAN'S TITLE

PAL MOORE.

Pal Moore, who is training daily at the Arcade for his ten round bout with Jack Sharkey of New York, feature of the boxing show to be conducted by the Twin Cities A. C. of East Chicago on Aug. 16, has started a campaign which he believes will close with a championship battle with Pete Herman for the bantamweight championship.

"I intend to meet the best 118 pounders in the game and then force Herman to meet me in a decision contest," Moore said yesterday. "After the Sharkey fight I will meet Sammy Mandell at Aurora on Aug. 26, and then expect to go east for contests with Midget Smith and some of the other good boys. If I win these fights decisively, Herman must give me a match, and I shall insist it be held where decisions are given."

Schaeffer Starts Drill.

Frankie Schaeffer, local lightweight, who will meet Mike Dundee of Rock Island in the semi-windup of the East Chicago show, started training yesterday at the Arcade. The rest of the card will be announced this week.

Sailor Freedman, west side lightweight, who defeated Joe Welling at Aurora on Friday night, will start on an automobile tour through the east today. The boxer will be accompanied by his manager, Hirschie Miller.

Benefit for Old Boxers.

Jim ("Tex") Mullen, who makes the matches for the Aurora club, has announced he will put on a show next Saturday for the benefit of down and out boxers. A number of well known gladiators of former years will be seen in exhibition contests. The card will be announced on Tuesday.

Pacific Northwest Team to Play Eastern Golfers

Portland, Ore., Aug. 6.—A taam of eight golfers selected from the fourteen players who participated in the 1921 Pacific Northwest Golf association championship tourney at Waverly last June, will play a special match against an eastern team the day before the opening of the United States amateur tournament at St. Louis Sept. 17, according to word received here.

Blow in a Friendly Match Proves Fatal to Fighter

Columbus, O., Aug. 6.—Earl Welch, 20 years of age, died here today of a fractured skull, sustained Thursday when knocked to the floor in a boxing match with Harold Myers. Both are of Columbus and were engaged in a friendly bout. Myers is being held by the police.

GIBBONS OR GEORGES TO BE FIRST HOLDER OF NEW DIAMOND BELT

PROMOTER TEX RICKARD, of the Carpentier-Tom Gibbons world's light heavyweight championship bout, to be staged in Madison Square garden in the autumn, has announced that he will present the winner with one of his gold studded diamond belts emblematic of the title. This division and the featherweight class are the only ones not having a belt.

LYNCH BOUT NOT FIRST COMEBACK OF PETE HERMAN

Pete Herman's "comeback" at New York City recently, when he won the world's bantamweight title back from Joe Lynch, was not his first remarkable return to form. In 1914, when Pete was just rounding to near-title class, he met Frankie Burns of Jersey City and was knocked out in twelve rounds. Subsequently, as champion, Herman beat Burns in a twenty round contest for the title.

Herman's defeat by Burns was due to his entering the ring weakened by illness, it was stated at the time.

Herman (Pietro Gulotto is his real name) was born twenty-five years ago, of Italian parentage, in New Orleans. He has been fighting ten years and won his title in 1917 by defeating Kid Williams of Baltimore.

TRACK SQUAD OUT AT PENN STATE

State College, Pa., Aug. 6.—From the work being done this summer by Blue and White track men, indications are that Coach Bill Martin will have another great Penn State squad during the coming college year.

Particularly encouraging was the come-back of Larry Shields after his year of retirement, and his third place in the mile event at Pasadena indicates that the West Chester lad will be in shape for cross-country this fall.

Coach Martin is also enthusiastic over the work of Alan Helffrich, last year freshman half-miler, who defeated the pick of the country at the California meet. Capt. Harold Barron, the Philadelphia hurdler, is also expected to show improved form this year, while Martin is counting on some of his other freshman athletes to become stars

Army Polo Players Ready to Start Training Drill

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Eight army polo players will begin practice soon at Camp Alfred Vail, N. J., and from them the war department polo committee, headed by Col. Julian R. Lindsey, will select a team to represent the army in the junior polo championship tournament to be held in Philadelphia Sept. 12 to 24. Secretary Weeks today approved orders for the players to assemble at Camp Vail. For reasons of economy in transportation expenses, the selection is to be confined to the New York area, with the single exception of Fort Riley, Kas., players.

MORE STUDENTS TO ENTER ILLINI COACHING SCHOOL

Urbana, Ill., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Increased registration in the University of Illinois four year course in athletic coaching, which begins its third year next month, seems to be certain in view of the numerous inquiries received this summer. Athletic coaching has finally been recognized as a distinct profession and Illini athletic authorities say that the demand for trained men never was so large.

The Illinois course was established in 1919 after the summer course in coaching had proved successful. It was felt that a broader and more general education for coaches was needed. The four year course was established with a degree of bachelor of science awaiting those who complete it. Registration more than doubled the second year and many students registered in other university colleges chose its courses as elective studies.

Other Studies Required.

Students athletically inclined are leaning to the course, especially since those who graduate in it also receive a good general college education. There are such required studies as rhetoric, psychology, physiology, public speaking, educational psychology, technic of teaching, and principles of secondary education, all of which were selected as valuable adjuncts to the embryo coaches.

Intra-mural athletics provide a field in which the coaches-to-be can try out the lessons they have learned in the classrooms and on the Illinois field "laboratory." The staff of instruction for the school year of 1921-22 will consist of:

Director—George Huff: football, R. C. Zuppke; organization and administration of athletics, John L. Griffith; track, Harry Gill; baseball, Carl Lundgren; basketball, Frank Winters; gymnastics, A. J. S. Schuettner; swimming, E. J. Manley; football and basketball, E. E. Bearg; tumbling, Earnest H. Knollin; wrestling and boxing, Paul Prehn; training and massage, D. M. Bullock.

School Is Huff's Idea.

The four year course had long been a pet idea of Director Huff, who had seen many college stars engage in coaching without the fundamentals they should have had. He believed that the coach should be of a high type, trained to take the best care of his men.

Director Huff and Coach Zuppke opened their stadium trip this week with successful meetings of alumni at Milwaukee and Minneapolis. At Minneapolis the Illini club of the northwest pledged support to the project and Milwaukee was no less enthusiastic. The tourists are now en route to the coast where their first stopping place is Seattle. There a meeting will be held on Aug. 9.

HERE'S GAME OF 19 HOME RUNS; BACK IN 1902

The mark of seven home runs in a game this season between the Philadelphia and Detroit Americans tied the officially recognized major league record for circuit drives in a single contest, but it didn't even come close to the world's record.

On July 14, 1902, Corsicana and Texarcana, in a Texas minor league, met in a regularly scheduled game which produced slugging records likely to stand for many years. Nineteen home runs, a dozen triples, ten doubles and almost a dozen singles were clouted out by the batters in this game. Corsicana won by a score of 51 to 3, and the winning team made fifty-three hits.

Incidentally, "Nig" Clarke, former Tiger backstop, claims to have established in this game the world's record for home runs by an individual batsman. Clarke says that he drove out eight round-the-sacks hits in this game. Previous data credited Harry Wright of the Cincinnati Reds with the record of seven homers in a game in 1867.

Modern records gave the honors to Robert Lowe of Boston; Dan Brouthers of Detroit, and Ed Delehanty of Philadelphia, with four home runs apiece in one game. Seven home runs were made in a game between St. Louis and Detroit, June 12, 1886. Unofficial records credit nine home runs in a game between Boston and Cincinnati in 1894.

The Philadelphia-Detroit series produced hitting that has never been rivaled in modern major league baseball, however, for the two teams made sixteen home runs in the four games.

NEW YORK SHOT FIRST TO ENTER GRAND AMERICAN

For the third successive year A. P. Bennett, one of the foremost shooters of the New York Athletic club, gained the distinction of being the first trapshot in North America to enter the Grand American handicap. Bennett is a veteran shot and each year tries conclusions with the best that this country, Canada and the Canal Zone can turn out at the Grand American, which is the world series of trapshooting.

The Grand American will be staged on the grounds of the South Shore Country club, Chicago, and entries will close with Stoney McLinn, secretary of the American Trapshooting association, 460 4th avenue, New York, on Aug. 6.

It is predicted that this Grand American will be the greatest ever held in many ways and that the attendance will surpass all previous records.

Danes Have Easy Way to Davis Cup Semi-finals

Denmark, not highly esteemed as a title factor in the international tennis world, is the first country to put a Davis cup team in this year's semi-finals. Denmark's players gained this honor without lifting a racquet, having drawn a bye in the first round and winning on default of Argentina in the second round.

West secured seven tricks.

All the play of the deal was made by north at trick eight, but that was enough to make a fair average for several deals. Had north discarded the deuce of spades instead of the ace, the declarer would inevitably have secured the game. The latter made a desperate play for game, as there was hope that north had the king and queen of spades remaining. Of course, west could have made his ace of hearts, but an extra trick would have done him no good, and he fought for game until the last gasp.

The development in the heart suit at trick one showed north clearly that he must never lead hearts again, and therefore exit cards were more valuable than cards of reëntry. Had it been necessary, north would have discarded both the ace and king of spades rather than lose the deuce of that suit. These situations are of frequent occurrence, but are so far removed from the mental processes of the average brain that they escape notice altogether.

West secured ten tricks.

It will surprise most players to know that the correct opening lead by north should have been the king of diamonds instead of the king of hearts. Such a play may be made only when the leader's long suit has but one card against it. For instance, were not the heart suit aided by the queen, knave, and ten, the lead of the king of diamonds would have been abominable.

Had the diamond been led, the declarer would have been obliged to play the jack. South would have dropped the six, and north would have noticed the absence of the deuce. With this information, north would have continued the ace and another diamond, and saved the game, the heart suit not entering into the play at all. As the heart was opened however, the play of the declarer became interesting.

The first point was whether west should win the first round of hearts or wait until the third. In no-trump, when the declarer can win only one trick in the first suit led, it usually is wise to refrain from winning, if possible, until the partner of the leader has played his last card in that suit; but this play should never be made when there is another suit more dangerous to the declarer than the one led.

Therefore it was imperative that the declarer win the first trick. The next play of importance was the lead of the eight of spades instead of the deuce.

Oral Betting Is Great Game—If Your Bank Roll Holds Out

number—runout is the term applied in regard to those who fail to make good their obligations—they continue to stop at the best hotels; they have their touring cars and so on, and are always able to look the landlord in the eye when the first of the month comes round.

They are always crying "wolf" and bemoaning the ill luck of having "some one" fail to make good, but it is safe to say that they can stand, and do stand "runouts" to the tune of 25 per cent of their business, remaining on the winning side despite this seeming big loss. The reason for such leeway is warranted by the books which are generally turned loose on a long suffering public. In terms of percentage these generally show from 25 to 40 in favor of the layer.

Wise Price Makers.

Prices under the system are "made" by a couple of men who are presumed to be strongly endowed with second sight. They forecast what the prices should be with their deductions arrived at through "past performances," recent work, and the word that such and such will be well backed. Time and again the opening prices are a delusion and a snare, with what the public wants at such a figure as to make the play prohibitive. Some few insiders who can make their money talk in sums of four figures or more get the cream of the market with the price afterward so "shaved" that the public can take the leavings or go without.

All signs point to the fact that there's plenty of money in circulation around the racetracks of the metropolitan district. While it is known that the "iron men" of the Maryland Kentucky, and Canadian tracks will make pikers of the biggest bettors, there are many men on the tracks about New York who think little of betting $5,000 to a race, and they are practically unknown.

Rothstein Secretive Stinger.

While there have been some tremendous bettors in time gone by—men like John W. Gates, the late Davy Johnson, Mike Dwyer, Riley Grannan, and Pittsburgh Phil—there is little doubt that Arnold Rothstein, who recently figured in the notorious White Sox scandal, makes them look like small-time players.

A most secretive person, Rothstein probably never lets his left hand know what his right hand is doing. He has stung the ring many a time and oft for several seasons past, and with one of his horses, a 2 year old named Sidereal is alleged to have won $250,000 at Aqueduct, where the colt was backed from 20 to 1 to 5 to 1. He has more commissioners than are known, with many of these being unaware of the existence of the others.

It is stated to be a fact that the "unofficial" announcement to the effect that no wager greater than $1,000 could be accepted by a clubhouse "layer" was brought about by Rothstein's activities. He was too sharp a player and some one didn't like his game.

Credit Stock in Trade.

There are no runouts from those of the Rothstein type. Their credit is their stock in trade, and they must be at the captain's office ready to settle the morning after they have incurred an indebtedness. It would be sad to relate what would happen to many of the books if the scheme pursued was of the "pay once a week sort."

While many have asked the question as to how much money is wagered on a metropolitan track within a given time—for a day, for instance—in all likelihood there is not a man able to answer it. John C. Cavanaugh, the man who was formerly in charge of the betting rings under the old régime of racing, and to whom questions of betting ethics are now referred in an unofficial way, does not know and says such a question would be as difficult of solution as that which would try to arrive at the number of wash sales in the stock market.

Fair Ones as Gamblers.

Women attend the races in greater numbers than those who have leanings for any other form of sport. Some like to see the horses run and have no other interest than that and whatever their escort may have "riding" on some fancy. Then they become the most intense rooters. When they get the betting fever they are the most desperate of "gamblers" if any line can be had through the operations of those who are "on the job" season in and season out.

The proportion of women in attendance at the Saratoga races is probably twice that of the other New York tracks, where they are outnumbered from six to ten to one by the men. The women have a great disadvantage insofar as their betting is concerned of not being able to "ask" of the lawnites the prices about their fancies. They are, unless escorted by some one who knows his way about, at the mercy of those who give them the worst of the odds, and if there's one thing that's needed by any one who is trying to beat the horses, it is the top price.

Must Beat Prices to Win.

Of course almost any price is a good price about a winner after he is down in front, but it is absolutely necessary to "beat" prices in order to beat the horses.

The knowledge that the oralors in both the grandstand and clubhouse sections of any racetrack have hordes of aids whose pay in the aggregate is enormous gives the lowdown on what must be exacted from the players before the "bookies" can give vent to the one gladsome tune they know, "I win" so and so many "grand," grand being gambling parlance for $1,000. While there are hundreds of bankrolls "burned up" by alleged bookmakers in their efforts to mulct the public through the medium of bunk prices, the sums lost by the shoemakers who try to pose as layers isn't a marker to that which is shed into the caldron of unprintable things said by the players about horses which have failed to run to their notch. At any rate, it's a sure thing that the public pays for its sport and is invariably found holding the bag at the finish of any given season.

TEACH COACHING AT PENN STATE

State College, Pa., Aug. 6.—Two former Penn State football stars who will be in the coaching field this fall have been equipping themselves for their new duties by giving a course in athletic coaching for high school coaches as part of the summer session at the college.

Charlie Way, all American halfback and track star, and P. W. "Red" Griffiths, the sensational guard, are the men who have been training the high school mentors in the first course of its kind ever offered at Penn State; and they have been coöperating with W. E. Lewis, former wrestling coach, who is in charge of the physical education work of the summer session.

Way will leave here in a few weeks to take up his duties as director of athletics at Dayton university, Ohio; while Griffiths will assume a similar position at Marietta college.

Wabash Eleven Schedules Two Colleges of Illinois

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 6.—Two Illinois colleges are on the schedule of the Wabash college football team this fall. The "Little Giants" will open their schedule of nine games here Sept. 24 with Augustana college. James Millikin university comes here on Nov. 5, the annual home coming day for Wabash. Coach Vaughn has issued a call for football practice to start Sept. 12. The big game is at West Point on Oct. 14.

MICHIGAN LANDS NEW HEALTH HEAD IN DR. SUNDWALL

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Dr. John Sundwall, professor of hygiene and public health, and director of the students' health service in the University of Minnesota, has accepted the directorship of the department of hygiene and public health, in the newly established department of physical education in the University of Michigan. He will also become director of students' physical welfare in the Wolverine school. He will assume his duties at the opening of college, late in September.

The appointment is the result of the action of the board of regents of the University of Michigan last spring, when they authorized a department of physical education. In June 22 Fielding H. Yost, for twenty years coach of varsity football in the university, was appointed director of intercollegiate sports, which was one of the two appointments to be made in that department. The other appointment was to be that of professor of hygiene and public health, and director of the student health. At that time efforts were being made to secure Dr. Sundwall, but not till this week was his acceptance secured.

In establishing a department of hygiene and public health, and in correlating and grouping in one division, under one supervision, all activities concerned with the promotion of health and the prevention of disease in the university, the University of Michigan authorities feel that a distinct step forward has been taken. Greater attention will be given than ever before to all problems concerned with public health, as well as student health.

An important feature of the newly organized division will be the training of teachers and supervisors of physical welfare for colleges, high schools, and grade schools. This will be done in connection with the new school of education, established July 1. There is even now a great demand for the new type of physical welfare teacher and supervisor.

BOYS' CLUB, 11; WINONA, 7.

Lake Winona, Ind., Aug. 6.—The all star baseball team representing the five Chicago boys' clubs defeated Winona collegians, 11 to 7.

VAN GENT IS LATEST WISCONSIN GRID STAR IN BIG COACHING JOB

A. E. ["GREEN"] VAN GENT is the latest of a lengthening list of University of Wisconsin ex-football stars to take up the coaching reins at a big university. The former giant linesman and captain of the Cardinals in 1914, has joined the list of Badger grid graduates which includes Bob Zuppke, Illinois, coach; Jack Wilce, Ohio State, and E. O. "Jumbo" Stiehm, Indiana.

Van Gent succeeds Walter Powell, last year's Leland Stanford university football coach, who has become athletic director at Stanford. Van Gent has been coach of the University of Texas and athletic instructor in the University of Mississippi. He is at present in business in Sacramento. During his college days he was an all-around athlete.

RIFLE MEET AT SEA GIRT AUG. 17

Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 6.—The twenty-eighth annual Sea Girt rifle tournament to be held at Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 17 to 27, and which contains duplicates of the matches to be shot at Camp Perry during the national tournament, interstate rifle team, individual and pistol competitions and a large program of small bore (.22 cal.) matches, promises to be an even greater success than its predecessors. The attendance of a large number of teams from the various states, from the army, the navy, and marine corps, is assured.

The opportunity to fire in the Sea Girt National Rifle team and the Sea Girt National Pistol team matches, and the Sea Girt National Individual Rifle and Pistol matches by the teams entered at Camp Perry is an additional advantage.

Those who have never shot over the Sea Girt range will have an opportunity to visit the most beautiful and satisfactory range to shoot over in the United States.

Programs may be obtained by addressing the executive officer, Sea Girt, N. J.

Paige Endurance—
100 Miles in 67 Minutes a Severer Test than 50,000 Miles of Ordinary Driving

This Paige Six-66 which you are hearing so much about is at once a new car and a proven car. The fact that it is new in design and construction makes it the car of today and tomorrow with brand new standards of performance.

But it is also a car that has been tested and proved. Here there is no temptation to wait until a model threatens to become obsolete before deciding that it has made good. Paige Six-66 stamina has been unquestionably established—not alone by Paige's enviable reputation as manufacturers of good motor cars—but also by the tests of the speedway.

On May 21st, at the Uniontown, Pa., Speedway, the Paige Daytona model Six-66 set out to make some new stock chassis records. The result—new world's records were established for 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 50, 75 and 100 miles.

For the entire distance, which was made without stopping, the average was 89 miles per hour—100 miles in 67 minutes. As an experienced car owner you know that 50,000 miles of ordinary driving would never put your Paige to such a test as the Daytona model went through last May at Uniontown.

So you can buy a Paige Six-66 with the certainty that it will stand up and deliver good service for years to come. You can be certain, too, that it will not depreciate from changes in design or increased efficiencies of other cars. The Paige Six-66 is too far ahead for that.

Finally, knowing that the Paige Six-66 is made of currently purchased material and priced accordingly, you can purchase it with the assurance that it represents rock-bottom, intrinsic value, as well as performance value, which cannot be matched.

HERO TREE IDEA GRIPS CITIZENS OF IOWA CITIES

Organizations Actively at Work on Plan.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

LOWDEN, Ia.—Iowa's city trees are the best argument for Iowa's roadside planting. In every town the streets are lined on both sides with great elms and oaks, some of them old enough to lean comfortably upon each other across wide streets. These leafy archways are constantly suggesting to the state the beauty and joy to be found in great trees if planted along the highways. They argue too, with their cool shade. The scarcity of trees on Iowa's highways is emphatic.

Iowa's roads, an excellent aid to digestion and about as smooth as a drainage map of the Mississippi valley, are being improved fast. Countless detours impress that fact upon the motorist. Then all that they will need are some hero trees of the kind that makes Iowa's cities so picturesque. Iowa promises that its new concrete roads will be transformed into avenues of remembrance.

Kiwanis Club Leads.

In Clinton, the Kiwanis club, one of the most active organizations in all four states I have visited, is leading the memory tree plan, and has formed an organization which plans to put memory trees on both sides of Clinton's new concrete road leading west—one tree to commemorate the service of each Clinton soldier who served in the world war.

Roscoe Armstrong, chairman of the tree committee, was anxious to get news of what other cities are doing, and he assured me that Clinton will not be found wanting when the tree roll is called.

W. C. Eastland, managing editor of the Clinton Herald, is helping the project with publicity, and Iowa's response is immediate.

A downpour of rain which, much to the farmers delight, seems determined to drown this section of the state, has forced us to skid along sand and slimy clay over many a detour into Wheatland. Before us two ruts, with more curves than a fishworm, behind us four gala tourists being towed out of a mudhole after having stood in the mire and pushed their car while they awaited any chance help. But Wheatland laughed—the farmer sits in judgment upon this storm, and he likes it.

Will Plant Sixty Trees.

F. W. Buxton, editor of the Wheatland Gazette, believes his fellow citizens will plant their sixty soldier trees in due season. And while he jests about the rain and our ability to plow through Iowa he promises his best efforts in the interest of memory roads.

Editor David Phillips of the Dewitt Observer, Dewitt, Ia., will tell his community of the plan, and he believes Dewitt with line its share of the Lincoln highway with memory trees.

Through the length of a cool, sunshiny day The Tribune's memory tree car visited cities along the Lincoln highway to enlist the interest of Charles Benton Jr., editor of the Whiteside Sentinel, Morrison, Ill.; Walter Hohenadel, editor of the Independent at Rochelle, Ill.; the Gazette, Sterling, Ill., and the Dixon Evening Telegram, Dixon, Ill.

Trees Grow Rapidly.

A. W. Bastian of the Fulton Journal at Fulton, Ill., showed me trees set out only five years ago which already are of important size. Their rapid growth he attributes to the limestone formation of the soil and the proximity to the Mississippi river. He spoke rather proudly of what memory trees in this section would promise. This limestoned soil has made the trees along the Mississippi so bright green and washed looking that they have outclassed anything I have seen in all the central states; it would take no more than a French dressing to make them palatable.

The hero marker, of bronze and shaped like the world's war famous tin hat, is popular everywhere. The American Legion, from whom the markers may be purchased in a few weeks, certainly will be besieged with orders.

AMBITION OF TWO TO BE BURGLARS IS NIPPED IN BUD

Two youthful amateurs, attempting to start a career of crime without the moral support of firearms, were captured in a building at 1330 South Albany avenue Thursday ten minutes after the alarm had reached the Fillmore station. They gave their names as Asher Hassen, 19, 1944 South Washtenaw avenue, and Edward Habruc, 18, 1104 South Winchester avenue.

The burglar pair rang the bell of Wolf Gwirtz's home at 1243 South Kedzie avenue. Thirteen year old Sophie Ricaysen was the only one there. While one youth engaged her in conversation the other slipped into the house and picked up two diamond stick pins from the dresser.

The girl screamed and the men fled. Gwirtz appeared, and with the aid of pedestrians, chased them and surrounded the house in which they had taken refuge. The police arrested them.

5 BOYS REPORTED MISSING; BLAME CAMPING FEVER

Camping fever is believed to have caused five boys to take four bed sheets and a satchel, don their Boy Scout uniforms, and leave the grounds of the St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless, 729 East 35th street, yesterday. The boys are George Doyle, 11 years old, Morris, Ill.; Edward Walsh, 14, Waukegan; Charles Rostan, 12; Dante Crustase, 12; and John Koblista, 13, all of Joliet.

'LORD' SCULLY'S SON DIVORCED IN BIZARRE TRIAL

Owner of 25,000 Acres of Illinois Farm Land.

LONDON.—Mrs. Isabel Burrell Scully, wife of Thomas Augustus Scully of Portchester terrace, eldest son of the late "Lord" William Scully, multimillionaire farm land owner of Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska, has been granted a decree of divorce. She charged that Scully had been cruel to her and friendly with another woman. Sensational testimony developed at the hearing, which required several days.

Scully, who was credited during the trial with owning 25,000 acres of land in Illinois alone, denied the cruelty charges, and pleaded that if he had been friendly with another woman, as charged, his wife had condoned the indiscretion. The special jury, after being out ten minutes, found him guilty of both charges and cleared his wife of the charge of having been addicted to the use of veronal. Sir Henry Duke presided at the hearing.

Pair Meet at London Dance.

Sir John Simon, in setting forth Mrs. Scully's case, said she is the daughter of Richard R. Dunlop, while Scully is an Irish landlord who owns property in Tipperary, has 25,000 acres in Illinois, and enjoys an income of about £20,000 a year. The pair met at a dance in London on Nov. 27, 1907, he said, and later were married. There are four children. He told of a seeming prejudice that Scully conceived against his wife's father. Continuing, he said in substance:

"As early as 1910 things reached such a pass between husband and wife that in the presence of a Mrs. Kelly he bundled her out of the room. In April, 1911, the third child Sheila was born. The petitioner was at Salcombe and the husband was in America. Mr. Dunlop went to Salcombe to see his daughter, whom he had not seen for fifteen months, and he stayed in the village.

"The petitioner, on her return to London in July, 1911, owing to her experience of her husband, told him that her father had gone to Salcombe for a week-end. Later, on the same day, she volunteered the statement that he had been there for three weks and that she had constantly seen him. That communication was made at 9 p. m.

Locks Wife in Cupboard.

"Her husband seized her, hauled her across the passage, flung her in evening dress into a cupboard, locked the door and went to bed. Next morning at 8 o'clock he let her out. There was no bed and no pillow in the cupboard, and she made the best of the matter by taking dresses down from the hooks and lying on them.

"He locked her up the next night in the same way and, finding that one of the servants had put a pillow in the cupboard, he took it out. He repeated the performance on the next day when Mrs. May, a friend, called. She was not satisfied with the conventional answer of "Not at home," and went upstairs. She went on a balcony and talked to the petitioner. Next day the petitioner left her husband, but a brother of the respondent's, Frederick Scully, succeeded in bringin husband and wife together.

Pushed Into Corner, Drenched.

"In 1912 he put her in a corner like a naughty child and poured water over her; then he refilled the jug and repeated the operation, and he drenched her with water on three successive days. On Feb. 20 he left the house, returned at 4 a. m. on the 21st and said: 'I've been away with a woman.' In March she resolved to leave him. She did so and consulted solicitors and a medical man, who found she was suffering from nervous breakdown and from a black eye. The question of her children arose and she returned once more to her husband."

THE SCULLY MILLIONS

Thomas Augustus Scully is one of the two sons of the late "Lord" William Scully, noted as the "greatest owner of American farm lands," because of his holdings of more than 200,000 acres, valued at one time at more than $35,000,000.

The elder Scully, who said he was "neither lord nor viscount, but a gentleman of Tipperary, Ireland, given the title of 'lord' by people in Illinois," came to America more than sixty years ago and at once began to buy farm lands. It is said that of all the farms he purchased he sold only one during his lifetime. His huge holdings in Illinois were in Logan, Sangamon, Livingston and Grundy counties.

As late as November, 1918, the "Lord" Scully interests had a brush with their Grundy county farm tenants when rents were boosted.

This business was obtained during Chicago's Great Pageant of Progress Exposition

Haynes Gala Event and Parade Tuesday, August 9th

As a direct result of a sudden increase in sales, created by the great Pageant of Progress Exposition in Chicago, Triangle Motors, Incorporated, Chicago Haynes Distributors, placed a telegraphic order with The Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Indiana, for a solid fifty-car train load of one hundred Haynes 55's, the new 1922 Haynes car which is being exhibited for the first time at the exposition on Chicago's Municipal Recreation Pier.

The huge, solid train load of automobiles will arrive in Chicago August 9, and on that day the long line of cars will parade Michigan Avenue. On Friday, August 5, a giant airplane, of the bombing type, hopped off from Chicago on a two-day trip and circled over every city in Illinois and Iowa where a Haynes dealer was located. The airplane carried 100,000 handbills announcing the Haynes parade, together with a number of tickets entitling the holders to a free ride in a giant seaplane over Lake Michigan. Every Haynes dealer town was "bombarded" with the handbills and tickets and the finders of the tickets were treated to a thrilling ride in a seaplane upon their arrival in Chicago. The order for the huge shipment of Haynes cars was wired to the Haynes factory by W. S. Mehaffey, vice president of Triangle Motors, Incorporated, who is in charge of the Haynes exhibit at the Municipal Pier. Jay Colvin, president of Triangle Motors, Inc., was highly enthusiastic over the results of the Pageant of Progress Exposition and declared that the Pageant, under Mayor Thompson's direction, was proving a strong stimulant to business throughout the entire Middle West.

THE NEW 1922 HAYNES 55 $1785 F. O. B. FACTORY

This is our first newspaper announcement of the new 1922 Haynes 55 and 75 models—in accord with our custom of introducing at this time of the year our most advanced ideas in motor car production. These two new Haynes offerings give the motorist the fullest advantage, not only in price, but in obtaining cars which express proved principles of desirability which otherwise would not be available for many months. The Haynes 55 is a new production possessing many desirable developments and refinements.

The body is greatly beautified. A full five-passenger touring car, with a 121-inch wheel base and the famous velvety-powered, Haynes-built, light-six motor, it surpasses all expectations at the low price—$1785, f. o. b. factory.

The utmost in style, economy, durability and performance has been given this light-weight car. Individual fenders and individual aluminum steps fit gracefully into its semi-sporty lines. Exterior side cowl lights, cord tires and genuine leather upholstery add to its appearance. Mechanically, the new 1922 Haynes 55 more than fulfills your expectations for ruggedness, dependability and reserve power.

Your dealer will take your order now. This will insure prompt delivery. We recommend and urge you to inspect the new 1922 Haynes 55 at once and make your reservation.

The Haynes 55 is also manufactured in the five-passenger Sedan at $2835 and the two-passenger Roadster at $1835.

THE NEW 1922 HAYNES 75 $2485 F. O. B. FACTORY

Several months in advance of the usual time of presentation of such a car comes this new 1922 Haynes 75, priced fully a thousand dollars below what you would ordinarily expect it to be.

The newly developed, big, powerful, Haynes-built, six-cylinder engine, perfected after many months of careful scientific research, equipped with the new Haynes fuelizing system, assures power, flexibility and acceleration even greater than ever before enjoyed with the always popular Haynes power plant.

Larger valves, larger intake and exhaust manifolds, thermostatic engine heat control and other decidedly advanced features emphasize the distinct advantage of the Haynes 75 motor alone.

The new 1922 Haynes 75 has a more rugged chassis and in lines and finish, as well as fittings, is completely a 1922 idea. The seven-passenger touring car offers the extreme of luxury and utility in such a production, and the price—$2485, f. o. b. factory—is in keeping with the Haynes policy of extending to the purchaser every benefit of the organization's manufacturing and distributing methods.

The Haynes 75 is also available in the four-passenger Tourister at $2485, the two-passenger Special Speedster at $2685, the five-passenger Brougham at $3185, the seven-passenger Sedan and Suburban at $3485—each price remarkably low. All the new 1922 Haynes 75 models have a 132-inch wheel base. Cord tires are standard equipment.

PROPHECY—1914-1921.

Seven years ago, on the Sunday corresponding to the present, The Tribune published the editorial reprinted today in the next column. The world was then at war for causes which seemed to have no relation to the people who would have to suffer. They had spent most of the summer at their peaceable work, raising their crops and carrying on their trades and professions.

Suddenly the dynastic mischief turned demonic and Europe was given up to armies. Some of the prophecies in the editorial of seven years ago have been fulfilled. The republic did march east in Europe. The German empire is a socialistic republic. The Russian empire is a communistic tyranny suffering from plagues and starvation. The Austro-Hungarian empire disappeared in the birth of a group of republics.

Kings and emperors remain in Europe principally where they do not rule and have disappeared where they did rule. It was possible to foresee that such consequences would follow when the grand egotism of medieval rulers had thrown modern people into a war of modern science. The rulers almost ruined their people and totally ruined themselves.

It was not possible to foresee all the damage. There was too much optimism in the editorial. It conceived people emancipating themselves from the medievalism which had started to ruin them, but it did not conceive them in their emancipation making their peace almost as destructive as their war.

The revolution of moderates who overthrew the czar could be regarded as probable if not certain, but optimism could not accept the other probability or certainty that the Russian Girondists would be followed by the Russian tribunal of justice—that the French terrorists would have their counterparts in the Russian Reds. The one probability or certainty was quite as ready for perception as the other, but even when the intent of people is to deal realistically with their facts and prospects they are stopped by their inherent hope that things will be better than ever they are.

Seven years ago we could see imperial Germany going to war with an army perfectly prepared for it. The professional part of that army, the junker officers, welcomed it as a real exercise of their profession. There was a military empire, with a war lord, perfectly trained morally and physically to overrun the world and impose its will on people it conquered.

German patriotism considered the military empire necessary. It desired what Great Britain had. It wanted not only elbow room in the world but dominion. We know now how nearly the war machine of a military empire came to accomplishing its purpose. Probably the only reason it did not was because the French also had military genius and military organization. Great Britain had courage and will, but the nation did not know what an army was. No more did the United States when its time came.

Time will make more clear the military performance of Germany, blockaded and encircled by enemies. Poland, Roumania, and Serbia were overrun, Russia and Italy defeated in great operations, and France and Great Britain held. Without Great Britain on the sea the allies were lost, and without France on land they were lost. Americans must get this into their consciousness. After looking backward they must look forward.

We failed to see the Russian Reds behind the Russian Girondists. We ought not to fail to see other military imperialisms behind the German military imperialism. We did see what a highly organized imperialism, supported by intense patriotism, directing industries and commanding science, could do, how it could attack and resist, although fighting against numbers which in themselves ought to have guaranteed its destruction.

There is now a socialistic republic where that military empire stood. The power in Europe has been taken by the military French republic, for the present at least. It also regards militarism as a patriotic necessity for the preservation and advancement of the French people. What the French regard as a patriotic necessity might have consequences in Europe without greatly concerning us, but if we look into the far east we may see another military empire whose conduct and policies will affect us chiefly.

It was one of the optimisms emerging as the war went on, that it was a war against war. Even as the people would emerge in republics from the dynasties which had caused their suffering they would also, in their self-control, abolish war.

There were to be no more wars because free people would not have them. That optimism did not survive the peace conference. Roumania overran Hungary. Poland attacked Russia, was overrun in turn, and by a desperate effort got its invaders pushed out. Poles and Germans fought over Silesia. Italians and Jugo-Slavs fought over Fiume. Greeks and French fought Turks and Arabs. Japan divided Siberia. National enmities were expressed in a more diversified manner after the war than during it.

The Italians and the French may have been friendly during the war, but the Italians are not friends of the French now. National hatreds are intense and although the power to make war may be less the incentives to do so are not less.

We could not foresee seven years ago that the United States would be drawn into the war. Its causes seemed far removed from anything with which we had to do and our prospects did not seem to be involved in direct consequences. That was optimism which gave way to fear, and fear gave way to reality.

We could not foresee that we should be obliged to raise nearly 5,000,000 soldiers and send 2,000,000 of them across the ocean to fight in France. Seven years ago we should have said that it could not be done. We could not see America taxing itself, building camps, converting peaceable industries into war industries, and devoting its great economic system to the making of war in Europe.

That was beyond vision. We could not foresee our casualties, our disabled men and the jobless, destitute veterans walking our streets. What was foreseen was the small consequence—that certain nations would change their form of government.

Czaristic Russia had a system of government called intolerable, but under it the people lived in some comfort and under it Russia lived with the rest of the world. Now Russia does not live with the rest of the world and almost dies within itself. That does not prove that the czaristic government should have continued, any more than the difficulties of republican government in Germany prove that the imperial government should have continued, but it is proved that optimism frequently lacks sufficient foresight.

Now we think we have done with war. We have seen what the military empire of Germany could do and we see what it had the madness to try to do. We have seen how the best hopes of humanity were defeated when the endeavor was to make a good peace follow a bad war.

We also know that a great military empire, Japan, came out of the war hardly scratched as to men and materials and out of the peace conference with resources greatly enhanced by gifts from the peace makers. This military empire may have more need of expansion than Germany had. We think it has. It has military genius. It has a devoted populace, trained in arms. It has ambitions which are unremitting and determination which is unrelenting.

The United States frequently affronts this military nation and frequently stands in the way of its advancement. The United States is the frontier of the white people. It is disliked by most of the other white nations, probably by all of them. Probably none of them would object to a war between the United States and Japan. They may assume that if the Japanese and the Americans fight it will be a war of exhaustion, which will prevent Japan from becoming a danger to other white people and which will destroy the United States as the prosperous world power.

That is a real danger in our situation. Our alleged friends would benefit from our dangers and damages. They do not think we suffered enough in the war in which they suffered so much. They pay tribute to our dollar and do not like it. They think we are comfortable when they are unhappy, and they think they might gain some comfort from our discomfort.

Japan can do more than we think she can do. She is willing to make a national effort which we should not want to make. Optimism had only one eye seven years ago and did not see consequences. Has it both eyes now?

The United States may provoke war inadvertently with Japan. It will not do so consciously or intentionally. Japan will not provoke war inadvertently, but may make war deliberately. If so, it will be to promote national interests at a time when the best judgment of Japanese realists indicates that it can be promoted.

In contact with so strong and so realistic a nation the United States must be on guard, not provocatively but determinedly, to avoid what would be most useless, a war, and to avoid what would be worse, a war badly fought.

That is all we can see in the light of seven years. The present is a great deal worse than was foreseen seven years ago. The future is frequently a great deal worse than it seems in prospect.

It may be again. We did not foresee seven years ago what was about to happen. We may not be able to see what is about to happen within the next seven years. It is well to keep a level head. It also will be a good thing to keep the powder dry.

Editorial of the Day

THE TWILIGHT OF THE KINGS.

[Reprinted from The Chicago Tribune Aug. 2, 1914.]

Before establishing hell on earth, the pietistic kings commend their subjects to God. Seek the Lord's sanction for the devil's work.

"And now I commend you to God," said the kaiser from his balcony to the people in the street. "Go to church and kneel before God and pray for his help for our gallant army."

Pray that a farmer dragged from a Saxon field shall be speedier with a bayonet thrust than a winemaker taken from his vines in the Aube; that a Berlin lawyer shall be steadier with the rifle than a Moscow merchant; that a machine gun manned by Heidelberg students shall not jam and that one worked by Paris carpenters shall.

Pray that a Bavarian hop grower, armed in a quarrel in which he has no heat, shall outmarch a wheat grower from Poltava; that Cossacks from the Don shall be lured into barbed wire entanglements and caught by masked guns; than an innkeeper of Salzburg shall blow the head off a baker from the Loire.

"Go to church and pray for help"—that the hell shall be hotter in innocent Ardennes than it is in equally innocent Hessen; that it shall be hotter in innocent Kovno than in equally innocent Posen.

And the pietistic czar commends his subjects to God that they may have strength of arm in a quarrel they do not understand; that they may inflict more sufferings than they are required to endure and the name of Romanoff be greater than the name of Hohenzollern, that it may be greater than the name of Hapsburg, that its territories shall be wider and the territories of Hohenzollern and the territories of Hapsburg less.

The pietistic emperor of Austria commends his subjects to God, to seek divine assistance to crush the peasants of Serbia, dragged from the wheat field when it was ready for the scythe and given to the scythe themselves.

This is, we think, the last call of monarchy upon divinity when Asmodeus walks in armor. The kings worship Baal and call it God, but out of the sacrifice will come, we think, a resolution firmly taken to have no more wheat growers and growers of corn, makers of wine, miners and fishers, artisans and traders, sailors and storekeepers offered up with prayer to the Almighty in a feudal slaughter, armed against each other without hate and without cause they know, or, if they knew, would give a penny which way it was determined.

This is the twilight of the kings. Western Europe of the people may be caught in this debacle, but never again. Eastern Europe of the kings will be remade and the name of God shall not give grace to a hundred square miles of broken bodies.

If Divinity enters here it comes with a sword to deliver the people from the sword.

It is the twilight of the kings. The republic marches east in Europe.

From dusk to dawn the worlds on high
In haughty splendor pass—
Give me the friendly worlds that lie
At morn upon the grass.

II.

The wood burns down to embers,
The embers fall to ashes;
But still my heart remembers
To warm its cold Decembers
At fires beneath your lashes.

III.

I did not see you draw;
So swift the thrust you made,
I did not feel the blade;
'Twas only when I saw
The hate within your eye,
Love felt that he must die.

IV.

From Arcady to Avalon
Are many roads to go:
Through foamy lanes of azure seas,
Through mountain trails of snow.
I'll take a shorter way, tonight,
Adown a moonlit stream;
From Arcady to Avalon
I'll journey in a dream.

RAIN UPON THE CORN.

Through my window comes a-tapping
Steadily, a ceaseless rapping,
And I fancy that the rain upon the corn
Brings the fairies forth in dancing,
Cutting capers of mad prancing
In thanksgiving for the food which will be born.

It may be this ceaseless tapping
Comes from fairy drums a-rapping,
And the sheltered fireflies shed a gentle glow,
While the crowds of fairy workers
Praise the seasons, cuss the shirkers,
Offer thanks to Him above for what's below.

TREATING "SWIMMER'S EAR"

DURING July, August, and September physicians are called on to treat more ear troubles than during March, April, and May, it is said. The colds of the spring months do not cause infection any more frequently than does swimming in the summer months.

These summer ear troubles range from earaches through boils in the ear to mastoid abscesses.

Dr. A. Rovinsky gives some advice to swimmers on protection of the ears and prevention of ear trouble, which was written especially for those who indulge in sea bathing. Also applies in considerable measure to those who swim in rivers and inland lakes.

If one is subject to ear trouble it is well to plug the ears with cotton saturated with albolene or borated vaseline before going in. If this does not keep water out of the ears it is well to wear a rubber cap and to have it come below the ears.

The habit of taking water into the mouth is dangerous from the standpoint of ear trouble. When one takes water into the mouth while floating, swimming, or diving there is considerable chance that some of it will pass down the Eustachian tube into the middle ear. The mechanics of the mouth, ear, and tube kamek that easy when the head is in certain positions.

Dr. Rovinsky finds that much of the earache after swimming is due to water which has got into the ears from the mouth.

He relieves such cases by passing a Eustachian catheter and draining out the water. If the water is polluted [and water around bathing beaches is generally fairly polluted], infection of the middle ear is likely to occur. Such infection may spread to the mastoid.

If a person has a good deal of wax in his ears he should be careful about getting water in his ears while swimming. The wax absorbs water and swells up, filling the canal.

Most of the ear infections due to swimming result in boils in the external ear canal. If that is the location of the trouble there will be pain in chewing; drawing the ear upward without force will cause pain; pressure just in front of the ear reveals tenderness.

For infections in this region he paints with a solution of nitrate of silver, and then he puts into the canal a piece of sterile gauze saturated with alcohol every two hours. If the pimples develop grease the canal with borated vaseline or zinc oxide ointment.

ARRESTED T. B. AND EXERCISE.

T. B. writes: "In 1907 I was troubled with hemorrhages which unfortunately were not positively diagnosed as t. b. by my physicians until I had had t. b. some time. I really first diagnosed it myself after reading all the literature on the subject in the public libraries. I then began to eat nourishing food and take plenty of rest and in about eleven months seemed to be well, having gained about twenty pounds and having been free from blood spitting for six months. Outdoor work I thought was the thing and I obtained a position in the east similar in some respects to the one J. W. K. writes of, but after three weeks again had hemorrhages. My work was not hard with the exception of doing a little moderately heavy lifting and occasionally walking three miles a day. I then decided to go to the Adirondacks and finally landed in a t. b. sanitarium near Saranac Lake, where I remained nine months. I afterward spent ten months in another t. b. sanitarium. Since that time I have inside work most of the time. I have tried outside work of the nature J. K. W. wrote of, but but after a few weeks always gave it up on experiencing some slight symptoms. Dr. L. Brown once told me that an easy inside job was better than a hard outside one and my own experience has demonstrated the truth of that statement. Of course, all cases are not alike. While I have never been more than an arrested case (not entirely cured) still some I have known, who seemed to respond to the treatment in the sanitarium, have died after taking up outside work. Few who ever have been afflicted with t. b. can live the same life with safety that they formerly did. I have read that practically all the t. b. cases in the army were simply old arrested cases made active by the strenuous exercise of army life."

TO TREAT RINGWORMS.

Patron writes: "1. I am sending my third letter in regard to ringworms and have not seen a prescription in your column so far.

"2. I have ringworm spots that worked out on the back of my head, and these spots keep gradually getting worse and hair falling out around them. I would like to know a remedy for this."

REPLY.

1. Had you read the heading of the column you would have known that we make no promise to answer anonymous letters or to prescribe.

2. The approved treatment of ringworm of the scalp is burning with X-rays. After the hair has been burned away a few applications of iodine will cause the ringworm to leave.

THE BANGING OF SCREEN DOORS.

J. W. W. writes: "Throughout the long summer days thousands of screen doors are banging from morning till night with a noise disturbing to the nerves of sensitive people. Especially victimized are the people who live above small shops. In department stores there is on sale for about 25 cents a device consisting chiefly of a solid rubber ball that quite effectively abolishes this nuisance. These appliances well deserve to be in general use; every owner of a screen door owes it to his neighbors to attach one, and where the owner will not pay for one he would surely allow the sufferer to put one on. I have just had this experience after prolonged suffering of millions of bangs and I am showering benedictions on the head of the inventor."

FALSE ALARM.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—[Friend of the People.]—One could hardly believe that such a dirty alley could exist as the one in our block on West 47th street. Refuse and garbage make a terrible odor and certainly will spread sickness. There are no garbage cans and there certainly should be. Please have it investigated.

Mrs. J. S.

No one by the name which is signed to the letter, lives at the given address. This appears to be a fictitious complaint. Complainant states there are no garbage cans, which is not true, as there is one fence can for garbage and two portable cans. Notice has been served to provide more cans for both garbage and refuse.

PATENTS AND TRADE MARKS.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A. Can you patent or copyright a formula for soap?

B. Does the registration of the trade mark protect against the use of the formula prepared under said trade mark?

C. Can a trade mark be used as soon as application for register is made or is it necessary to wait for it to be passed upon in Washington?

H. E. G.

A. Patent protection is possible on proper facts.

B. In general, no.

C. It must be used before application.

REFUSE IN THE STREET.

Chicago, July 31.—[Friend of the People.]—I understand that there is a city ordinance prohibiting people sweeping refuse into the street. A concern in our block on Roosevelt road sweeps nearly every day and sweeps the refuse right into the street. He often does this right after the street cleaner has been around there and cleaned up.

M. H.

The parties complained of have been notified to discontinue sweeping rubbish into the street.

TELL IT TO A JUDGE.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—The latter part of February we received a notice to vacate our flat, but after talking it over with the landlord he decided we might remain if we would pay $10 more on the month. This we agreed to do, although he refused to give us a lease. Last week we received another sixty day notice to move. Are we obliged to do so by law?

A. B. E.

Yes, except that a judge would have discretionary power to grant you a six months' stay of execution.

NEW GARAGE BUILT.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—The landlord of my apartment house is erecting a garage in the rear of the two lots that the house occupies which will accommodate four cars, and is to be rented out, of course. Does this not depreciate the value of my lease (standard apartment form) and could we not, legally speaking, secure a reduction in the rents in the form of "damages"? The garage will occupy practically the entire yard and surely the worth of the apartment rentals must be reduced by the elimination of the back yard.

E. C.

It would be safer to sue him for your damages than to hold the estimated amount back from the rent.

UNITED STATES HISTORY—ANSWERS.

1. Where and when was the first permanent settlement in the Mississippi valley? At Kaskaskia, Ill., about 1690.
2. What was the cause of the French and Indian wars? Disputed territory.
3. What peoples were engaged in those wars? The French and Indians against the British.
4. Where was the cause of those wars situated? It was the territory west of the Alleghany mountains, along the Ohio river and the northern lakes.
5. Who was sent to request the French to withdraw from the territory on the Ohio? George Washington.
6. What was the result of Washington's attempt to compel the French to abandon the Ohio river territory? After some successes Washington marched to Great Meadows, where he built Fort Necessity. Early in July, 1753, the fort was attacked by the whole French and Indian force, but was so well defended that the French commander, Count de Villiers, raised a flag of truce. Washington finally gave up the fort, but was permitted to march away with all the honors of war.
7. How were Washington and his soldiers rewarded by the legislature of Virginia? A vote of thanks was passed and each soldier was to receive a "pistole."
8. After Washington returned, what general was sent in his place against the French? Gen. Braddock, with a picked force of 1,200 men.
9. What was the result of this expedition? The forces under Braddock were surprised in ambush and utterly routed. Braddock was mortally wounded and nearly all his officers and half his troops were killed. Braddock was buried during the retreat. Washington ordered the wagons to pass over his grave and obliterate it so that his body would not fall into the hands of the Indians.
10. Who was the only mounted officer saved in this expedition? Washington, although four bullets pierced his coat and two horses were shot under him.

DR. SINGER AS A PROPHET.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Your editorial of July 30, "Why Not Chicago?" suggesting the metropolis of the west as "the ideal place for the preliminary conference on Pacific questions between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan," brings to mind the most remarkable prediction propounded to Senator Medill McCormick by our own townsman, Dr. Berthold Singer, consul general for Nicaragua and consul for Spain, Costa Rica, and Salvador. At a time when his prognostication seemed incredible, at a time when President Harding had not yet announced his intention of calling a disarmament conference, as early as March 22, 1921, this remarkable authority on international affairs—he is professor of international law at the Chicago Law school, lecturer at the De Paul university, and author of several volumes on "trade marks, patents, and copyrights," "American Diplomacy" [in preparation]—Mr. Singer declared that "there will soon be a revision of the Versailles treaty 'at Washington.'" This, his prediction, Dr. Singer repeated to Senator McCormick on March 28, when the ambassador of Spain gave a banquet in honor of the senator, and at which occasion Dr. Singer was the toastmaster, asserting again that "at Washington there will soon be a revision of the peace treaty." In view of later developments and in the light of President Harding's recent invitation of the governments to a "disarmament conference at Washington," Dr. Singer's prophecy seems most astounding and marvelous. For after all this disarmament conference is a revision of the abortive "peace treaty" [?] and as the meeting will be at Washington—if not in Chicago, as the editor of The Tribune suggests—it puts our own Dr. Singer in the forefront of the ablest of American statesmen.

OTHERWISE WITH COMPLIMENTS.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—As an Illinois citizen and a Wilson Democrat, I would like to meet the man or party who signed F. W. McDaniel to the letter headed "A Mixture of Good and Bad" for about ten minutes and I feel confident that no matter how big he is I would be tempted to wring his neck. Any man who can sit down and write such a letter as F. W. Mc. did in regard to the soldier's bonus and commend Harding on his courage regarding the bonus is in my estimation in the same class as Bergdoll, if not worse. I would hardly have the nerve to class myself as a citizen if I didn't have any more regard for the soldiers than F. W. Mc. It is quite evident from his letter writing that he didn't serve his country as my husband did or he would not write such trash. Not that either my husband or myself feel that the government owes us anything, because my husband was one of the fortunate ones to come home all together, but the poor unfortunate ones who returned disabled for life are the ones who should get every consideration in the world and from everybody, but, of course, you will find any number of narrow minded people just like F. W. Mc., but thank God I nor none of my people are numbered amongst them.

PRICES ON THE PIER.

Hollywood, Ill., Aug. 2.—Your letter in yesterday's Tribune, headed "Who Gets the Money and for What?" signed by H. W. S. The display at the pier is worth 50 cents admission. I've paid several times 50 cents to see shows far worse than the "Pageant of Progress." In fact, I never gained so much knowledge and had so much fun for 50 cents in my life, so I don't care who gets the 50 cents. If Mayor Thompson gets it, all well and good. He conceived the idea and he ought to get something out of it. If H. W. S. or I had been smart enough to get up something like that maybe we'd be pocketing the money!

May I also call your attention to the very nice lunch we purchased there on Sunday for 50 cents? Packed in a neat box and wrapped in wax paper, we found two ham sandwiches (with lots of real ham), an individual pie, pickles, and fruit. With this we received either coffee or milk. It's been many a day since we were able to secure all this for 50 cents. Surely there is no profiteering there, and the party running that particular "concession" is to be congratulated.

Let's not be knockers always, but let's boost once in a while, especially something that is worthy of a boost. M. L. P.

KEEPING JAPAN OFF OUR NECK.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—The editorial that appears in today's Tribune under the heading, "England and America," is much to be regretted. It is unworthy of any newspaper that does not belong to the yellow press, and will be deplored by all who earnestly desire to see the best of feeling existing between the old country and the new.

There is no truth whatever in the statement that the British aristocracy do not like America because it has no king. Nor is it true that the middle and lower classes envy America because it has a president instead of a king. There is not a member of the two classes—excepting only the "Reds," of whom there are many in this country that don't like presidents—who would exchange his king for a president if such a thing were possible. The British middle and lower classes love their king as much as do the aristocracy. In Britain no foreigner's memory is so sacred as that of Abraham Lincoln, and the people could never be other than respect the country that produced such a man.

It is unfair to class all aristocrats with the few wastrels who marry American heiresses to restore their broken fortunes. Surely the sins of a half of 1 per cent cannot justify wholesale condemnation!

For myself I believe Lord Curzon wholly incapable of making the remark about his American wives attributed to him. All that I know of Lord Curzon is to his credit and I am not prepared to accept the irresponsible mouthings of a disgruntled politician as the truth against him.

The references to Britain's Japanese policy deserve nothing better than a monosyllabic contradiction. I will say, however, that but for Britain having constantly stood in the way, America would long ago have felt the teeth of Nippon. The fact that peace still exists between America and Japan proves conclusively that Britain never has been and is not now looking for what benefit she might gain in the event of war between this country and Japan. It is true enough that if the day ever comes when Britain lets go the leash, war will come. And the fault will not be Britain's but the wholly unwarranted effusions that appear in the American press of the character of that which appears in The Tribune today.

BRITISH ARISTOCRACY.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Your editorial, "England and America," which appeared in yesterday's issue, is timely, liberal, and to the point. Aristocracy, as depicted in your article, has been, more or less, a hindrance, not only to "John Bull and his tight little island" but all countries having a monarchical form of government. Russia is now suffering from its baneful results; France has suffered, also Germany, but England is awakening before such a period of suffering shall have come to her. The British aristocrat is fast becoming extinct. There have been and are, of course, exceptional cases where one will find that some obscure aristocrat has been and is a worthy citizen of his country. One must not, therefore, look upon all titled Englishmen as being aristocrats; many have earned their titles through merit rather than inheritance, through having accomplished some great thing for science, art, music, literature, etc., and many have even refused a peerage, earldom, or baronetcy, as the case may be, and to these England is largely indebted for her success. They are the "salt of the earth" and it is they, not the titled gentry, on whom England's future success will largely depend.

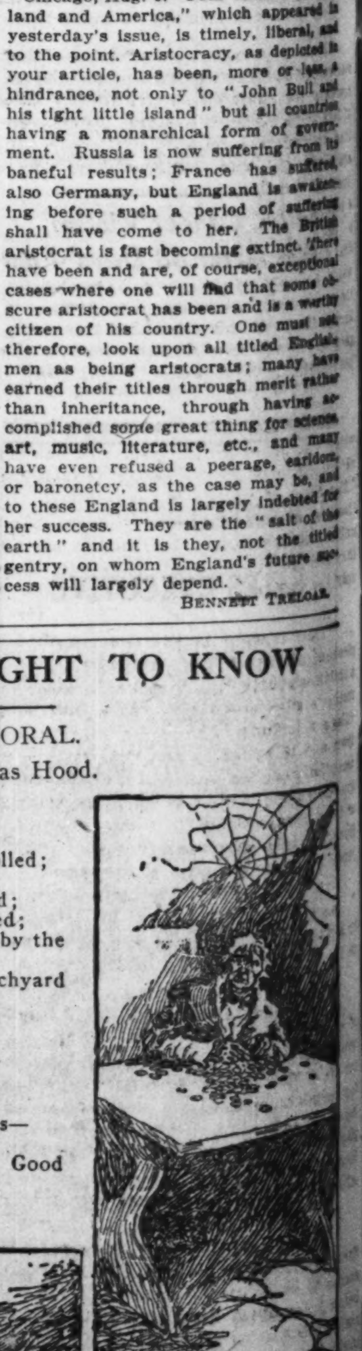
POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

HER MORAL.

By Thomas Hood.



Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!
Bright and yellow, hard and cold,
Molten, graven, hammered, and rolled;
Heavy to get, and light to hold;
Hoarded, bartered, bought, and sold;
Stolen, borrowed, squandered, doled;
Spurned by the young, but hugged by the old
To the very verge of the churchyard mold;
Price of many a crime untold.

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!
Good or bad a thousandfold!
How widely its agencies vary—
To save—to ruin—to curse—to bless—
As even its minted coins express,
Now stamp'd with the image of Good Queen Bess.
And now of bloody Mary.

A COLLECTED edition of the works of Max Beerbohm is to be brought out in twelve volumes, limited to 750 sets. It will be somewhat like the collected Conrad that Heinemann is bringing out, of which ten volumes have thus far appeared. It will be autographed by Mr. Beerbohm, and will be, to those of us who have been completely beerbohmed, priceless!

There is no person writing today who is more whimsically delightful than Max Beerbohm. He has that almost unique quality of being at the same time sophisticated and naive, esoteric and common, high and low browed, fearless and timid. He is the kind of mental paradox that Mr. Chesterton's somewhat strained jugglings of words would be if they weren't words but thoughts. He sees both sides of the medal; he somehow knows the elephant as a whole instead of as the men in the fable knew him, as many writers do.

Mr. Heywood Broun suggested one time that there was no reason why the highbrows should have all the best things, that Max Beerbohm was good enough for any working man to read. He has always been considered sort of precious, a bit of literary arabesque. He is. But he also is a literary bludgeon. He is Falstaffian when he wants to be and James Stephensesque when that mood suits him better. His "Seven Men" was one of the most delightful books of last fall. "And Even Now," a volume of essays which has been published in England, but which has not yet been brought out here, is incomparable.

"Incomparable," I remember now, is the adjective that Bernard Shaw applied to him many years ago. Also I remember something I read in a pleasant little book which Putnams imported, "The Men of the Nineties," by Bernard Muddiman. "He is in literature what the cocktail is among drinks," a simile which is still understandable but not stimulating. And, "In Max Beerbohm irony took on a weird twinge of grace almost Pierrotlike."

If you don't like Max Beerbohm—but you will, and a casualty will be averted. It was Max Beerbohm, you remember, whom Mr. B. L. Taylor was collecting in first editions. Read "On Speaking French" in "And Even Now." It is delicious. In it there is a lovely anecdote about Mme. Chose ("that brilliant woman," he says), who, at a luncheon, suddenly leaned across the table and, "with great animation amidst a general hush, launched at me a particular swift flight of winged words." "To listen and from time to time murmur 'c'est vrai' may seem safe enough, yet there is danger even here." (Isn't it delightfully true that half of our amateur French conversation consists in murmuring "it is true" with a mournful intonation?) "She had," continues Mr. Beerbohm, "as it presently turned out, been asking me which of the younger French novelists was most highly thought of by English critics; so that her surprise at having never heard of the gifted young Sévré was natural enough."

"The Old Soak," by Don Marquis, is a really funny book, a rare item these days. It is a history of the Demon Rum and the dens of iniquity and comfort in which he had his nefarious traffic. He weaves a dainty little essay around the educative influence of the barroom. He shows how prohibition will ruin the growing child by putting liquor in every home. He declares that it is wrecking the home by making wives suspicious when their husbands are detained at the office. Formerly they knew where their husbands were. Now they wonder if the unsuspected caller could have been a lady, he says.

It is making grouches out of sunny dispositions by starting every day wrong. There is no religion for busy men now that they don't meet the Salvation Army in the barroom. There is little politeness—and that chapter is really awfully funny. "It used to be," he says, "that you would get on a subway train and there would be two or three women standing up and you would be sitting down, and you would say to yourself 'Am I a gentleman or ain't I a gentleman?' 'You're damned right, I am a gentleman,' you would say to yourself. 'Here, lady, you sit down, and don't let any of these here bums roust you out of that seat.'"

"I want a copy of Jane Adams by Booth Tarkington," said a customer the other day in a bookshop. Which reminds me of a comment which a most discriminating reader made about Alice and Mr. Tarkington's beautifully real picture of her.

"I don't see how you can say that there's anything amusing in Alice Adams," he said. "I think it is the most tragic book I have ever read. I never felt so sorry for any one. And the dinner party—which you thought was humorous—is the most tragic thing in the book. I once knew a girl who was dropped just like that—between cotillions. A belle one moment, the next forgotten or, worse, snubbed."

I told him how bitterly Booth Tarkington did weep (as they say in the ancient ballads) when somebody said that "Alice Adams" was a story of small town life. Mr. Tarkington thinks that it might have happened anywhere.

"Impossible," said he. "In a city there would always be something or somebody around the corner to fill the life of a girl like Alice Adams. The tragedy of her social ostracism is a town and not a city phenomenon. And in a city a young man wouldn't have acted as that young man did. Tarkington did a fine job with him. You wanted to dislike him, but you couldn't. He was a victim of small town psychology, not inherently a cad. It's a great book!"

"More Limehouse Nights" is another collection of Thomas Burke's short stories of the waterside in London. There is no story in this group which can compare for sheer beauty with "The Chink and the Child," nor for the irony of fate with many of the first Limehouse Nights, but the stories are all more than potboilers. There is one which will remind you of the O. Henry story about the girl who sold her lovely hair to buy a Christmas present for her husband, who had meantime been scrimping pitifully so that he might buy her a pair of jeweled sidecombs for Christmas. It is the story of a girl who was a "nark," an informant for the police, who reformed for love and made one final coup so that she might buy her beloved a punching bag. She thought he was a brilliant young boxer. Thrilled by love into truthfulness, she told him the truth about what she had been, and he laughingly replied that he had known it all the time and that he wasn't a boxer either, but a member of a gang of thieves, and the story ends as she realizes that the information which has bought her first present for him will be his undoing.

Adriana Spadoni wrote a good novel in "The Swing of the Pendulum," which was published last year. It was her first and so above the average that her second novel did not escape unseen in the swirling current of spring fiction. "The Noise of the World," it is called. It is a story of the married life of two idealists, not, as is usually the case in novels of marital infelicity, of two so unlike that their arcs touch only in one spot. Anne and Roger quarrel because they are too much alike. They hear the noise of the world because they see only the confusion of the parts, not the rhythm of the whole.

"The House with the Golden Windows" is another of J. E. Buckrose's pleasant novels of English country life. This one is about a girl, adopted by a childless couple, who inherits, through her foster father's death and her foster mother's silence about her parentage, a house and what is considered in the village a fortune. She revels in her good fortune and becomes the belle of the town and is wooed by the gay son of her solicitors. When the truth of the deception becomes known there is much consternation and the world seems to shut down the curtain of her rosy visions of the future. Eventually, though, as they always should in summer novels, right wins and love triumphs. Mrs. Buckrose is always easy to read. Whether or not she is worth reading depends upon the demands of the reader.

The Theatre Arts Magazine for July has an exceedingly interesting group of articles and letters. Kenneth Macgowan gives a review of the season in which he says: "A better season than last—which was itself the best season the New York theater had ever known—reached its climax in the almost perfect production and the extraordinary financial success of the moving and beautiful play 'Liliom.'" There is a description of the enormous festival playhouse which Max Reinhardt is building in Salzburg, a letter from Maurice Browne, which is a fine statement of the place of the drama in life, and, among others, an article on the theater in soviet Russia.

"Outwitting Our Nerves," by Josephine A. Jackson, M. D., and Helen M. Salisbury, is a popular book about the bugaboo of nerves. More and more seems to be written nowadays about the mechanical efficiency of the body being interrupted by the mind. Doctors seem to be saying that, aside from totally mechanical inaccuracies, the machines of our bodies are managed entirely from our brains. Such books as this are not in any sense medical. They are popular presentations of the latest theories of psychology, and this is a primer on the subject.

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA, QUEEN AND WOMAN

BY LYTTON STRACHEY

QUEEN VICTORIA, though she sat on a throne longer than any other British ruler and reigned over more human beings than any other monarch, could not help being a woman. Almost sanctified she is in the legends built about her by her subjects; but in the secret records of the British Museum are proofs that she was very much a human being.

Some of these closely guarded secrets have now been given to the world. Lytton Strachey, who has come to the front in England as an authority on matters connected with the Victorian age, has been privileged to inspect the secret documents, including the Queen's own diary and letters, and has given a new view of many events in "Queen Victoria," a book which has made a sensation not only in Britain but on the continent of Europe and in America. Some passages from the book are presented herewith.

GEORGE III. was still living (1817), an aged lunatic, at Windsor, completely impervious to the impressions of the outer world. Of his seven sons, the youngest was of more than middle age, and none had legitimate offspring. It seemed highly improbable that the prince regent, who had lately been obliged to abandon his stays, and presented a preposterous figure of debauched obesity, could ever again, even on the supposition that he divorced his wife and remarried, become the father of a family.

The Duke of York, whose escapades in times past with Mrs. Clarke and the army had brought him into trouble, now divided his life between London and a large, extravagantly ordered and extremely uncomfortable country house where he occupied himself with racing, whist, and improper stories. He was remarkable among the princes for one reason: he was the only one of them—so we are informed by a highly competent observer—who had the feelings of a gentleman. He had been long married to the Princess Royal of Prussia, a lady who rarely went to bed and was perpetually surrounded by vast numbers of dogs, parrots, and monkeys. They had no children.

The Duke of Clarence had lived for many years in complete obscurity with Mrs. Jordan, the actress, in Bushey Park. By her he had a large family of sons and daughters, and had appeared, in effect, to be married to her, when he suddenly separated from her. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Jordan died in distressed circumstances in Paris.

The Duke of Cumberland was probably the most unpopular man in England. Hideously ugly, with a distorted eye, he was bad-tempered and vindictive in private, a violent reactionary in politics, and was subsequently suspected of murdering his valet and of having carried on an amorous intrigue of an extremely scandalous kind. He had lately married a German princess, but there were as yet no children.

The Duke of Sussex had mildly literary tastes and collected books. He had married Lady Augusta Murray, by whom he had two children, but the marriage, under the Royal Marriage Act, was declared void. On Lady Augusta's death, he married Lady Cecilia Buggin; she changed her name to Underwood; but this marriage also was void.

Of the Duke of Cambridge, the youngest of the brothers, not much was known. He lived in Hanover, wore a blonde wig, chattered and fidgeted a great deal, and was unmarried.

Besides his seven sons, George III. had five surviving daughters. Of these, two—the Queen of Wurtemberg and the Duchess of Gloucester—were married and childless. The three unmarried princesses—Augusta, Elizabeth, and Sophia—were all over forty.

The fourth son of George III. was Edward, Duke of Kent. He was now fifty—a tall, stout, vigorous man, highly colored, with bushy eyebrows, a bald top to his head, and what hair he had dyed a glossy black. He had spent his early life in the army—at Gibraltar, in Canada, in the West Indies—and, under the influence of military training, had become at first a disciplinarian and at last a martinet. In 1802, having been sent to Gibraltar to restore order in a mutinous garrison, he was recalled for undue severity, and his active career had come to an end. He was hopelessly in debt. He had quarreled with most of his brothers, particularly with the Prince Regent.

After the death of the Princess Charlotte it was clearly important that the Duke of Kent should marry. It was also likely to be highly expedient from the point of view of the Duke. To marry as a public duty, for the sake of the royal succession, would surely deserve some recognition from a grateful country.

The Duke, reflecting upon all these matters with careful attention, happened, about a month after his niece's death, to visit Brussels, and learned that Mr. Creevey was staying in the town. Mr. Creevey was a close friend of the leading Whigs and an inveterate gossip; and it occurred to the Duke that there could be no better channel through which to communicate his views upon the situation to political circles at home. He therefore sent for him on some trivial pretext, and a remarkable conversation ensued.

Laments His Duty to Marry.

"SHOULD the Duke of Clarence not marry," he said, "the next prince in succession is myself, and although I trust I shall be at all times ready to obey any call my country may make upon me, God only knows the sacrifice it will be to make, whenever I shall think it my duty to become a married man.

"It is now seven-and-twenty years that Mme. St. Laurent and I have lived together; we are of the same age, and have been in all climates and in all difficulties together, and you may well imagine, Mr. Creevey, the pang it will occasion me to part with her. I put it to your own feelings—in the event of any separation between you and Mrs. Creevey. As for Mme. St. Laurent herself, I protest I don't know what is to become of her if a marriage is to be forced upon me; her feelings are already so agitated upon the subject.

"My brother, the Duke of Clarence, is the elder brother, and has certainly the right to marry if he chooses, and I would not interfere with him on any account. If he wishes to be king—to be married and have children, poor man—God help him. Let him do so.

"For myself—I am a man of no ambition, and wish only to remain as I am. Easter, you know, falls early this year—the twenty-second of March. If the Duke of Clarence does not take any step before that time, I must find some pretext to reconcile Mme. St. Laurent to my going to England for a short time. When once there, it will be easy for me to consult with my friends as to the proper steps to be taken."

Two names, the Duke said, had been mentioned in this connection—those of the Princess of Baden and the Princess of Saxe-Coburg. The latter, he thought, would perhaps be the better of the two; but before any other steps were taken, he hoped and expected to see justice done to Mme. St. Laurent.

As to his own settlement, the Duke observed that he would expect the Duke of York's marriage to be considered the precedent. "That," he said, "was a marriage for the succession, and £25,000 for income was settled, in addition to all his other income, purely on that account."

As it turned out, both the brothers decided to marry. The Duke of Kent, selecting the Princess of Saxe-Coburg, was united to her on May 29, 1818. She was the widow of the Prince of Leiningen, and had two children. On June 11, the Duke of Clarence followed suit with a daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Meiningen. But they were disappointed in their financial expectations, for though the government brought forward proposals to increase their allowances, the motions were defeated in the House of Commons.

At this the Duke of Wellington was not surprised. "By God!" he said, "there is a great deal to be said about that. They are the damnedest millstones about the necks of any government that can be imagined. They have insulted—personally insulted—two-thirds of the gentlemen of England."

Eventually, however, Parliament increased the Duke of Kent's annuity by £6,000. The subsequent history of Mme. St. Laurent has not transpired.

The new Duchess of Kent, Victoria Mary Louisa, was a daughter of Francis, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, and a sister of Prince Leopold—later the Belgian king. The family was an ancient one, being a branch of the great House of Wettin, which since the eleventh century had ruled over the March of Meissen on the Elbe.

The duchy of Saxe-Coburg was exceedingly small, containing about 60,000 inhabitants, but it enjoyed independent and sovereign rights. During the disturbed years which followed the French Revolution, its affairs became terribly involved. The Napoleonic harrow passed over Saxe-Coburg. The duchy was seized by the French, and the ducal family were reduced to beggary, almost starvation.

Prince Leopold, thrown upon his own resources at fifteen, made a career for himself and married the heiress of England. The Princess of Leiningen, struggling at Amorbach with poverty, military requisitions, and a futile husband, developed an independence of character and a tenacity of purpose which were to prove useful in very different circumstances. Her second marriage seemed at first to be chiefly a source of difficulties and discomforts. The Duke, declaring that he was still too poor to live in England, moved about with uneasy precision through Belgium and Germany, attending parades and inspecting barracks in a neat military cap, while the English notabilities looked askance, and the Duke of Wellington dubbed him the Corporal.

"Damme!" he exclaimed to Mr. Creevey, "d'ye know what his sisters call him? They call him Joseph Surface!"

The Birth of Victoria.

SETTLED down at last at Amorbach, the time hung heavily on the duke's hands. The establishment was small, the country was impoverished. He brooded—for in spite of his piety the duke was not without a vein of superstition—over the prophecy of a gypsy at Gibraltar, who told him that he was to have many losses and crosses, that he was to die in happiness, and that his only child was to be a great queen.

Before long it became clear that a child was to be expected; the Duke decided that it should be born in England. Funds were lacking for the journey, but his determination was not to be set aside. A carriage was hired, and the Duke himself mounted the box. Inside were the Duchess, her daughter Feodora, a girl of fourteen, with maids, nurses, lap-dogs, and canaries.

Off they drove—through Germany, through France; bad roads, cheap inns were nothing to the rigorous Duke and the equable, abundant Duchess. The channel was crossed, London was reached in safety. The authorities provided a set of rooms in Kensington Palace; and there, on May 24, 1819, a female infant was born.

The child who, in these not impressive circumstances, appeared in the world, received but scant attention. There was small reason to foresee her destiny. The Duchess of Clarence, two months before, had given birth to a daughter; this infant, indeed, had died almost immediately; but it seemed highly probable that the Duchess would again become a mother; and so it actually fell out.

Nevertheless, the Duke had other views: there were prophecies. At any rate, he would christen the child Elizabeth, a name of happy augury. In this, however, he reckoned without the Regent, who, seeing a chance of annoying his brother, suddenly announced that he himself would be present, and signified at the same time that one of the godfathers was to be the Emperor Alexander of Russia.

And so when the ceremony took place, and the Archbishop of Canterbury asked by what name he was to baptize the child, the Regent replied "Alexandrina." At this the Duke ventured to suggest that another name might be added. "Certainly," said the Regent; "Georgina?" "Or Elizabeth?" said the Duke.

There was a pause, during which the archbishop, with the baby in his lawn sleeves, looked with some uneasiness from one prince to the other. "Very well, then," said the Regent at last, "call her after her mother. But Alexandrina must come first." Thus, to the disgust of her father, the child was christened Alexandrina Victoria.

Before long, the world began to be slightly interested in the nursery at Kensington. When, early in 1821, the Duchess of Clarence's second child, the Princess Elizabeth, died within three months of its birth, the interest increased. The fair haired, blue eyed child was idolized by her nurses and her mother's ladies and her sister (half-sister) Feodora; and for a few years there was danger, in spite of her mother's strictness, of her being spoiled. The Duke of Kent had died, Jan. 22, 1820. From time to time, she would fly into a violent passion, stamp her little foot, and set every one at defiance; whatever they might say, she would not learn her letters—no, she would not; afterwards she was very sorry, and burst into tears; but her letters remained unlearned.

When she was five years old, however, a change came, with the appearance of Fraulein Lehzen. This lady, who was the daughter of a Hanoverian clergyman and had previously been the Princess Feodora's governess, soon succeeded in instilling a new spirit into her charge. At first, indeed, she was appalled by the little Princess's outbursts of temper; never in her life, she declared, had she seen such a passionate and naughty child.

Then she observed something else: the child was extraordinarily truthful; whatever punishment might follow, she never told a lie. Firm, very firm, the new governess yet had the sense to see that all the firmness in the world would be useless unless she could win her way into little Drina's heart. She did so, and there were no more difficulties.

Mother Watches Drina Day and Night.

THE Duchess was determined that her daughter, from the earliest possible moment, should be prepared for her high station in a way that would commend itself to the most respectable. Drina, as she was called in the family circle, should never be allowed to forget for a moment the virtues of simplicity, regularity, propriety, and devotion.

The little girl, however, was really in small need of such lessons. She understood quite well the niceties of her own position. When a child of six Lady Jane Ellice was taken by her grandmother to Kensington Palace, she was put to play with the Princess Victoria, who was the same age as herself. The young visitor, ignorant of etiquette, began to make free with the toys on the floor, in a way which was a little too familiar.

"You must not touch those," she was quickly told, "they are mine; and I may call you Jane, but you must not call me Victoria."

In 1827 the Duke of York died. Three years later George IV. also disappeared, and the Duke of Clarence reigned in his stead (William IV.). The new Queen, it was now clear, would in all probability never again be a mother; the Princess Victoria, therefore, was recognized by Parliament as heir-presumptive.

Morning and evening, day and night, there was no relaxation of the maternal vigilance. The child grew into the girl, the girl into the young woman; but still she slept in her mother's bedroom; still she had no place allowed her where she might sit or work by herself. An extraordinary watchfulness surrounded her every step; up to the day of her accession, she never went downstairs without some one beside her holding her hand. Plainness and regularity ruled the household.

It was her misfortune that the mental atmosphere which surrounded her was almost entirely feminine. No father, no brother, was there to break in upon the gentle monotony of the daily round with impetuosity, with rudeness, with careless laughter and wafts of freedom from the outside world. The Princess was never called by a voice that was loud and growling; never felt, as a matter of course, a hard rough cheek on her own soft one; never climbed a wall with a boy.

Female duty, female elegance, female enthusiasm, hemmed her completely in; and her spirit, amid the enclosing folds, was hardly reached by those two great influences, without which no growing life can truly prosper—humor and imagination.

The Baroness Lehzen—for she had been raised to that rank in the Hanoverian nobility by George IV. before he died—was the real center of the Princess' world. The Princess gave her mother her dutiful regards; but Lehzen had her heart. The voluble, shrewd daughter of the pastor in Hanover, lavishing her devotion on her royal charge, had reaped her reward in an unbounded confidence and a passionate adoration. The girl would have gone through fire for her "precious Lehzen," the "best and truest friend," she declared, that she had had since her birth.

When the Princess was fourteen she was delighted by the arrival of a couple of boys from Wurtemberg, the Princes Alexander and Ernst, sons of her mother's sister.

"They are both extremely tall," she noted in her journal, begun when she was thirteen. "Alexander is very handsome and Ernst has a very kind expression. They are both extremely amiable." And their departure filled her with corresponding regrets.

Two years later two other cousins arrived, the Princes Ferdinand and Augustus. She could not quite decide which was the handsomer of the two. On the whole, she concluded, "I think Ferdinand handsomer than Augustus, his eyes are so beautiful and he has such a lively clever expression; both have such a sweet expression; Ferdinand has something quite beautiful in his expression when he speaks and smiles, and he is so good."

Weeps as King Denounces Mother.

BUT shortly afterwards two more cousins arrived, who threw all the rest into the shade. These were the Princes Ernest and Albert, sons of her mother's eldest brother, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. "Albert," she wrote, "is extremely handsome; his hair is about the same color as mine; his eyes are large and blue, and he has a beautiful nose and a very sweet mouth with fine teeth; but the charm of his countenance is his expression, which is most delightful; c'est a la fois full of goodness and sweetness, and very clever and intelligent."

When, after a stay of three weeks, the time came for the young men and their father to return to Germany, the moment of parting was a melancholy one.

"It was our last happy, happy breakfast, with this dear Uncle and those dearest beloved cousins, whom I do love so very, very dearly; much more dearly than any other cousins in the world. Dearly as I love Ferdinand, and also good Augustus, I love Ernest and Albert more than them. O yes, much more. . . . . They have both learnt a good deal, and are very clever, naturally clever, particularly Albert. . . . I embraced both my dearest cousins most warmly, as also my dear Uncle. I cried bitterly, very bitterly."

"Particularly Albert"! She was just seventeen; and deep was the impression left upon that budding organism by the young man.

King William could not agree with his sister-in-law and the Duchess of Kent fully returned his antipathy. . . . She had no notion how to deal with him. She was the mother of the heiress of England; and it was for him to recognize that fact.

It was clear there would be a great explosion; and in the hot days of August, 1836, it came. The Duchess and the Princess had gone down to stay at Windsor for the King's birthday party, and the King himself, who was in London for the day to prorogue Parliament, paid a visit at Kensington Palace in their absence. There he found that the Duchess had just appropriated, against his express orders, a suite of seventeen apartments for her own use.

He was extremely angry, and, when he returned to Windsor, after greeting the Princess with affection, he publicly rebuked the Duchess for what she had done. But this was little to what followed.

On the next day was the birthday banquet; there were a hundred guests; the Duchess of Kent sat on the King's right hand, and the Princess Victoria opposite. At the end of the dinner, in reply to the toast of the King's health, he rose, and, in a long, loud, passionate speech poured out the vials of his wrath upon the Duchess.

She had, he declared, insulted him—grossly and continually; she had kept the Princess away from him in the most improper manner; she was surrounded by evil advisers, and was incompetent to act with propriety in the high station which she filled; but he would bear it no longer; he would have her to know he was King; he was determined that his authority should be respected; henceforth the Princess should attend at every Court function with the utmost regularity; and he hoped to God that his life might be spared for six months longer, so that the calamity of a regency might be avoided, and the functions of the Crown pass directly to the heiress-presumptive instead of into the hands of the "person now near him," upon whose conduct and capacity no reliance whatever could be placed.

The flood of vituperation rushed on for what seemed an interminable period, while the Queen blushed scarlet, the Princess burst into tears, and the hundred guests sat aghast. The Duchess said not a word until the tirade was over and the company had retired; then in a tornado of rage and mortification she called for her carriage and announced her immediate return to Kensington. It was only with the utmost difficulty that some show of a reconciliation was patched up and the outraged lady was prevailed upon to put off her departure till the morrow.

In her own household the Princess was pursued by bitterness and vexation of spirit. There was a deadly feud between Sir John Conroy (Major-Domo of the Duchess) and Baroness Lehzen. But that was not all. The Duchess had grown too fond of her Major-Domo. There were familiarities, and one day the Princess Victoria discovered the fact. She confided what she had seen to the Baroness, and to the Baroness' beloved ally, Madame de Spath. Unfortunately, Madame de Spath could not hold her tongue, and was actually foolish enough to reprove the Duchess, whereupon she was instantly dismissed.

It was not so easy to get rid of the Baroness. That lady, prudent and reserved, maintained an irreproachable demeanor. Her position was strongly entrenched; she had managed to secure the support of the King; and Sir John found that he could do nothing against her. But henceforth the household was divided into two camps.

The Duchess supported Sir John with all the abundance of her authority. The Princess Victoria said nothing, but she had been much attached to Madame de Spath, and she adored her Lehzen. The Duchess knew only too well that in this horrid embroilment her daughter was against her.

First Royal Act Breaks Mother's Power.

ON June 18 the King was visibly sinking. He died in the early hours of June 20, 1837. When all was over, the Archbishop and the Lord Chamberlain drove post-haste from Windsor to Kensington. They arrived at the palace at 5 o'clock. At 6 the Duchess woke up her daughter.

She got out of bed, put on her dressing gown, and went, alone, into the room where the messengers were standing. Looking at the bending, murmuring dignitaries, she knew she was Queen of England.

"Since it has pleased Providence," she wrote in her journal, "to place me in this station, I shall do my utmost to fulfil my duty towards my country; I am very young, and perhaps in many, though not in all things, inexperienced, but I am sure that very few have more real good will and more real desire to do what is fit and right than I have."

At half past eleven she went downstairs into the red saloon to hold her first Council. The great assembly of lords and notables, bishops, generals, and Ministers of State saw the doors thrown open and a very short, very slim girl in deep plain mourning come into the room alone and move forward to her seat with extraordinary dignity and grace; they saw a countenance not beautiful but prepossessing—fair hair, blue prominent eyes, a small curved nose, an open mouth revealing the upper teeth, a tiny chin, a clear complexion, and, over all, the strangely mingled signs of innocence, of gravity, of youth, and of composure; they heard a high, unwavering voice reading aloud with perfect clarity; and then, the ceremony was over, they saw the small figure rise and, with the same consummate grace, the same amazing dignity, pass out from among them, as she had come in, alone.

When she crossed the ante-room and found her mother waiting for her, she said: "And now, Mamma, am I really and truly Queen?"

"You see, my dear, that it is so."

"Then, dear Mamma, I hope you will grant me the first request I make to you as Queen. Let me be by myself for an hour."

For an hour she remained in solitude. Then she reappeared and gave a significant order: her bed was to be moved out of her mother's room. It was the doom of the Duchess of Kent. The long years of waiting were over at last; the moment of a lifetime had come; her daughter was Queen of England; and that very moment brought her own annihilation.

She found herself, absolutely and irretrievably, shut off from every vestige of influence, of confidence, of power. Through the mingled formalities of Court etiquette and filial duty, she could never penetrate to Victoria. She was unable to conceal her disappointment and her rage.

At the same time Victoria took another decided step. She had determined she would see no more of Sir John Conroy. She rewarded his past services with liberality; he was given a baronetcy and a pension of £3,000 a year; he remained a member of the Duchess' household, but his personal intercourse with the Queen came to an abrupt conclusion.

The remarkable story of the infatuation of Queen Victoria for Lord Melbourne, a man of fifty-eight with an involved past, will be related in the installment of Mr. Strachey's book to be printed next Sunday. This attachment almost prevented the marriage to Prince Albert. Other secret history of court life is also told.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CONTRACTS FOR 7 MONTHS UP TO 5 YEAR AVERAGE

Central West Shows 5% Decrease in July.

Building contracts let in the central western states during the first seven months of 1921 practically equal the average for the same period of the last five years, according to statistics made public yesterday by F. W. Dodge & Co. This includes the Chicago district and embraces Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri and portions of Eastern Kansas and Nebraska.

The figures in contracts during this period amount to $384,173,000. The July figures show the total amount of business contracted for as amounting to $58,244,000, a decrease of 5 per cent from the June figures. The labor uncertainty in Chicago is believed to be the principal cause of the decrease.

The July figures include the following: Public works and utilities, $13,162,000 or 23 per cent; business structures, $10,540,000 or 18 per cent; residential buildings, $10,495,000 or 18 per cent, and educational buildings, $8,570,000 or 15 per cent.

National Review.

The review on the building situation throughout the nation is as follows:

"Construction activity in July, according to figures published by the F. W. Dodge company, was 7 per cent less than in June, although it was 4 per cent greater than in July, 1920. Contracts awarded during July in the twenty-seven northeastern states of the country amounted to $212,491,000.

"Although the increases in building operations which were expected to develop in the summer months have not materialized, construction activity has held up very well in comparison with other lines of business.

"During the first ten days of July the volume of building contracts was very low, while the last three weeks showed total figures of considerable magnitude.

"Discussions of wage scales in many centers have been protracted and settlements have been delayed. Confidence in the stability of construction costs has not yet been generally established, although it is the opinion of a number of reliable authorities that necessary construction enterprises may be undertaken now under as favorable conditions as are likely to prevail at any time in the near future.

Eleven Months' Total.

"The total volume of building contracts let in the territory covered by the Dodge company during the first seven months of this year amounted to $1,278,747,000, which is 10 per cent greater than the average figure for the first seven months of the preceding five years.

"Residential building continued in the lead over all other classes in July, amounting to $60,452,000, or 28 per cent of the total. Public works and utilities amounted to $46,902,000, or 22 per cent of the total; business buildings, to $33,240,000, or 16 per cent; educational buildings to $28,602,000, or 13 per cent, and industrial building to $13,604,000 or 6½ per cent."

New work contemplated and reported from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, has amounted to $2,838,000,000, more than double the amount of contracts awarded during that time.

Buys Roscoe Street Flats, Garages, in $25,000 Deal

Bert W. Van Syckle is the new owner of the structure at 1020-22 Roscoe street containing four apartments, five garages, and a shop, which he secured from George J. Kappes for a reported $25,000, subject to a loan from the Lake View Trust and Savings bank. As part payment, vacant property, 50x150 feet on Armitage avenue opposite Lowell avenue, was taken in. W. C. Regelin, manager of the real estate department of the Krause State bank, represented both parties.

West Madison Street to Get New Bakery Business

Dora Klein of Granville, Ill., has sold the property at 1147 West Madison street to Fritz Kral for a reported $8,500 through Marks & Co. Mr. Kral will make improvements costing about $15,000, after which he will occupy the place with a bakery business. Levy & Klein, architects, have made the plans for the remodeling.

PITY THE BRICK MAKERS; "TOO MANY COMPETE"

The monthly statement of the Common Brick Manufacturers' association says:

"Overcompetition prevails quite generally in the brick industry today. The composite price, revealed by the reports of nearly 100 manufacturers, representing every important brick producing center in the country, is $14.49. This represents the price per 1,000 on board cars or trucks at the plant as of July 1. The composite price as of June 1 was $15.14. There is nothing in the reports from manufacturers to indicate a lower cost of manufacture, and the lower composite price is produced by the overcompetition in some centers.

"As has frequently been explained in this digest, the composite or average price does not mean anything except to indicate the trend of prices. It would be more illuminating to say that common brick is selling for from $9 a thousand to $25 a thousand. The lower price is found in the southeastern states and in Texas, and in both sections it is quoted without regard for the cost of manufacture and is unquestionably several dollars below actual cost. This low price is not general even in those sections, but is the extreme result of thoughtless and unbusinesslike competition. The appearance of the $9 brick, however, cuts down the composite price of all reports, proving the statement that a composite price means nothing."

GOOSE ISLAND TO HAVE NEW PLANT, NEW INDUSTRY

Goose Island is to have a new industry, and with the acquiring of it comes the announcement of the enlarging of one of its oldest plants. The Kaestner & Hecht company, makers of elevators, now at Throop and Harrison, has just bought for $275,000 from A. M. Castle & Co. 102,000 square feet at the northeast corner of Blackhawk and North Branch streets, improved with two seven story buildings. They will spend about $100,000 on improvements and alterations before occupying.

A. M. Castle & Co. have just started work on a new steel warehouse building at the northwest corner of Blackhawk and North Branch. It will be 211x232. The west 75 feet is to be two stories in height and the second floor will be used for the general offices of the company, giving a floor area 75x211. The total cost, including the ground, will be $350,000.

The main part of the building will be used for the storage of sheets, tubes, shafting, rivets, bolts, bars, and boiler accessories. R. G. Schmidt & Co. are architects of the new structure. Col. Edward B. Ellicott, chief engineer of the company, is in charge of the building operations. With this new plant the buildings of A. M. Castle & Co. will cover over five acres. Frederick T. Hoyt was broker in the above deals.

STEEL PRODUCTS WAREHOUSE TO COST $350,000

Construction of a warehouse for steel products of A. M. Castle & Co., at an approximate cost of $350,000, has been started at Blackhawk and North Branch streets. The architect is R. G. Schmidt, and Col. E. B. Ellicotte, chief engineer of the firm, is in charge of operations.

The structure is to be 211x232 feet and will be made of steel with pressed brick facings, walls, steel sash, concrete floors, and cement tile roofing. The west end of 75 feet will be two stories high, office space of 75x211 being provided on the second floor.

The principal building will be used for the storage of sheets, tubes, cold rolled shafting, rivets, bolts, and boiler accessories. Four electric traveling cranes with entrances from the street for trucks under each crane are to be provided.

CLOAK COMPANY TO OPEN STORE.

The Harding Cloak company has leased from Morris Ginsberg the entire building at 1370 Milwaukee avenue for a period of ten years for a term rental of $63,000. The firm, which was recently organized, will open for business after alterations have been completed.

3 FLAT SALES TOTAL $133,000 IN BRISK WEEK

The sale of three apartment buildings totaling an indicated price of $133,000 were among the many transfers of the week.

The twenty-two apartment three story building on the southwest corner of Sherman avenue and Seward street, Evanston, has been purchased by Pauline L. Lenhoff from Alvah C. Roebuck for an indicated $59,000.

Mary Healy, wife of the former police captain, sold the building at 4401-03 West Harrison street, consisting of three stores, offices, and apartments, to Charles Raciti for $37,000. As part payment the purchaser gave his house at 639 Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, free of incumbrances. I. J. Bliss & Co. represented the purchaser and J. T. Kelly the seller.

Anders E. Peterson bought the six apartment building at 1112 Main street, Evanston, from John H. Rowan for a reported $37,000, subject to $24,000. As part payment the store and three apartment structure at 2824 Armitage avenue, subject to $3,500, was transferred to the seller. The Sheridan Realty company represented both parties.

CAB PLANT TO MARK NEW ERA FOR WEST SIDE

The erection of the new plant of the Yellow Cab company on the northeast corner of Flournoy street and La Vergne avenue, ground for which will be broken this week, will mark the beginning of a new business district on the far west side. Manufacturing plants are to be put up on adjacent sites within the next year or two.

The new building will cost $100,000 and will be completed in record time, W. C. Bennett, the architect, announces. A. J. Montague & Son, who handled the leasing of the property for John E. Decker, owner, state that the paving of Flournoy street at the expense of the lessor will start at once. The building is to be erected by Mr. Decker, the lease providing for the payment of $252,000 for the term of twenty years.

FOUR DEALS IN FACTORY LEASES TOTAL $63,250

Four manufacturing leases involving a total rental of $63,250 have just been executed by E. N. Duerlein & Co. The Kemoroid company, synthetic and imitation leather manufacturers, have taken the two story building at the southwest corner of Kildare and Arthington street for five years at $24,000. The American Paint Products company have leased from the Chicago Bottlers' Clearing House association the two story building at 810-12 South Morgan street for five years at a term rental of $21,000.

The Sierra Chemical company of Los Angeles have taken 9,000 square feet at 3625 South Ashland avenue for three years at $10,150. The Brand estate has leased to the Universal Cap company the seventh floor at 75 West Van Buren street for three years at $8,100.

BUNGE BROS. ADD TO COAL YARDS.

The Bunge Bros. Coal company has bought through Ogden, Sheldon & Co. an addition of about 30,000 square feet to their Clybourn avenue yard for $12,000. The property is at Garfield avenue and Lewis street. Also 75 feet frontage on West Lake street, just east of its present yard at Paulina and Lake.

PLAN A PARADISE IN EDGEWATER FOR FLAT RIDDEN KIDS

The no children wanted countenance will be absent when the three story, forty-eight apartment building to be erected at 6341-43-45-47-49 Magnolia avenue by Carl Poch is completed. Instead youngsters will be welcomed, and for their convenience a children's playground equipped with modern devices will be one of the features of the new structure.

The building, which is to cost approximately $375,000, will have a centralized lobby, equipped with a fireplace, side lighting effects and appropriate statuary. Each apartment will contain modern improvements, including an ice machine and a built-in ironing board.

To finance the deal, the William Yeschek Co. is putting out an issue of $185,000 first mortgage 7 per cent gold bonds.

ROGERS PARK LANDS $500,000 HOTEL; SUN PARLORS, BALCONIES

Invasion of Rogers Park with a new apartment hotel on the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Lunt avenue is to take place soon, according to an announcement made yesterday by Andrew Sandegren, architect. The structure is to contain fifty-four apartments of from two to five rooms each and will be three stories high, containing an English basement.

The approximate cost of the building, which will be named the Erdanelle, will be $500,000. It will have sun parlors for each apartment, balconies, and a large rotunda on the ground floor. Hotel service will be maintained. The owners are Sven A. Danielson and John S. Erickson.

News of the Architects

Architect John Hulla has prepared plans for a three story store, office, and shop building to be erected at 322 and 324 North Michigan boulevard, cost $85,000. The building will contain two shops on the boulevard level, a store on the lower level, and offices on the second and third floors. The Mather Stock Car company, of which Alonzo Mather, owner of the property, is president, will occupy the entire third floor with their offices. The new building will be ready for occupancy about Oct. 15.

John Archibald Armstrong, 127 North Dearborn, is preparing plans for an ultra high grade six story apartment building, divided into suites of two and three rooms, to be erected at 4537 Drexel boulevard, for A. Irving Jordan, 111 West Washington street. Cost, $400,000. Work will be begun within thirty days. An old residence on the site will be wrecked.

Alexander L. Levy and William J. Klein, 111 West Washington street, are completing plans for a three story apartment building, 125x153, thirty-six suites, of three, four, five, and six rooms, on Fargo avenue, near Sheridan road. Cost, $175,000.

OLD CANDY FACTORY SOLD.

Bunte's old candy factory at 720-22 West Monroe street has been sold by Nathan K. Aranoff to Fred W. Popp for an indicated $95,000, subject to $70,000. The five story building will be remodeled and rented by Mr. Popp. The lot is 50x189.

WORK STARTS ON NEW $1,800,000 EMBASSY HOTEL

Bungalow on the Roof for Owner's Home.

Construction of the Embassy, Chicago's latest in apartment hotels, was started Thursday by John Stuts, contractor, on the southwest corner of Diversey parkway and Pine Grove avenue. The approximate total cost of the entire project including the furnishings is to be more than $1,800,000.

Details of the deal were completed and papers signed last Tuesday. Edward Rosing, the owner, issued instructions to Walter W. Ahlschlager, the architect, to proceed at once with the building, which is to be eleven stories. A first mortgage bond issue for $1,000,000 has been underwritten by the American Bond and Mortgage company.

To Have 510 Rooms.

The building will contain 510 rooms, divided into suites of three, four and five rooms. Each suite is to contain one or more fully equipped bedrooms, the feature being the absence of disappearing beds. There is to be a large lobby on the street level with private reception, rest and reading rooms adjoining. There will also be a barber shop. A ball room on the first floor to accommodate 150 dancing couples is also included in the plan. A restaurant and daylight kitchen will be on the first floor also.

Empire Style.

The lobby and first floor will be finished in the modern empire style. The exterior will be of cut stone, terra cotta, and a buff colored pressed brick, the architecture being in the Italian barocque style.

Mr. Rosing will build a modern bungalow on the roof of the new building in which he and his family will live.

Add $177,916 Tract to Palos Park Preserves

The Forest Preserve commissioners have added to the vast tract in Palos township, 166½ acres of land at a cost of $177,916 or $450 an acre. The new land adjoins the tract at Wolf and Ninety-fifth streets. By this purchase the Palos tract now numbers more than 1,000 acres of land.

PLANS HYDE PARK GARAGE.

Alexander M. Harroun has purchased from Adolph Gerhardy and J. H. Reeves, 100x150 feet at 5470-76 Lake Park avenue, for a reported $25,000, the north half being improved with a three story brick building which will be torn down to make way for a modern public garage. Mr. Harroun now owns the 100 feet north of this property, which is improved with a garage. T. D. O'Hern of John A. Carroll & Bro. was the broker.

GRAINS RALLY AS CORN, OATS, HIT NEW LOWS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

An overdue rally came to the grain markets in the last hour of trading after an early break that carried prices for September corn and oats to new low levels. Wheat made the best finish, with gains of ¾@1¼c, while corn was ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower, oats ¼c higher, and rye unchanged. Trading was mainly in evening up for the week, the support coming mainly from buying against weekly bids in which there was a profit.

Considering the depressing factors, the light outside support and the heavy unloading by leading longs, the markets gave a good account of themselves during the week. Wheat showed losses of only 3⅜c, corn 3¾@3⅞c, oats 1⅝@1¾c, rye 4@6¼c, barley 1c, pork 15c, lard 45@47½c on the distant futures and unchanged for January, and short ribs, 35@42½c, compared with a week ago.

Buy Wheat on Decline.

The decline in wheat prices continued to bring in good buying by exporters, but failed to help the markets speculatively. There were sales of 1,000,000 bu for export. Cash prices generally were weaker and lower, although premiums here were firmer on hard winters. At Kansas City 548 cars were received and 230 carried over from Friday unsold, with 1,000 expected Monday. Elevator room there is scarce and terminals are said to be blocked.

Aside from the export business and the wheat figures, there was little in the market news. The winter wheat movement is falling off. Chicago had 1,237,000 bu fewer than the previous week, or 4,287,000 bu, while primary receipts were 17,956,000 bu, 7,674,000 bu more than last year and 4,241,000 bu fewer than the previous week. News from Saskatchewan was less favorable, while black rust has done considerable damage to the late wheat. A heavy hail storm is said to have damaged the crop in a 75 mile section.

Prices were the lowest of the week in the early trading, with September down to $1.18 and December $1.22, a rally of 1½@2¼c from the low point and the close ½@¾c from the top.

Corn Weakens, Rallies.

The corn market was weak early on selling due to the posting as out of condition of 505,000 bu in South Chicago elevator C and annex. There was heavy buying by local professionals who had recently made liberal sales, and a great deal of liquidation, which carried September down to 55⅞, with a rally of 1⅛c later, while December, after touching 56, rallied 1¼c and both months closed slightly below the top. The week's receipts show a decrease, but a larger business is expected.

Spreaders and changers furnished a large part of the business in oats. There was selling of a large line against purchases of corn by local traders and buying of September and selling of December, and vice versa, by elevator interests and speculators at 3c difference. The market was oversold on a decline to 36c for September, the lowest of the season, and a covering movement brought an advance of ⅞c, with the close at nearly the top. The week's movement at primary points was 9,875,000 bu more than last year and about a record.

Aside from a little selling of September and buying of December rye at 1c difference by local elevators, and the selling of rye and buying of wheat at 14c difference by speculators, there was little in the rye market. Prices moved up 1c and closed ¼@½c from the top. Shipments by lake for the week were 474,000 bu and total receipts 462,000 bu.

Provisions Make Gain.

Provisions had better support, which absorbed the liquidating and other sales, due to lower prices for hogs. Buying due to new export business in lard made a good rally and lard gained 35@37½c on the near futures and 10c on January, while ribs were slow, but 7½@10c higher. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 2,650,000 hogs, or 149,000 more than last year. The week's shipments of lard and meats were 32,000,000 lbs or nearly 10,000,000 lbs more than last year. NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Through this territory half the crop is almost ripe, but yield will be light as the result of heat," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Stoughton, Sask. "Late wheat has been badly damaged by black rust. Saskatchewan crop will be greatly reduced this year. The crop on a large area was almost entirely destroyed by hail yesterday. Have had too much rain. Weather cool; think there is danger of frost."

B. O. Cromwell wired E. W. Wagner & Co. from Sioux City, Ia.: "Corn through this territory is spotted. Where local showers supplied sufficient moisture very heavy yields are now assured. Dry weather for four weeks was relieved just as condition became critical. In general, damage was light and shows in cobs of 5 per cent of the ears, with tips bare for two to three inches or bare in patchy spots. Some fields on light soil will make small yields. About 50 per cent of the fields examined show no damage whatever. Believe this territory averages a little better than 90 in condition."

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand for cash grain continues active, the seaboard reporting 1,000,000 bu wheat and 1,000,000 bu corn sold abroad, corn including a cargo c. i. f. Germany.

Chicago cash handlers sold 100,000 bu wheat, 240,000 bu corn, and 25,000 bu rye to seaboard exporters, with charters for 350,000 bu wheat, 240,000 bu corn, and 150,000 bu oats to eastern lake ports.

Milling demand for cash wheat was keen, with 140,000 bu sold here, including a cargo of red winter to eastern mills. Corn sales for domestic shipment were 30,000 bu, oats 100,000 bu, and barley 10,000 bu.

Cash wheat prices at Chicago are gaining on the September, with No. 1 hard 1@1½c over September, No. 2 hard September price to 1c over, and No. 2 red ½c under the future. Offerings were only fair and readily taken. Receipts 224 cars.

Outside markets showed a steadier undertone, with St. Louis unchanged to 2c higher, Kansas City unchanged to 1c lower, and Omaha unchanged to 1c higher. Premiums at Winnipeg were 2c higher, as compared with October, due to domestic mill buying, and Minneapolis 5c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were not large, but demand was less active, and No. 2 yellow and white sold at 1¾@2c over the September. Sample values were ½c lower early and unchanged later. Receipts 117 cars. Outside markets were 2c lower to 1c higher.

Demand for cash oats remains good, with the basis firm, as compared with September. No. 2 whites brought 1½@2c under, No. 3 white 4¼c, and No. 4 white 6@6¼c under September. Sample values were generally unchanged. Receipts 260 cars.

WHEAT RECEIPTS DROP

Chicago received 4,287,000 bu of wheat last week, a drop of 1,237,000 bu from the previous week's high and an increase of 1,828,000 bu over last year. Corn receipts were 1,538,000 bu, and the run of oats was unusually large, 6,314,000 bu, the latter increasing 659,000 bu for the week, and 4,659,000 bu as compared with last year, while corn decreased 656,000 bu for the week and exceeded last year's by 274,000 bu.

Primary receipts of wheat fell off 4,241,000 bu for the week, but exceeded last year's by 7,674,000 bu. There was a decrease of 473,000 bu corn and an increase of 4,049,000 bu oats. The oats movement was close to the record, and of corn was the largest since 1917.

Primary receipts of grains for the week, with comparisons, with the last three ciphers omitted:

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Cotton goods and yarns closed this week with many advances that it is believed will stem the tendency toward greater curtailment of operations. Silk moved slowly. Openings of cloths for men's wear for spring will be made Monday. Burlaps remained quiet and linens showed little improvement.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—COPPER—11¾c for prompt shipment of electrolytic by smaller producers or custom smelters; larger producers are holding their quotations at 12.00 @12.25c for forward shipment. Iron was unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Steady at $4.20. ZINC—Slab, quiet at $4.20.

OIL MARKETS.

NEW YORK.—COTTON SEED OIL—Closed 1@8 points net higher for leading deliveries. Sales, 1,900 brls. Prime crude, 7.00@7.25c; prime summer yellow spot, 8.65c; September, 8.80c; December, 8.50c; March, 8.60c; all bid.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

A number of grain dealers were disposed to take a brighter view of the situation and were less bearish at the close yesterday, while a few were outspokenly bullish. The rally at the close was regarded as mainly a covering proposition and it was said that increased buying power would be necessary to hold prices at around the present level. One of the largest operators expressed himself as not bearish, although he has been all week, and added that he saw nothing on which to base purchases for a good advance. The trade on the whole was more evened up at the finish than for a long time.

Country offerings of all grains yesterday were lighter, which was attributed to the decline in prices. The receipts on Monday are expected to be large, but not up to the recent volume.

The Continental and Commercial National bank's annual report on crops and business and financial conditions of the country will be published Monday morning.

Corn prices have declined to a level where some of the largest sellers are disposed to take profits. Oat values are down to a level where the farmer gets less than 25c and are largely a carrying proposition.

Estimates on the barley crop by E. P. Bacon company of Chicago, Milwaukee, and Minneapolis show decreases of 4@17 per cent in the acreage, with yields ranging at 15@50 bu per acre, except in South Dakota, where they are 5@35 bu, or an average of around 20 bu, or 4½ per cent less than last year. In Iowa and Minnesota the loss is 3½ bu per acre, as compared with last year.

Grain shipments from Chicago by lake last week were 5,464,000 bu, mostly wheat and corn. There were 405,000 bu rye shipped to Montreal and 35,000 bu to Buffalo. This grain was taken in recently on July delivery and is being exported. Total shipments of all grains by lake and rail were 7,153,000 bu, and receipts 12,798,000 bu. There were 7,544 cars of all grains on track here yesterday, as against 11,100 cars on Monday.

Receipts of oats the last week at primary markets of 13,730,000 bu were the largest on record, and compared with the previous high mark of 13,416,000 bu, made for the week ending Aug. 26, 1916. During the last three weeks in that month in 1916 the aggregate primary arrivals were 50,000,000 bu.

Broomhall's Italian agent has raised his estimate on the wheat crop of that country by 8,000,000 bu, but the Spanish crop has been cut down around 20,000,000 bu, due to disappointing thrashing returns.

A message from St. Louis quoted the Kohler Mills as stating that there has been a great improvement in the foreign and domestic demand for flour in the last three weeks, especially since Aug. 1.

An Alabama grain grower in Chicago yesterday, in discussing the proposed plan of the United States Grain Growers, said: "It took me one hour and twenty minutes to read the grain pooling contract and I did not pretend to understand it when I finished. It took me about two days before I felt I knew anything about it. Few farmers can give the necessary time to reading such a contract at this season and from what I hear those who sign are simply taking the solicitor's word that it is all right. My grain will not go into the pool."

PRODUCE MARKETS

Weakness prevailed in the butter market and buyers had the advantage of naming prices. Receipts for the week were 54,756 tubs against 73,331 tubs last year. Cold storage stocks are 23,610,000 lbs against 20,137,000 lbs last year.

The egg market was easy at 29½@30½c for fresh firsts. Receipts for the week were 53,013 cases, against 62,638 cases last year. Cold storage stocks are 1,464,206 cases, against 1,532,778 cases last year.

Live fowls declined 1c to 27c for heavy fat and 24c for the general run. Spring chickens and roosters were lower with springs at 27c and roosters 17c.

Potatoes met an active demand at 15@25c advance on sack stock and 60c on barrels. Receipts were 65 cars on Saturday and for the week 417 cars, against 230 cars last year. Barreled lots were $5.50@6.00 and sack stock $2.25@2.50 per 100 lbs. Peaches brought $2.00@3.50 for bushel baskets from Michigan and $4.75@5.50 for southern.

SETTLING PRICE ARRANGED

The Board of Trade committee having charge of the deliveries of grain in car lots on track has decided that where there is a shortage or a surplus it should be settled on the basis of the price prevailing at the time the difference between the quantity delivered and that contracted for is known. Where 1,000 bu of wheat are sold and 1,200 bu delivered, the excess is to be settled at the time the weights are determined. It is the same way in case of a deficit.

HAY DEALER'S PICNIC

Chicago hay dealers had a picnic on Saturday and business was light. Receipts were only 2 cars timothy, 4 cars prairie, and one car straw. There was no regular market. No. 2 timothy sold at $25.00 or an advance of $3.00. This price would not hold under normal condition. Southwestern, western, and northwestern prairie was $14.00 to $18.00, and Illinois prairie, $12.00 to $14.00 per ton.

The Railroads

TODAY total railroad securities are selling in the market for about $12,000,000,000, as against an original cost for construction of the properties of approximately $20,000,000,000, and against a reproduction cost at current value of more than $35,000,000,000.

IT is immediately patent to anyone that railroad securities from the standpoint of property value are incomparable bargains. Many good judges are convinced that an opportunity of a lifetime is now presented for profitable investment in these securities.

Hog prices on the closing day of the week ruled strong to 25c higher, but the comparatively few good to choice light hogs offered, as against a large supply of cheap heavy packers carried from earlier in the week, cut the general average 45c to $9.15. Armour houses bought 4,000 at a cost of $8.95 and the Wilson drove cost $8.80. The day's top advanced 20c to $11.15.

Several thousand hogs were held off the market, many of them on orders from the country. Comparatively small supplies are expected early in the coming week and traders are confidently counting on a sharp reaction in values.

Cattle Have Good Advance.

Better grades of beef cattle met with a good call throughout the week and the suitable kinds closed at the highest prices of the sasoh, many showing 25@50c advance. Poorer classes, however, including native butcher stock, closed lower.

Lambs advanced about 50c compared with the close of the previous week, while sheep finished about that much lower. Top lambs sold at $10.85,while few sheep went late in the week above $5.00.

Receipts of Hogs Are Big.

Total receipts of hogs at Chicago last week reached 157,600, the largest week's supply since June, 37,800 larger than the previous week, 32,700 more than a year ago, double the supply of two years ago, and 50,700 larger than the ten year average. Shippers took more last week than any week since March.

The estimated average weight of hogs a tChicago at 247 lbs stands the heaviest since September, 4 lbs heavier than the heaviest week this year, 1 lb lighter than the corresponding period a year ago and 7 lbs heavier than the ten year average.

Barring the previous week the average cost of hogs last week at $10.30 was the highest since March, $4.35 under a year ago and $1.80 lower than the ten year average, with averages each day last week ranging from $9.15 at the close to $10.65 on Tuesday.

Receipts at Chicago for next Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 15,727 cattle 32,548 hogs and 28,427 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 51,000 cattle, 115,000 hogs and 70,000 sheep.

First Bale of New Cotton Is from Old Stalks

New Orleans, Aug. 6.—The first bale of the new Louisiana cotton crop came on the market today, six days earlier than the first bale last season. It was sold at auction at the cotton exchange and brought 31 cents a pound.

The bale was regarded as unique because it was picked from "stubble" or "volunteer" cotton plants, that is, plants which held over from last season.

Manufacturer Feels Trade Revival Before Producer.

A sudden resumption of buying by the public after a period of stagnation usually makes its benefits felt by the manufacturer of the finished product some time before they can be transferred to the producer of raw materials. Noting this fact, the investor is apt to favor the stocks and bonds of the finished product manufacturer, as the more rapidly increasing earnings show him a present and growing margin of safety for these securities.

A typical illustration of how differently the sudden renewal of buying activity affects those at the opposite ends of an industry may be drawn from the leather industry by contrasting the positions of Endicott-Johnson and Central Leather. Both have felt the full force of the depression of the last few months and yet the rapid recuperation of the shoe lately is the chief factor in Endicott-Johnson's $3,000,000 net profit for six months, whereas the betterment in hides inevitable with the shoe improvement has amounted as yet to only 40 per cent over the extreme lows of March and April and has not yet been effective in offsetting losses which left Central Leather for the second quarter of 1921 with a deficit of over $6,250,000.

Virginia Power.

J. P. S., Rockford, Ill.—The Virginia Power company supplies electric power to various industries within a radius of seventy-five miles from Charleston, W. Va. The growth of the company's business is illustrated by the increase in sales from 21,717,550 kilowatt hours in 1915 to 90,000,000 in 1920. The authorized capital is $10,000,000, of which $5,000,000 and $1,200,000 preferred is outstanding. The total funded debt as of Dec. 31, 1920, was $6,685,000. Net earnings for 1920 were $387,386, or over one and one-half times the bond interest. For the five months ending May 31, 1921, net earnings were $269,202, or two and one-half times the bond interest. The surplus for these five months was $82,345, compared with a surplus of $44,940 for the entire year of 1920. If earnings continue to improve as they are doing the company's bonds should prove a good investment.

CANADA ERASES PART OF ADVERSE TRADE BALANCE

New York, Aug. 6.—[Special.]—Canada's adverse trade balance with the United States is gradually being reduced and commercial relations are swinging back toward normal. The dollar continues to command a premium in Canada, and, of course, the trade will never reach pre-war proportions so long as this barrier remains.

Canadian balances in the United States have been replenished by the surplus from a railroad loan floated in this market to meet an August maturity here. Considerable gold has come from Canada, too, in the last few weeks.

In the year ended June 30, 1921, Canada imported $766,393,077 goods from the United States, and exported $501,933,266 goods, reducing the United States trade balance for the year to $264,459,811, a gain of $107,072,106 over 1920.

FORMAN FARM MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS

This Is Bargain Day in Investments

It is our opinion that the time for lower interest rates is not far distant. The federal reserve banks have reduced their rediscount rate to 6% and in some branches to 5½%.

We strongly advise you to take advantage of the present attractive rates obtainable in first mortgages. We are offering 7% on all our securities of proven worth. Forman Farm Mortgages and Farm Mortgage Gold Bonds for over 36 years have cost par and at no time has any investor lost one cent in principal or interest on any investment sold by us.

Write now for the July issue of "The Forman Guide to Safe Investments," which should be in the hands of every conservative investor.

That OPPORTUNITY

Let the man with $5,000 or more decide for himself whether there awaits a better opportunity for sagacious investment of his money than in a hitherto closed corporation with the following record:

An established manufacturing business that has never failed to pay dividends.

This corporation showed, for the year ending with December, 1918, net earnings of $50,989.69; for the six months ending July 31st, 1920, $76,898.94; for the eight months ending March 31st, 1921—the readjustment period of depression—$20,947.29.

Now this company has added a product of 100% demand—every home a market—price to the public revolutionary. Actual orders are at present far in excess of production, but in the next few months capacity will enable this corporation to show earnings seldom equaled.

All trademarks, patents and names are fully protected in every state.

Now the man with $5,000 or more is given the opportunity to get in.

Does this sound like THAT opportunity for which you have waited? If so, you can secure full particulars and arrange for an interview by addressing O S 255, Tribune.

Secure This New Industry

The manufacturers of a nationally advertised product have decided that their large and successful sales can best be taken care of by establishing district factories, and now offer to reliable men who can furnish good references as to reliability and integrity an opportunity to organize and manage these companies. These factories will be welcomed by towns looking for new industries. COMMUNICATE at once for appointment.

A Good Time to Buy Bonds

Nearly all men who analyze the business situation expect an improvement in general business all over the world—a gradual, steady return of confidence and activity. To some extent this improvement has already taken place, and is now reflected in the higher prices of Foreign Government Bonds, Listed Bonds and United States Government Liberty issues.

Liberty Bonds have advanced from 2½ to 7 points above their extreme low level.

The following list of bonds, fundamentally safe and with ready marketability, should show decided appreciation in price with further improvement in the business situation.

7.37% Yield	Swift & Company 10-Year 7% Gold Notes Due 1931 Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000 The largest of the Big Five packing companies, with world-wide distribution of its products and gross business of over $1,000,000,000 annually.
8.10% Yield	Empire Tank Line Company 10-Year 8% Equipment Trust Certificates Due 1931 Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000 Guaranteed by The Empire Gas & Fuel Company, whose earnings approximate $18,000,000 a year. This $2,500,000 issue is, in our opinion, a very safe, attractive purchase. Bonds of this class prior to 1914 sold on a 4½% basis.
8.00% Yield	Sears, Roebuck & Company 7% Serial Gold Notes Due Oct. 15, 1921-22-23 Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000 These notes constitute the only funded debt of one of the best known and most successful mail order merchandising companies in the world.
8.25% Yield	Troy Laundry Machinery Co., Ltd. 15-Year Sinking Fund 8% Bonds Due 1936 Denominations $500 and $1,000 These bonds are the direct obligations of the second largest company of its kind in the world, a company which has paid dividends on its common stock for 37 consecutive years. Write for illustrated descriptive circular.
8.00% Yield	United Drug Company 20-Year 8% Convertible Gold Bonds Due 1941 Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000 This company manufactures and distributes the well known Rexall Drug products sold in nearly 8,000 stores throughout the country, with an annual gross business of $68,000,000. The convertible feature of this issue offers attractive possibilities.
9.25% Yield	National Leather Company 5-Year 8% Gold Notes Due 1925 Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000 For twenty-five years this company has been an important manufacturer and tanner of leather, operating as a subsidiary of Swift & Co. These notes represent a high grade short term investment yielding a very good return.

The New York Times.

New York, Aug. 6.—[Special.]—The two most interesting movements on the financial markets today were the further recovery in sterling, which carried rates a full cent over Friday's closing and five cents above the low level of the close of June, and the continued strength of the cotton market, in which the spot price closed today at 13½ cents per pound, as against the year's low figure of 10⅞ cents, reached seven weeks ago.

The stock exchange presented the usual picture of a midsummer Saturday. Changes in price were mostly trifling fractions and the drift of values meaningless. Compared with the closing prices of a week ago the market shows very irregular changes. Declines and advances fairly balance one another.

Forward Impetus Slackens.

The week's movement as a whole shows no great result from the attempted resumption of the "campaign of rumors." There has, however, been evidence enough that the forward impetus had slackened, which usually means that the next movement of the market will depend on the character of the news. The bond market's movement for the week as a whole was distinctly upward.

A weekly statement by the German Reichsbank brought the note circulation to the highest recorded figure—22,000,000,000 marks above this date in 1920 and 48,000,000,000 above 1919. The portentous valuations involved by so heavily depreciated a currency are fairly illustrated by the fact that while note circulation increased more than 2,000,000,000 marks in this single week discounts were reduced 9,000,000,000 marks.

New York Banks Improve.

Deposits reported in the weekly statement of the associated banks decreased $90,700,000, but government deposits increased $112,000,000. Loans increased $45,322,000, and the excess of loans and investments over all deposits is therefore larger. That excess is now, however, $543,000,000; at the end of December it was $877,000,000. The excess of loans used to be considered a measure of the strain on credit. Reserve credits of private banks in the federal reserve, which decreased $20,800,000 a week ago, increased $22,200,000 last week. This is the usual sequal to a "deficit week"; it changed a $13,300,000 deficiency in reserves into a $19,700,000 surplus. The figures follow:

English Prices Stationary.

The London Economist's index number of average English commodity prices on Aug. 1 does not, like our own August averages, show an advance from the recent low figure; but the decline during July—about a quarter of 1 per cent—indicates that prices as a whole are stationary. The English average, like the American, is pulled down by the July decline in metals. Had it not been for those products there would have been a general advance.

Assuming that the sixteen months' consecutive decline in British prices has now been arrested, it is interesting to observe that, even after the readjustment, the average is 87 per cent above that of August, 1914, whereas our own prices at their recent lowest level were only 35 per cent higher than at that date. The difference fairly measures the influence of England's inflated currency and depreciated exchange. French prices are 224 per cent above the 1913 level and Italian prices are up 409 per cent.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in local unlisted securities continues on a small scale. Thoroughness of liquidation is shown by the limited trading at the current level of prices and the fact that some issues are beginning to show slight but steady improvement. Butler Brothers advanced to sales at 33¾, closing slightly easier at 32½@32⅞. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply firmed up to 36½@38, with latest quotations at 37½. Inland Steel was in good demand at 38⅝, with offerings at 39.

Activity among the implement shares was confined to Avery common, which improved to 20 bid, with limited offerings at 25. The preferred was quiet at 35@40. Emerson Brantingham preferred was unchanged at 22 @28.

Among the motor securities, Paige-Detroit improved to sales at 17, but in late trading eased to a close of 15½. Reo was quiet at 18@19, and Packard common was slightly easier at 6¼@6¾. McCord common sold up to 7⅛, but also closed slightly lower at 6½ @6⅞.

The bond market was unusually active. Prices ruled firm, while notable advances were reflected in a few issues. In the public utility group Peoples Gas 5s improved three points to 74 bid, 75 asked, while Public Service 5s were in better demand at 71@73½. The new issue of Commonwealth Edison first 6s improved three-quarters from the offering price to 92¾@93. The 5s and 7s were unchanged at 82½@83 and 99⅝@100¼ respectively. Many of the packing house issues advanced fractionally, Cudahy 7s improving a quarter to 99 bid, 99½ asked. Armour 7s sold up to 98⅜, an improvement of two points, but closed easier at 97¼@97½. The only change in the Swift issues was the 7s of 1925, which improved one-half to 97¼. Both the Wilson 1st and convertible 6s showed advances, the former closing at 86½ and the latter at 80¼. The Sears notes, although firm, were unchanged.

RAILROAD NOTES

Freight rates on bituminous coal from Illinois mines in the Fulton-Peoria, Third Vein, Springfield, and Belleville districts and from the so-called inner group of mines to destinations in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Nebraska, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Missouri were found by the interstate commerce commission to be unduly prejudicial in many cases when compared to rates from other points of origin to the same destinations.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis in their reports covering traffic conditions state that the total tonnage is still running considerably below the volume of a year ago. Officials of southern roads say there is no improvement in the movement of coal, but that grain tonnage shows a material increase over the figures of a year ago.

A conference of steel independents has been called in New York to plan a concerted movement against freight rates on iron and steel products. The steel men consider the freight charges on steel at least 20 per cent too high.

A cut of nearly 50 per cent in the round trip passenger rate between Kansas City and St. Louis has been announced by the Chicago and Alton and the Wabash railroads, following announcement of a similar cut by the Missouri Pacific.

Authority was given by the interstate commerce commission to the Flint Belt railroad to sell for cash at par $1,000,000 of capital stock, to be used in financing the construction and equipment of roadways.

An order was issued from Grand Trunk headquarters to operate the car shops at Port Huron five days weekly. The order replaces one a few days ago to close indefinitely yesterday.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings for last week totaled $499,800,000, an increase of $37,100,000 over the preceding week but a decrease of $113,200,000 from the corresponding week in 1920. Balances for last week totaled $46,300,000, an increase of $14,700,000 over the preceding week but a decrease of $5,500,000 from the corresponding week in 1920. Clearings yesterday were $76,100,000 and balances were $6,700,000. The figures for the week, day by day, follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 87,300,000	$ 9,800,000

The BEST
Investment Opportunities
—always!

THE NOTABLY successful investment business of the Madison & Kedzie State Bank has been based from the first on a very plain but very important policy: "Provide at all times the BEST investment opportunities."

Consider what this means to you, the investor!

In the matter of interest rate, for example. If conditions make it possible to obtain the safest first mortgage investments paying 7% instead of 6%, isn't it worth a great deal to have an investment banker who will pass the advantage on to you promptly? Our customers have been enjoying 7% for a year.

7% Interest—Maximum Safety

Take the last two semi-annual investment periods, January and July. Thousands of people had funds to invest and were awaiting suitable opportunities. Yet most investment houses made little effort to bring out attractive new offerings. The Madison & Kedzie State Bank, however, brought out the finest selections ever offered by us—issues that unquestionably lead the field.

The investing public is wide awake at all times, and goes where it can get the maximum in security and income. That's why our investment business has been so great. During the last seven months we sold over 300% more investments than during the corresponding period of last year!

Right now we have an exceptionally attractive selection of first mortgage bonds paying 7%, maturing two to ten years. If you have funds to invest, COME TO THE BANK; or if not convenient to call, just telephone or write.

PRESIDENT HARDING IN CAMP—Here is an intimate glimpse of the outdoor party which had the chief executive as its guest over a recent week-end, just sitting down to supper at their camp near Pecktonville, a Maryland village in the Blue Ridge mountains. At the left of the tent pole are Bishop William F. Anderson of Cincinnati (with his back to the camera); George B. Christian Jr., the President's secretary; Mrs. Edison and Thomas A. Edison. At the right of the pole, behind the table: President Harding, Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, and Henry Ford.

LENIN AS A MOURNER—An unusual photograph of the dictator of soviet Russia as he appeared in the midst of a motley crowd at the funeral of the railroad commissioner in Petrograd. Lenin is the partly bald man with the beard, standing just behind the woman at the left. Such occasional minglings with the populace go a long way, it is said, toward convincing the Russians that sovietism is real democracy.

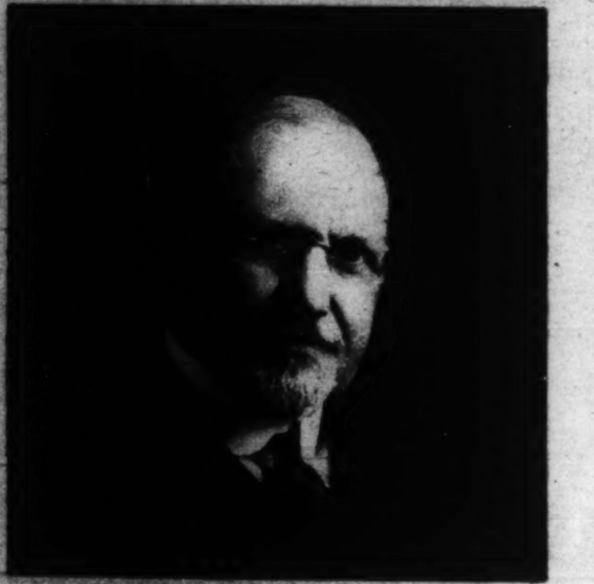
11 TRIBUNE
ADVERTISEMENTS
THIS IS No 4

Why The Chicago Tribune has the Largest Morning Daily Circulation in America

Paz, successor to B. L. T., is otherwise known as Fred Pasley. He was asked to fill in the breach left by the death of the country's most successful column conductor. Paz took the job and saved the dispositions of countless thousands who believe that the only way to start the day wrong is to miss A Line o' Type or Two.



Dr. William A. Evans established his department "How to Keep Well" ten years ago and from the start made it one of the most popular features in The Tribune. It was the first time a newspaper ever had legitimately considered the health of its readers as a subject for help and information.

Clifford Raymond emerged from the editorial writer's proverbial shell of anonymity when he wrote an editorial calling Henry Ford an anarchist.

His recreation consists of writing thrilling mystery stories on his porch at Ravinia and his hobbies are astronomy and nature.

Carl Glasscock is an editorial writer who has worked on newspapers in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland, Montreal, New York and Paris. His experience is pleasantly reflected in his editorials, which are largely upon economic subjects.

From the days of the civil war the editorial page of The Chicago Tribune has been read, respected and recognized as interpreting the best thought of the people of the middle west. Many people read it from the upper left corner to the lower right. Some may swear at the editorials, laugh with the Line and agree with Dr. Evans, while others swear by the editorials, laugh at the Line and find humor in "How to Keep Well" and "Vox Pop."

Nearly 10,000 earnest and intelligent people write every month to some department represented on the editorial page. In a recent survey made for Editor and Publisher to determine which papers carry the best editorials in the country, The Chicago Tribune tied for first place with the New York Times and the Boston Transcript. But The Tribune's additional features, such as the Line and Dr. Evans, undoubtedly make it the best editorial page published anywhere.

Read The Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday-as well as Sunday

OWEN MOORE and KATHRYN PERRY, who were just married, are the two young people shown seated before you on the stone fence. Miss Perry was formerly one of the Ziegfeld Follies girls. She will appear in future pictures—possibly with her husband—who was, if you will remember, at one time the husband of Mary Pickford. Mae Tinee.

EDITH ROBERTS, who is with Universal, as you vurr' well know, just sat for some new pictures. Here's one of them. ('Twould seem that she were fond of the grape!) Mae Tinee.

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS," you know, is being produced by United Artists with Douglas Fairbanks cast as D'Artagnan. This picture shows the entire cast. Mary Pickford isn't in the cast. She is just sitting beside her husband to keep him company, as 'twere. Those shown here are: Front row, left to right: Charles Stevens, Marguerite de La Motte, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Sydney Franklin. Middle row, left to right: Boyd Irwin, Negel DeBrulier, Mary MacLaren, Arthur Menjou, Barbara LaMarr and Thomas Holding. Back row, left to right: Lon Poff, Eugene Pallette, George Siegmann, Leon Bary, and Willie Robards. Mae Tinee.

"GETS-IT"
The National Corn Remover

Got a Corn?

Why? Why tolerate such an annoyance? Why endure its ache and pain? Why dabble with useless corn "remedies" and "cures"? Why risk infection by cutting and trimming it?

Simply apply two or three drops of "Gets-It" and your corn stops aching—instantly and forever. Without burning or irritating the flesh it shrivels the corn right up. First the edges loosen, then the roots let go, and you can peel the whole corn off with your fingers. Costs but a trifle.

Changing an Ancient Custom

Women from time immemorial have made their own sanitary pads. Quite by accident our army nurses in France discovered that by using Cellucotton—a wonderful new absorbent—enclosing it in gauze—they produced a sanitary pad far better in many ways than the old-fashioned, bulky birdseye women have used for years.

At the suggestion of nurses we now offer sanitary pads known as Kotex and made from Cellucotton. Kotex are cool and comfortable—cheap enough to throw away and easy to dispose of. Directions for throwing away in each carton of 12. Write for booklet if you want to know more about Kotex. Sample dozen in plain carton sent prepaid for 65 cents. Sold at stores and shops that cater to women.

"Daddy ain't the only one who's got a Flivver!"

TICKLED to death! Of course he is. And what boy or girl wouldn't be with such a joy of a toy as Flivver?

Flivver is the classiest looking, easiest to pedal and steer, strongest-made mount a kid ever had. Won't tip over. Holds over 200 pounds. All wood and steel, with wire wheels and rubber tires.

Make your boy or girl the happiest in the neighborhood. Get him a Flivver—at hardware, furniture or department store. Priced so every child can have one.

Made in two sizes: No. 10—3 to 6 years., No. 20—4 to 10 years.

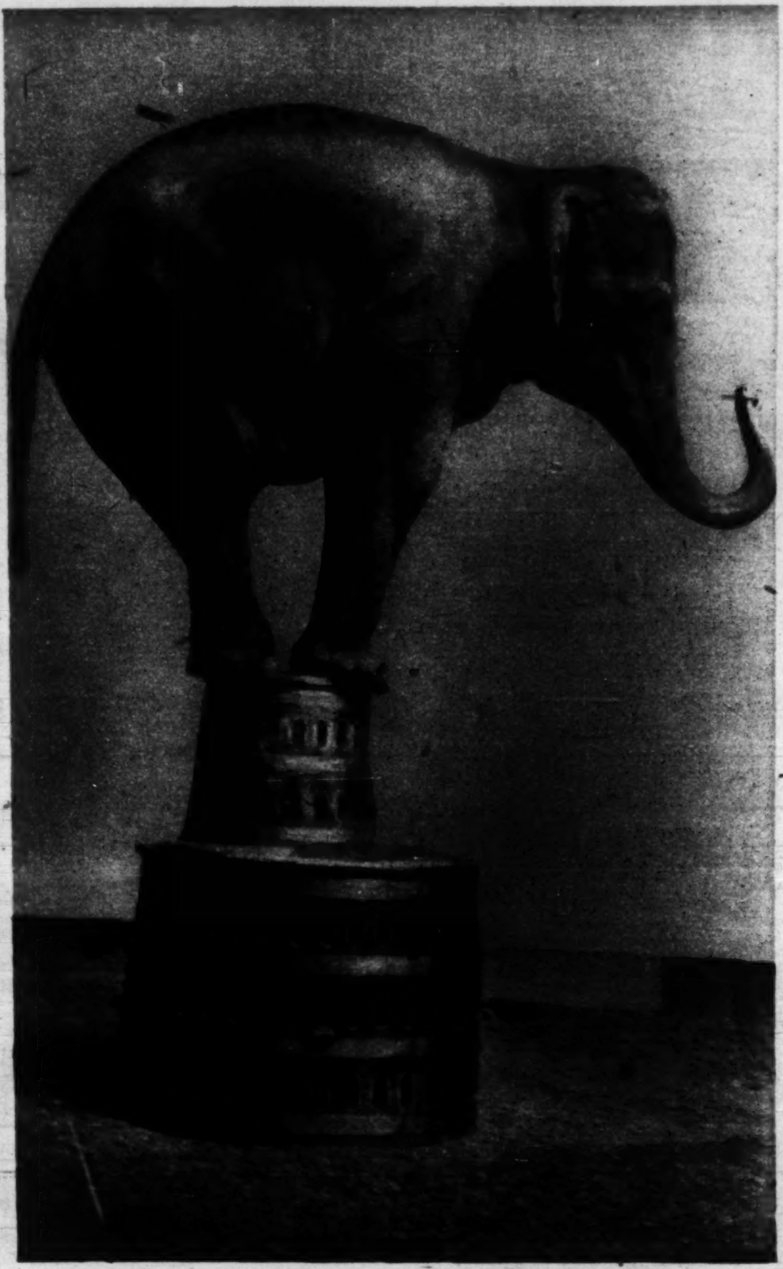
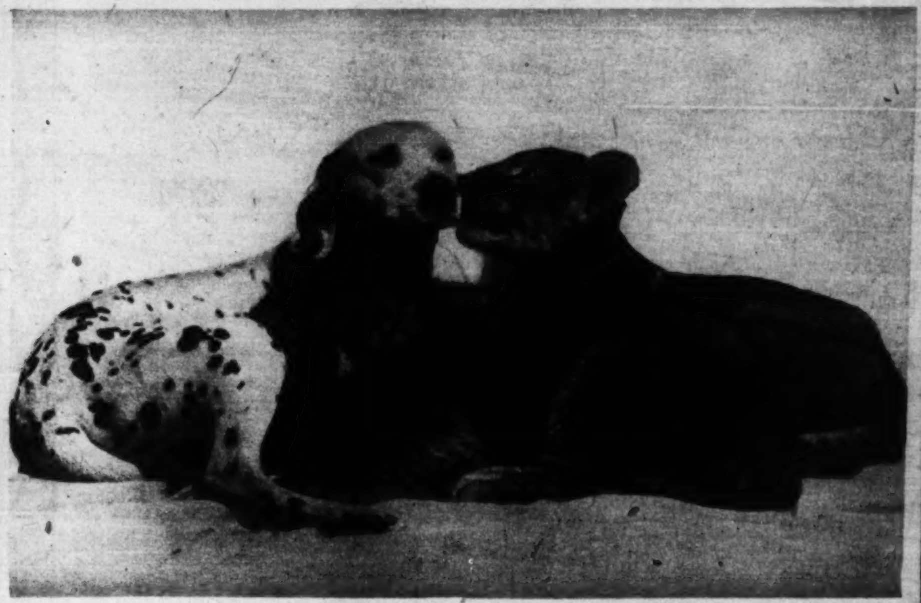
CIRCUS FOLK

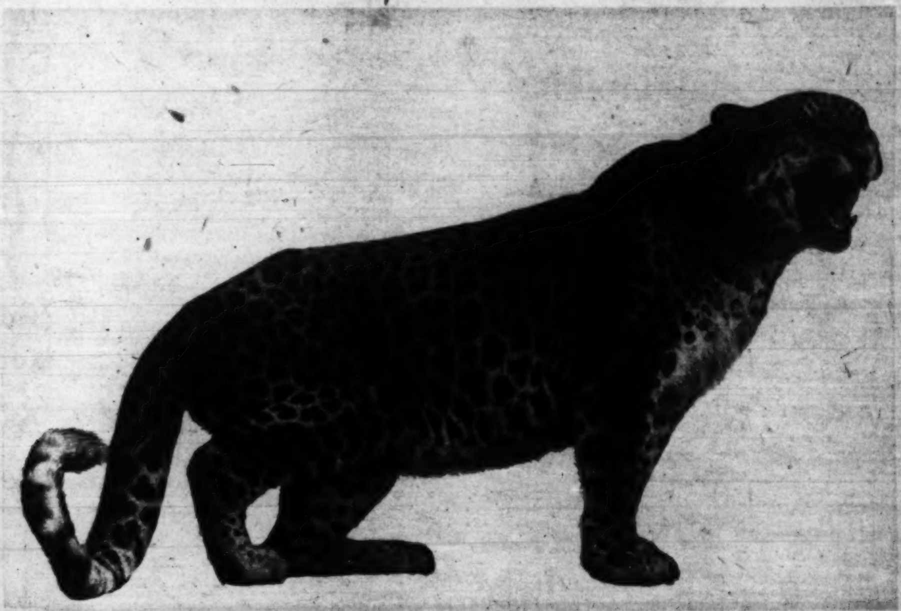
You'll find them with the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey shows under the big tent in Grant Park.



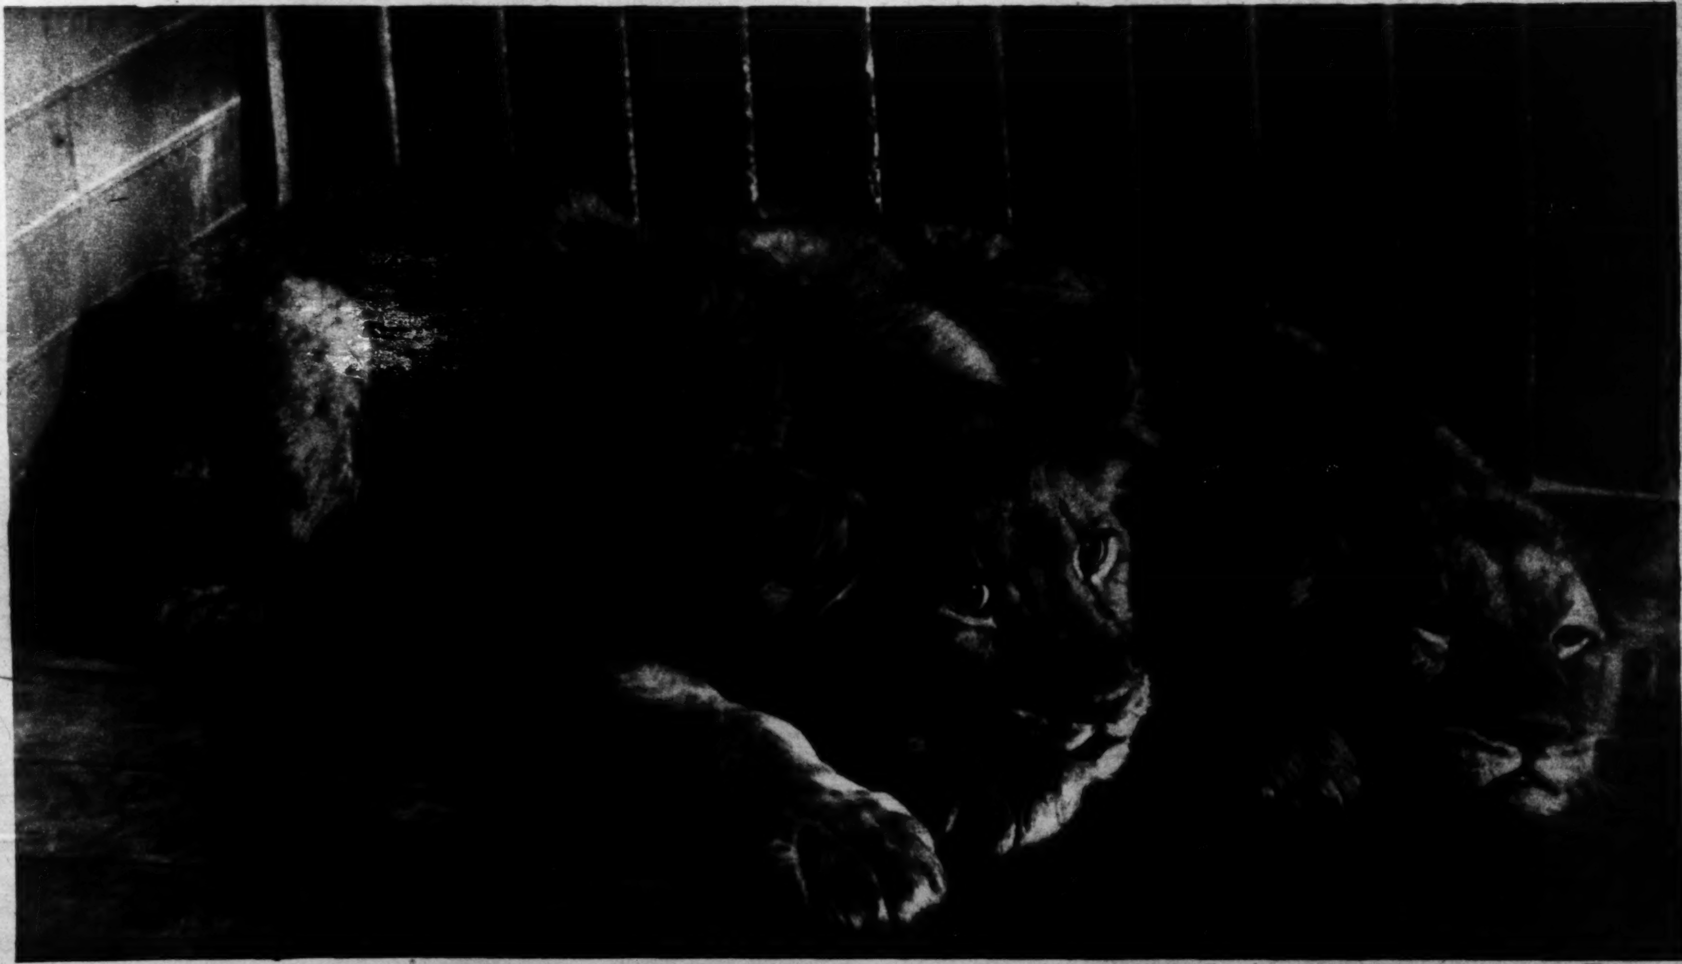
Little Sammy is smallest of the circus elephants, and goes highest in the air.



Blinkin' and Nod, orphaned lion cubs, now cared for by one of the show's Dalmatian hounds.



Rajah, one of the performing leopards.



Jack and Jill, though lion cubs, aren't really much more than kittens.

Nips

You'll be delighted to learn that you can now buy any or all of the world-famous extracts listed here in the economical, handy and non-spillable form of NIPS.

You can now carry your favorite perfume with you wherever you go, without danger of breakage, spilling or evaporation. NIPS are little tubes of glass, packed fifteen to a dainty, lavender-tinted, lip-stick size French ivory case, each tube containing a liberal amount of the precious essence.

And how simple and convenient to use! You open the little case, take out a NIP pinch off both safety-sealed ends and, Presto! out comes the rare extract. Each NIP contains just enough perfume for correct application; there's no danger of overuse; so common when applied from a bottle. The glass you pinch off has the consistency of sand and is absolutely guaranteed not to injure either fingers or fabric in any way.

Before leaving for your summer in the country, drop two or three packages of NIPS into your traveling bag. They're always ready to use on the instant, wherever you may be.

NIPS can be obtained at nearly all perfume, drug and department stores.

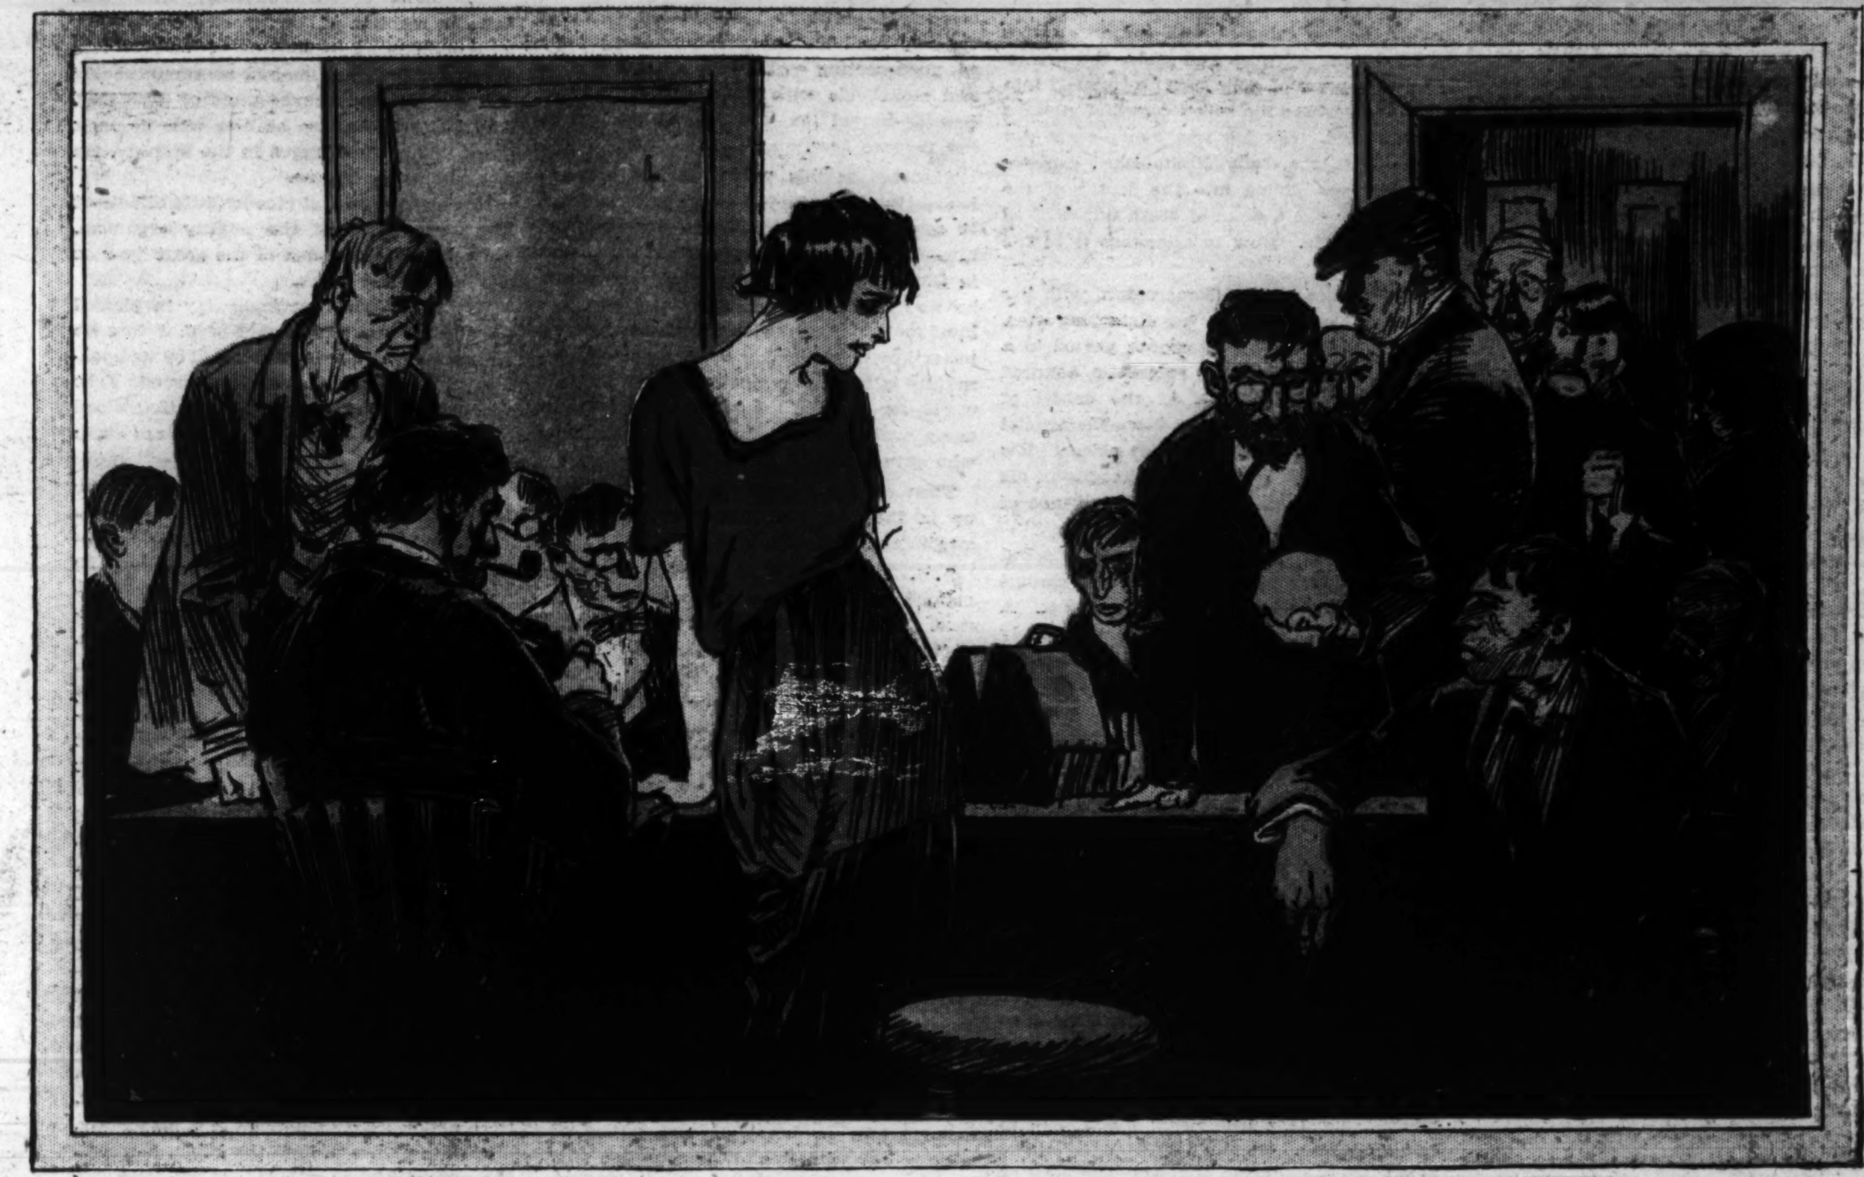
The INFERNAL MACHINE by F. Britten Austin



Rosa Bauermann had turned her head towards him, Jake Bravinsky—had looked right into him so that he shuddered.

Jake Bravinsky, Anarchist, Sits In at the Game of Death and Reaps an Ironic Reward

IN that busy quarter of an hour ere the great liner—steam strident from the exhaust-pipes high up against the vast funnels, donkey-engines running for a preliminary test as they took up the slack of the cables to the attendant tugs—cast off from the landing-stage but few of the preoccupied passengers noticed the handcuffed man hurried by two detectives up the third-class gangway into the ship. Those that did shrank back uncomfortably. He stumbled up like a man on the way to execution, pale, haggard, withdrawn into himself, faculties numbed by the imminence of his fate. His eyes stared without seeing.

The two detectives hustled him below into the depths of the ship, along electric-lit corridors where the light of day never came. A steward preceded them as guide, indicated at last a cabin on the lowest berth-deck. The door was opened and he was thrust into the tiny apartment dimly lit by a porthole close under the roof, the river-water lapping green along its glass.

The prisoner stood stock-still where he was pushed, bereft apparently of voluntary motion with the limbs that shook helplessly as in an ague. His mean little face was immobilized almost to imbecility. One of the detectives stood over him, looked into his vacant eyes.

"Now, no nonsense, Jake—or we'll have to keep you tied up all the way," he said, impersonally. With that he unlocked the handcuffs. The prisoner's arms, freed, fell limply pendent. The detective turned and went out of the cabin.

The prisoner watched his exit with lackluster eyes that stared in a vague and increasing horror as the sound of the key turning in the lock penetrated slowly to his consciousness. Suddenly, as though full perception released a spring in him, he leaped at the door.

"Let me out! Let me out! Let me out, I say!" he screamed at the top of his voice, hammering violently at the door. "Police! —police!—police—'Ere! 'Ere! 'Ere!—come back!— Come back!"

His cry rang out on a piercing note of almost maniac terror, of extreme urgency of appeal. "I've got something to tell yer—I've got something to tell yer!—Don't let 'er start! Don't let 'er start!—Oh, Gawd, don't let 'er start—'Ere!—'Ere! Come back!—Police!—Come back!"

He exhausted himself with a whirlwind of blows, hands and feet battering upon the closed door, with a flood of agonized appeals mingled with bloodcurdling curses that dropped suddenly to whimpering humility and broke out again in a renewed fury of vehemence.

None answered him. The door remained closed. As he recoiled from it, gasping in despair and terror, he heard the shriek of the liner's siren in its last warning, the clank and rumble of cables paid out, the first throb of her engines awaking to life. A swirl of water in motion darkened the glass disc of the port.

He sank down to a seat upon his bunk, breathing heavily as from weak and overstrained lungs, his pinched face a ghastly gray. His eyes fixed themselves, fascinated, upon that porthole which the disturbed water obscured from instant to instant. They had cast off, were moving out upon their voyage across the ocean.

The reaction from his intense effort left him gripped in paralyzing certitude of isolation, of abandonment, of utter impotence. Penned here in this narrow steel cell far below decks, like a prisoner in an oubliette to be forgotten, cries and noises were alike useless; if heard were only to be contemptuously ignored. Numbed to the core of him, he ceased to make a sound, sat vaguely staring before him into flitting mental pictures where his conscious intelligence intervened only by fits and starts.

He saw himself in the dilapidated parlor behind the boarded-up saloon in the squalid street beyond the dock-gates, saw once more the white pinched face of the deformed little German-Jew chemist light up with evil triumph as he hoisted the heavy suitcase on to the table around which the "comrades" craned forward with eager interest. He saw him open it and, in a breathless silence, draw forth—a chunk of coal! The little Jew held it up for the appreciation of his companions.

"Dere you are, comrades!" He heard again the throaty, malicious chuckle of the inventor's voice. "Cast in steel—I enameled it mineself—and you can do vat you like vid it." He giggled like one diabolically insane. "You can drop it—you can hit it— you can do anyding you like vid it—except burn it!"

O'Donnell had taken it from him like a loving-cup and had gazed down upon it with almost affectionate admiration.

"And if it should by accident be shoveled into a liner's furnaces, comrade?" he had asked, grimly facetious, in his pleasant tones, his phraseology emphasizing, as was his wont, the fact that he was a man of education.

"It vill blow de belly out of her!" the little chemist had answered with a sudden violent ferocity. "Dose explosives—dey vill blow de belly out of de biggest ship dat efer sailed!"

O'Donnell had smiled amiably and, still holding aloft the chunk of pseudo-coal like a loving-cup, had looked around upon the clustered gaunt faces of the "comrades" as though in selection of one to whom to give it.

"Comrades!" he had exclaimed, his soft voice never more mellifluous, "we are going to strike a real blow this time—one the bloodsuckers will feel and remember! They shall know that the solidarity of labor is no vain boast!"

Neither in Jake Bravinsky's reverie of reminiscence, nor at the moment upon those eager faces craned towards the thing the big man held, was there any perception of unintended irony.

A longshoremen's strike was in progress, and the white-collared brigade recruited from the desks of the shipping company's skyscraper had sworn to turn the Gargantuan round and get her to sea again, with mails, passengers, bunker-coal and some at least of her cargo. They were going to make good, it seemed, thanks not a little to the strong force of police who protected them from the none too benevolent solicitude of the awkwardly-idle workers who massed sullenly beyond the locked dock-gates. But not one of that grim little group in the dilapidated parlor was either a striker or a worker.

Neither Chlodzky, the Pole; Lipoff, the Russian, nor he, Jake Bravinsky, the weedy degenerate product of two generations in East End London, had ever done a day's work in their lives except under the stern pressure of necessity or the law. He, Jake Bravinsky, urgently needing distance between him and the English police, had certainly assisted to fire the stoke-hold of a freighter all the way from Liverpool to New York—and when they arrived the chief engineer had met him half way and fired him.

That was his only recent occasion of la-

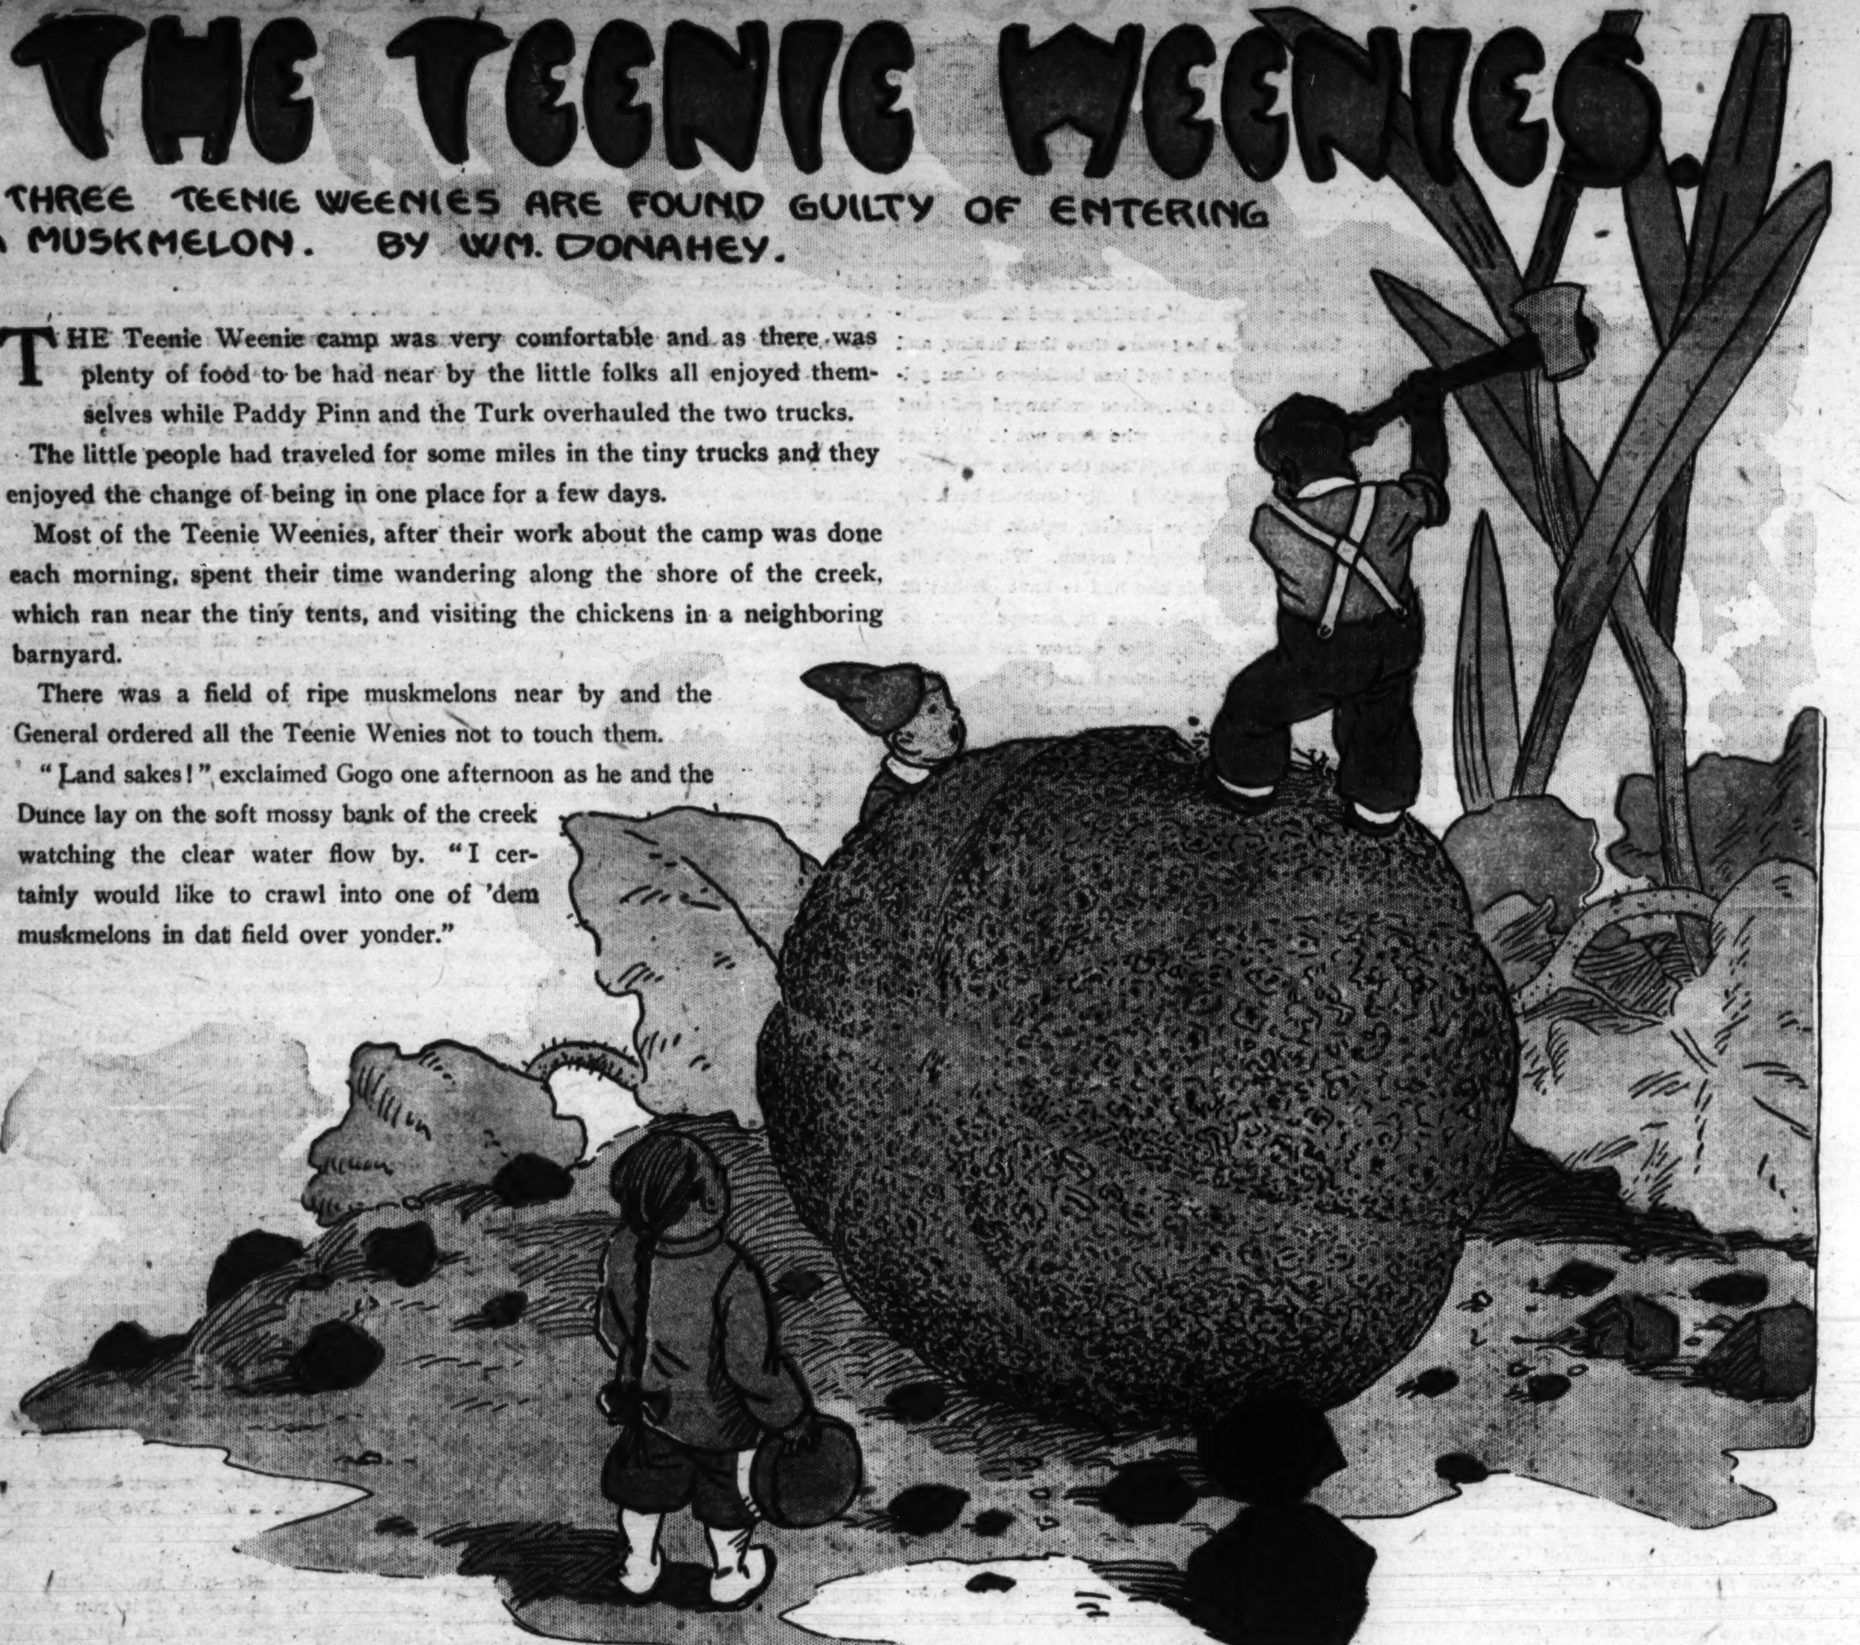
THE TEENIE WEENIES

THREE TEENIE WEENIES ARE FOUND GUILTY OF ENTERING A MUSKMELON. BY WM. DONAHEY.



THE Teenie Weenie camp was very comfortable and as there was plenty of food to be had near by the little folks all enjoyed themselves while Paddy Pinn and the Turk overhauled the two trucks.

The little people had traveled for some miles in the tiny trucks and they enjoyed the change of being in one place for a few days.

Most of the Teenie Weenies, after their work about the camp was done each morning, spent their time wandering along the shore of the creek, which ran near the tiny tents, and visiting the chickens in a neighboring barnyard.

There was a field of ripe muskmelons near by and the General ordered all the Teenie Wenies not to touch them.

"Land sakes!" exclaimed Gogo one afternoon as he and the Dunce lay on the soft mossy bank of the creek watching the clear water flow by. "I certainly would like to crawl into one of 'dem muskmelons in dat field over yonder."

"Why not?" asked the Dunce glancing over his shoulder towards the and chop a hole in one, eat all we wanted, and nobody would know anything about it."

"Yes they would know about it," answered the little colored fellow.

"Who would know about it?" demanded the Dunce.

"Why we all would, you and I."

"Ah, shucks!" muttered the Dunce rising to his feet. "Let's go over and look at those melons. That won't do any harm."

The two little fellows set off for the melon patch and on their way they ran across the Chinaman who was cutting some firewood for the Cook.

"Come on Chuck," cried the Dunce as the two Teenie Weenies came up to the Chinaman. "We're going over to have a look at those big muskmelons."

The Chinaman swung his tiny ax over his shoulder and followed the two little fellows to the melon patch.

The three Teenie Weenies stopped beside a huge melon and looked longingly at it for some time.

"Fo' de land sake!" exclaimed Gogo after he had looked at the big ripe melon and felt of its rough skin. "Gimme dat ax, I know it's dead wrong to get into that melon, but I can't stand it another minute. I's got to have a mouth full of dat melon if I's killed fo' it." And snatching the ax out of the Chinaman's hands he scrambled up the vine to the top of the melon.

In a few seconds the little chap cut a hole in the top of the melon and soon the three Teenie Weenies were eating with all their might.

Somehow the General learned that the three Teenie Weenies had cut into the melon. Whether he heard it from the birds, or whether some gossiping grasshopper whispered it into his ear, is hard to tell, but nevertheless he knew about it and that night the Dunce, Gogo and the Chinaman were called to his tent.

"Young men," said the General when the three Teenie Weenies stood before him. "You are charged of willfully and maliciously entering a muskmelon. Guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty!" cried the three Teenie Weenies in one voice.

"Have you anything to say before sentence is passed on you?" asked the General.

"I has," said Gogo meekly.

"Very well, sir," nodded the General.

"Your honor, General," began the little colored fellow, "I knew I was doin' wrong when I done went over to dat melon patch. I don't blame myself fo' eating that melon, but I does blame myself fo' goin' where there was so awful much temptation. I done think a powerful lot 'bout dem mellions and I's all right as long as I done stay away from dem, but when I done stood right there lookin' at dem and a ax so handy I sure done plumb fo'get myself and I's sorry."

"I'm sorry, too," said the Dunce.

"I muchie slorry, for melly he give me muchie tummie ache," cried the Chinaman. "Me allie time stay away from muskiemellie."

"I'm sorry, too," smiled the General. "For it becomes my duty to pass sentence on you. You all knew you were doing wrong to cut into the melon and for having disobeyed you will have to suffer the penalty."

"Therefore, for three days you will not leave camp, and for three nights you will retire to your tents immediately after supper."

This was a great punishment for the little fellows, especially going to their tents immediately after supper, for that was the best part of the camp life, as every evening the little folks all gathered around the camp fire, sang songs and told stories.

"We certainly done got a lot of punishment," said Gogo as they made their way to their tent. "But then again that certainly was some mellion," and the little fellow smacked his lips and grinned.

bor, and none of the other could boast of activities less remote. Yet they were not conscious hypocrites, these men. Viewing themselves in the distorted mirrors of their souls, they were rather martyrs, they who preached, with fierce energies sustained on a meager pittance from mysterious sources, the Cause, the Red Revolution that should, in theory at least, glut the poverty-stricken with the wealth of their oppressors.

Red Revolutionary also was Rosa Bauermann, the most fanatic, the least self-seeking of them all. He, Jake Bravinsky, could never look upon her without a little secret awe—and yet her ugly great gash of a red mouth, her blazing dark eyes, her bobbed black hair, fascinated him, stirred him to the depths.

"Whose shall be the honor?" Comrade O'Donnell had pursued, looking round upon the group, his pleasant, well-bred voice in ironic incongruity with his more than shabby appearance and the terrible implication of his query. "What comrade's hand shall deal the blow?"

And Rosa Bauermann had turned her head towards him, Jake Bravinsky, had looked upon him—had looked right into him so that he shuddered—with those great dark eyes that flashed enigmas. And Jake Bravinsky's little human soul was suddenly molten as though with volcanic fires—he had caught his breath with the strangeness of it, could not, for an agonized moment where Rosa Bauermann seemed like a brooding divinity that filled the room ready to bestow itself upon high daring, cry out his acceptance.

His own voice had sounded strange to him when he uttered it. "Give it 'ere, comrade!—I'll do the job! 'Aven't I done——?" and he had boasted vaingloriously of fire-raising and sabotage. He ventured a glance towards Comrade Rosa, found her still smiling in fierce appreciation, and boasted again. And Comrade O'Donnell had handed him the lump of pseudo-coal . . .

And then the next picture—the funnels and upper works of the Gargantuan lividly illumined in the glare of the purplish-white arc-lamps that painted her on the night as the volunteer gangs worked feverishly at her, shift relieving shift. The long line of warehouses in the deep contrasting shadow from that blaze blackened out the bottom of the picture—a blackness to which he crept and dodged, avoiding scrutiny, a heavy object close-hugged to his breast.

Then closer, viewed from a dark angle of the warehouse wall, he saw, in a proximity that dwarfed him, the towering sides of the great liner at the quayside, her gangways busy with hurrying diminutive figures absorbed in purposeful activity.

Below, on the quayside criss-crossed by railroad tracks, locomotives puffed and shrieked as they butted their trains of clanking freight-cars, vehicle by vehicle, to the tips. Car after car, quoined on the platform of the cages, rose its twenty feet upon the elevator, heeled suddenly and discharged its black contents with a clattering, clanging roar, down the iron chute into the bunkers of the ship. Train beyond train of coal and merchandise stood ranged upon the sidings, awaiting its turn for sling or cataract.

Towards one of those trains, the nearest, he crept stealthily from shadow to shadow, weak-kneed fear and diabolical malice at conflict within him. He cursed, automatically, under his breath, in an escape of nervous tension, as he approached it. It stood engineless, unguarded, but to his disgust not one car of it was in the shadow.

For a moment he had hesitated, his burden heavy in his arms, in a temptation of relinquishment. Then the image of Rosa Bauermann, her smile of enigma turning upon him, had come up before him—and the fierce little chemist's exultant phrase, "Blow de belly out of her!" had echoed in strange depths of him, an invocation that called up a flood of his bitter primitive hatred for these phenomena of a civilization from which he was excluded, and which he himself was impotent to create. The Sioux prowling around the stockade, the barbarian bursting in upon the monuments of Ancient Rome, ground their teeth even as he, in just such a blind, jealous rage of destruction.

During long minutes he had crouched in the shadow for his spring, awaiting opportunity. Then, in a temporary complete desertion of that stretch of quay, he leaped forward to the nearest truck, the last in the train.

In the full illumination, the white car-number, the black on white of the large label —"34518"—"Bunker-Coal — S. S. Gargantuan"—were vividly distinct before his vision, on a level with his eyes. He judged his distance and hurled the thing he carried. The lump of pseudo-coal fell upon the heaped-up coal of the truck, indistinguishable from any other lump.

"Blow de belly out of her!"—the fiercely vindictive phrase of the little German-Jew cripple had rung in his ears as he turned and fled into the night . . .

Then the great moment of relief, when, a seemingly endless period of waiting in the shadows by the dock-gate suddenly terminated, he had mingled with the crowd of a shift coming off work and under the protection of a posse of policemen had passed into the street where the sullen crowd of strikers congregated. His job was done—even now perhaps that artfully dissimulated canister of steel was sliding into the depths of the great liner like a germ of death unperceived but inevitable. Now to announce it to the comrades!

The picture of Rosa Bauermann, with her shock of black hair over her disturbing eyes, her great red gash of a mouth parted in a smile that was no longer enigmatic, haunted him as he dodged out of the crowd of "scabs" and sped, at a run, down the squalid streets to that little boarded-up saloon. His heart thumped heavily and unsteadily in his breast as he gave the arranged sequence of knocks upon its muddied door.

He waited. It opened not. He knocked again and again waited. Still it remained shut, no sound or hint of life behind it. A quavering anxiety came up in him—surely they would have waited for his return?—Rosa, at least? What had happened? He knocked, more loudly, yet now sure in advance that there would be no response. The house echoed under his knock like a place deserted.

Then a policeman came round the corner, approached him with the measured, unhurried step of a patrol upon his normal beat. Jake waited not for that scrutiny he never dared confront. Whelmed in a disappointment that chilled his body, he had slunk away, a bitter curse upon his lips.

He was filled with a somber anger against his confederates as he shuffled off to the miserable garret which was his home. They had better not play any tricks on him—or, sure as Hell, he'd peach! He'd show 'em whether he, Jake Bravinsky, was a man to be trifled with! He had a little vision of the group of them, Rosa included, standing in the dock, himself as State's Evidence scorning their impotent rage. A variant of this picture was the last clear thought in his mind as he drew his ragged, dirty blanket over him and sank into a sleep that was the profound reaction after the strains of the day. . . .

He had awakened with the touch of a hand upon his shoulder. His blind start from the bed was the instinctive movement of an animal habitually under menace and now trapped. He looked up, in a pang of terror, into the face bent over him, the heavy, impassive countenance of a policeman. As he glanced around him in the chill gray light of early morning he saw that his garret was abnormally peopled—another policeman behind the one who had awakened him, and, near the door, two men in plain clothes whom he instinctively recognized as from Scotland Yard.

"Come quietly, Jake," had said the voice from that face up to which he stared. "We've got you."

The tightening of the grip upon his shoulder bore in upon him the hopelessness of escape. He let himself relax, resigned himself.

"What's it for?" he had asked, sullenly. He remembered now, vividly, the sudden panic fear he had all but betrayed. Was it for his last night's job? The thought drove the blood from his heart—a life sentence loomed startlingly inevitable, life or little less. He had not dared to raise his eyes.

It was one of the plain-clothes men who had answered.

"I have a warrant for your arrest, Jake Bravinsky, on a charge of arson in Glasgow last May. I give you the usual warning."

Glasgow last May! He had almost shrieked mocking laughter in the revulsion of his relief.

A few hours later, shrunken between the two large policemen, he had shuffled into the dock of a District Police Court just commencing its business of the morning. The magistrate had glanced up at him with contemptuous indifference, registering him evidently as merely yet another of the miserable deadbeats presented to him by organized society for temporary elimination.

The magistrate could not suspect the exultant savage triumph which filled the distorted little soul behind the pinched and pallid face. He had done 'em! They hadn't found out! No matter what they did to him, he had got his revenge! He'd show 'em!

He gloated over the thought of that carload of bunker coal pouring into the bowels of the Gargantuan, visualized, with an unholy glee, the more satisfying in that it was perforce secret, the great liner throbbing on her course, her thousands of unconscious passengers at ease on her multitudinous decks, serenely superior to the ordinary perils of the sea, until that inevitable moment when an unsuspecting stoker—he loathed stokers and stokeholds with a fierce and personal hatred—hurled the shovelful of coal on to her furnace fires.

Absorbed in this vision, he had scarcely heard the charge as it was read over to him. It concerned something very remote from him—he had almost forgotten that warehouse in Glasgow—the real, vital thing for which he was responsible was hidden from these blind fools. He exulted childishly. And they'd never know!—for once he was certain of immunity in his war against an unsympathetic world, for once he'd done 'em! He felt savagely contemptuous of the stolid policeman who gave evidence of arrest.

Then one of the plain-clothes men stood up in the court, addressed himself to the magistrate. What was he saying?

". . . we should be obliged if you would make an order without adjournment of this case. We hold a warrant for the extradition of the accused." He passed it up to the magistrate.

"His presence in England is urgently required for trial with his confederates already arrested. We have retained a passage for him on the Gargantuan which sails tomorrow morning."

The Gargantuan! The name, a cymbal-clash of significance, awoke him with a shock at the heart to full realization of the detective's matter-of-fact request. The Gargantuan! Upon the moment he stood paralyzed in an awful terror, sweat pearling upon him, his tongue dry in his mouth, yet impelled, almost beyond restraint, to shriek a protest. No! No!—not the Gargantuan! He jerked a wild, eye-dilated glance around him, as though in a dread of visible appearance of the supernatural. The irony which condemned him to his own destruction was nothing less than this to his primitive mind. He gasped for his only sound.

Sitting alone down there in that bare cabin in the depths of the ship, his hands worked convulsively in repetition of his tense clutch upon the balustrade of the dock as he lived through the scene again—saw once more the magistrate nod his calm acquiescence.

Shriek out a warning? Would they believe him? He knew only too well that they would not. He had no proof—only his word, the word of a man obviously eager to postpone the processes of the law. Would the shipping company hold up the great liner, throw perhaps a hundred thousand dollars' worth of coal into the sea in despair of identifying the fatal lump, upon his mere assertion? He knew that they would not.

The most they would do would be skeptically to warn the firemen of the ship to keep a sharp lookout for any suspicious block of coal—and he could well appraise, none better, the futility of such casual inspection. And even if they listened—even if, improbably, he dodged the voyage of the Gargantuan, he would be assuredly shot or stabbed later on for his betrayal. He knew the "comrades." Either way he was in a trap. And, had he decided to shriek out the truth, he could not physically have done so. His tongue swelled in a dry mouth incapable of articulation as he watched the magistrate's pen sign the order. He felt himself turn sick. . . .

And now here he was—he came back to himself after this half-dreaming recapitulation of the episodes leading up to his present situation—shut up in the depths of the great liner throbbing her way, with a powerful, steady whirring of her turbine engines, into the immensity of the ocean.

Yes, she was well upon her course now—ne was experienced enough to diagnose the full-powered evenness of the revolutions which set every plate and girder and fitting of her in subdued vibration.

Down below—in those hellish stokeholds—the half-naked firemen were shoveling the coal into the white-hot glare of her furnacees, shoveling and again shoveling until at last one lump that left their shovels for its fiery bed . . . he jumped to his feet again in a shriek of terror, banged against the door with frenzied fists.

He went mad, felt himself going more and more mad, flung himself at that locked door in a whirlwind of blind, wild energies that swept through him as from a source beyond him. Voice, feet, and fists clamored for release from this trap, as, like a caged wild animal overmastered by its instincts, he hurled himself again and again against that door which would not open. For all response he might have been alone in a world destitute of man.

His blows ceased suddenly, with that brusque reaction of the psychically unstable, as though in an exhaustion of the reservoir of force which had poured so tumultuously through the open sluice-gates of his being. Physical weakling as he also was, he sank down, his brain drugged in the stupefaction of an immense fatigue.

He slept, while that gloomy little cell about him, deep down in the mighty organism, quivered with the rush of the great liner as she hurried out to sea.

How long Jake Bravinsky lay in blessed unconsciousness at the foot of that door he did not know. He was awakened by its opening, by a sudden glare as the electric light was switched on. One of the detectives stood over him, accompanying a steward who brought food.

With dulled faculties that fumbled for definition of the vague terror he knew to be somewhere in the back of his mind—what was it?—he rose stiffly to his feet, tottered to his bunk. Then, seated, he looked up at the detective and remembered. His teeth chattered in the shiver which came over him. His lips parted as if for sudden utterance, but he could only stare dumbly. What use was it?—his brain began to work again—even if they turned round now the very next shovelful of coal might . . . he balked at exact imagination of the cataclysm.

His deep lying bitter hatred of the law and its representatives surged up in him suddenly, presented to him doubtless by his subconscious self for solace, blotting out all else. Anyway, they were all in the some boat! They'd all go up, all drown, together—no warning, no chance to summon help by wireless! He almost chuckled as he thought of that stolidly superior detective dead—dead and unsuspecting until the moment. They'd all go like that, the——! He grouped them, all of them, everybody that was not himself, in an ugly word for justification of his enmity.

After a glance around the cabin, a test of the screwed-tight porthole, the detective motioned out the steward.

"Not so much of that noise now!" he said, standing over his prisoner, "or we'll tie you up and gag you for the rest of the trip—you understand?" There was genuine menace in his tone. The weedy little wretch shrank back from him instinctively, the blood of two generations of gutter-thieves asserting itself in this close proximity to law personified. His bloodless lips quivered, but he made no sound.

After one last nod of significance, the detective left him to his food, turned the key once more upon him.

The first mouthful nearly choked him, but then, hunger awaking at the taste, he ate ravenously, was still unsatisfied when all was finished.

The dishes he put down jarred and rattled with the pulsation of those mighty engines, far away and hidden, indefatigable, so sure and steady in their unvarying whir and yet to him so full of menace. He sat crouched upon the edge of his bunk, staring vacantly at the door, his mind fixed upon the continuance of that faintly heard humming of the turbines, of that quivering vibration which pervaded the ship. At the back of his consciousness somewhere was a perception of the steady rise and fall of the floor beneath his feet, the slightly marked lateral cant, slowly righting itself, which spoke of the fact that they were already far out at sea. But he concerned himself not with their position.

The whir of that machinery which drove them unflaggingly onward, which might at any moment cease, held him fascinated. At each moment he expected the all-shaking roar. Yet those whirring revolutions continued unmodified in their normality, continued until their vibrations seemed to enter into him, to set his head whirling dizzily in a spin that was coincident with their own, beyond his control.

His brain worked feverishly, as with an independent will, placing before him again and again pictures that he could not banish—the uprush of a sheet of flame, the headlong plunge beneath waves dotted with human heads of the great liner, decks ripped open and funnels awry—himself in the cabin clinging to the bunk as she sank sickeningly in

THE FADE-OUT by Jack Lait

Wherein Mr. Cupid Takes the Traditional Chance, and Finds That Times Have Changed

WHAT a brutal commentary on life it is that the accepted "happy ending" is the first embrace of the lovers. It is very difficult to sell a story or a drama or a comedy—or anything except a farce—wherein that first clutch is the happy beginning. The world, as a dramatic critic, has voted that romance lives until the hero and the heroine may kiss in the spotlight, and that ends it as far as further interest in the matter goes.

It proves, for one thing, that suspense and not romance is the big punch in fiction—every form of elucidating fiction. Since the getting together of a man and a woman is the biggest thing in this existence, the suspense lives until they get together. When that transpires, the rest is detail sans excitement, and sweet tales of domestic married bliss as well as tangled triangles go into the literary undesirable class together with such forbidden and unmarketable themes as the truth about the underworld, stories about Mormons in which they are not made fiendish polygamists, un-mysterious murders, trial marriages, and divorce trials.

"Cinderella," the greatest story ever written, spends all but its last line in bringing Cindy and her prince to an understanding—all very simple and light—and dismisses with "And they lived happily ever after" the complex and truly important data about the business of living which begins with the blushing ingenue burying her face in the curve of the swain's honest shoulder.

This story, being fortunately sold before it was written, will therefore pioneer a hitherto unfooted trail, and will begin where the movies leave off.

Estelle sank into the arms of Dan.

When they stopped kissing, to catch their breath, Dan asked her when they would be married, and she said it was all so sudden that she must have time to prepare—would tomorrow afternoon be too long to wait? And so they were married.

Dan worked in a wholesale bean cannery. He enjoyed an average income, which means that he earned scarcely enough for one. When it came to feeding and clothing and entertaining and decorating two, the tall cost of blessed matrimony became a vexing problem.

Estelle did not nag or press him—much. She never "threw it up" to him that she was not being maintained in the luxury to which she had been accustomed (her father was a union bricklayer), but she merely insisted on getting what she wanted. Not that she made him pay for all she got—no; she made him owe for most of it.

All her life she had bathed the dishes and manicured the silver at home, but, being a wife, she knew that she had to have a servant. A servant in these days earns more than a managing director and eats more than a hired hand in husking time. Estelle got herself one who was too delicate to wash, but coarse enough to sport an appetite for baked potatoes (a dime a carat), cream puffs, caviar, liver and bacon, eggs benedictine, imported sarsaparilla, stuffed tomatoes, lemon cream pie meringue, and ripe olives.

Estelle had for years attended the movies, get in as get in can, and liked it. But now she was independent—she had hooked a man whose purpose in life it must be to provide whatever she could think of to want, so she attended the Jesse James Theater at $4.40 a throw, and thought the coiffure of the prima donna in very bum taste.

The feel of cotton against her satin skin now irritated Estelle. She had become dainty and esoteric. Crêpes and silks cost like the mischief, but they cost her less now than balbriggans had cost her before marriage—they cost Dan. So Estelle reveled in the touch of the silkworm's handicraft from toe to collar, and sent Dan's cotton socks to the laundry to be mangled.

Estelle's "folks" had reared her in the rear of a shanty, with southern exposure and a grand view of the rugged alley which had been her playground. Now she craved and leased an apartment so modern that it was a year ahead of itself, with the bed coming out of the mantelpiece and folding floors. The janitor service was execrable, but the front of the shack was so smart—it had a porte cochere, which she called a canopy.

Street cars had carried her for many years. But now, since Dan stood pat like a cheap piker and refused to buy a car, she was driven to taxis and in taxis. The rates were a shame and the tips, alone, a pretty item—but she couldn't be a yokel, could she? It was costly and all that, but what did she get married for?

Estelle also entertained. There were several other brides in the building and in the neighborhood who had more time than brains, and whose husbands had less backbone than gelatine, and the fair wives exchanged calls and garroted the wives who were not in their set—at that moment. When the visits were "on" Estelle they set the family bankroll back for heavy nicks in re cookies, salads, highballs, cigarets, and whipped cream. When Estelle made the rounds she had to have clothes fit for a woman to be seen in, heaven knew, so she wouldn't look like a crow and make a boob out of her husband and be panned.

The matter of boots, too, was substantially considered. The ante-nuptial footwear had been called shoes. Now nothing short of boots would do. The difference between shoes and boots is about $9. Boots are not taller, but they come higher. Time was when boots were things to wade in. Now the women wade in after them, through puddles of perspiration poured by hubby.

Furs. Ah! What is a woman without furs? What is she? Is she a woman at all? Furs are essentials. Ask any married man. Estelle was overlooking no essentials. She had been presented with a fox neckpiece on her nineteenth birthday and an electric seal muff on her twentieth Christmas. But now she yowled for a mink coat to her ankles, which was seven inches lower than the hem of her skirt. Did she get the coat? Would Bryan run for president?

Furniture was one of Estelle's hobbies. The chair assigned her at the family board during her adolescence had been sans a back and had cost 79 cents in the grand old days before the war when it was new and intact. But with marriage had come finer consciousness, and the living room was in mahogany, the dining room in walnut, and the boudoir in bird's eye maple. Wot ye the price of mahogany this day, fair stranger? A mahogany toothpick would crimp a garage keeper. Walnut is distributed by Troy measure, and bird's eye maple is being set into coronets. Estelle made the apartment very attractive with her furniture—the installment collector liked it so well he called almost every day.

For a year Dan stuck it out. Then, one evening after dinner, having prevailed on Estelle to have dinner at home despite the indisposition of the servant and his wife's expressed desire to dine at the Robury inn, he lit his hand-rolled cigaret and suggested that expenses of late had been rather heavy.

"Well, why look at me?" asked Estelle. "I'm sure I cost you little enough. If there's a woman around here who scrimps and saves any closer than what I do, she's starving to death, walking around in tatters, and working her fingers to the bone."

"I don't exactly blame you for it, dear—"

"Well—I should hope not. From the day I threw my youth, my freedom, my wonderful opportunities away and married you, I've been a slave to you, shut in and tied down, living from hand to mouth, counting the nickels, breaking my health, wrecking my constitution, and ruining my beauty trying to make ends meet on your office boy salary. And what do I get for it? What? You're forever picking at me, nagging me about money—money—as though I could help it. Goodness knows I don't let a penny slip through my fingers. Is it appreciated? It is like blazes.

"But I know what I'll do. If you're going to yelp at me like this every night, then I will cut loose—I'll do like the rest of the women around here. I'll have the game as well as the name. Here I go with a few measly rags when every other woman on the block has real clothes. Here I go to one matinée a week when every woman I know goes to shows every second night and to supper after. You call this living? My mother said I was a fool to marry you."

Dan sucked at his brown cigaret, kicked his frayed toe against the rug, drew a deep breath, and said:

"Now, 'Stella, there's no use taking on. I've had this on my mind for weeks. It's got to where I have to make it clear to you. You're—we're spending too much money. Figure it out any way you like, but we have to get down to a——"

"We? You mean I. Well, let me tell you this, Mr. Grouch—I've humiliated and deprived myself as long as I'm going to. And to have you complain yet! It's rich. I'll say I don't have to go to theaters—my husband hands me a flock of laughs, right here in my palatial three room dump of a home. So—you've been thinking this over. And you said to yourself 'O, Stella is a long suffering simp, she'll stand for a nice chop in the hand out she's stood for everything.' And you expect me, after all I've sacrificed, after all I've done for you and been to you, to eat bread and water, wear burlap and wooden shoes, stick home in these miserable four walls, and wait for your springy footstep to bring you in for more complaints, give up all my friends, scrub floors like a kitchen mechanic, and pick up coal and wood in railroad yards. Well, get this and never forget it—I'm the pretty baby what won't do any such things, see?

"Before you married me you hinted how prosperous you was. Oh, yes—by all means—have another nut sundae. Certainly, we must go to see such and such a play, it's glorious. Did I like American Beauties at nine bucks a bunch, or did my nostrils yearn for hyacinths at eleven? Well, you harpooned me. And now what?

"You grudge me every bite I eat and every shred of every rag I put on. Do I think it's advisable to buy this? And do I really feel I need that? Of course, if I must I must, but the way things cost these days—whew. You've got me so I'm afraid to buy a package of invisible hairpins or put sugar in my tea."

"Oh, now, dearie—it isn't as bad as all that. I want you to have everything. But, you see——"

"Sure, I see. I've been seeing for months. But I've choked it down, and said nothing. It isn't that it costs too much, only it isn't worth much. You don't love me any more. When we were first married anything went. Why? You wanted me to be pleased. It pleased you to see me—the woman you fancied—happy. Now that's over, and it's like any other mortgage or overhead, it comes hard to pay for it. You've got me where you want me, and now I can take it or leave it. Is that it?

"Well, you're all wrong. You haven't made an old woman out of me, hard as you've tried. I still have a remnant of my looks left. And any time you're tired of me, I guess maybe some other man——"

"You cut that kind of talk," he cried, up on his feet. "You're my wife, and I won't listen to it. Now, I've stood all I'm going to of this stuff. I've listened and been a sap all this time. Now you'll listen to me. You've had me broke, in debt, and in hot water from the first day I met you. We've been married long enough now to throw off this sweethearting foolishness, and get down to hard tack. We've got to——"

"We've got to nothing. And don't you raise your voice at me. This is America, not Africa. I'm a wife and a voter and a citizen, not a squaw. I've got a right to what you make. It belongs to me. You cheated me into marrying you, and now you'll pay for it, and pay pretty. And I'd just as soon get it in alimony. Now, what do you think of that?"

Dan picked up his hat and walked out.

Six months later they met in court. Desertion and nonsupport were the charges. Half his income was the penalty.

They met again six months after that.

"How are you getting on?" she asked.

Oh, I'm living at my mother's. I live very quietly, 'Stell. How're things with you?"

"Well, I'm taking dancing lessons, and I guess I'll join a show. I've had a lot of offers."

"Offers?"

"Yes—proposals—and propositions. I'm not the little simpleton that you married, though, Dan. The man that gets me has to show me—has to show me he's willing and able to put up for a luxury like me. I've had my eye-teeth cut, and cut gems come high. I made my mistake. I'll profit by it."

"I—I don't quite get you," he said. "In all good fellowship, now that we're split, and now that you're getting your alimony regularly, will you be good enough to tell me—confidentially—just what you hold against me? Just what you expected me to do, more than to give you everything I had or could get my hands on and go into debt for life; more than that I should come home every evening, be devotedly true to you, worship you as long as you gave me half a chance in spite of what I saw and knew? Isn't there anything to marriage except clothes and taxis and shows?"

"Oh, I suppose so. I tried to be a dutiful wife. But, really, Dan, I never was meant to be a poor man's wife. I have temp'rament. You don't probably even know what that is. But I bubble with it. I should have married a millionaire, a sport, a good scout, a mixer."

"You should? Why? Is there anything wrong with you? Your parents were very decent people. You were a nice girl. Why do you think you should have had all that hard luck?"

She laughed aloud.

"See?" she said. "I knew you never understood me. Gee whizz—lived with me 191 days, and never knew me no more than if I was a stranger. Hard luck. What do you know about life?"

'I know this much about it," he answered. "Sports and mixers never catch up with it. Life can't be found that way. It's what you feel, not where you go or what you wear."

"Say—if you'll write a few of those hymns, maybe you'll make some kale, and be able to buy yourself a new hat; you need one. Well, I got to be going. Good-by."

"Good-by," said Dan.

And they lived happily ever after.

THE INFERNAL MACHINE

hind the eyes that could not see—whirring madly to a climax, shrieked with his heart seeming to burst his breast, shrieked—there was a mighty crash somewhere. The last bulkhead! He essayed one more shriek that was soundless, would not come beyond a gurgle, put his hands blindly to his face, felt them, with a feeble wonderment, wet with a warm fluid from his mouth, reeled dizzily upon that sloping floor. Ah! at last, thank God! thank God!—there were lights, lights!—flashes and stars of dancing light! He pitched headforemost into a gulf of blackness.

. . . .

As dawn broke, the S. S. Gargantuan, crippled by a couple of smashed propeller-shafts, and afflicted with a heavy list to port that caused her captain to analyze expletively the ineptitude of an amateur stevedore gang at stowing cargo, was picked up by a freighter with a nose for salvage. Her passengers, who had whiled away the anxious hours by singing hymns or playing poker, according to their various tastes, had all of them long ago forgotten the temporary inconvenience caused them by a ten minutes break-down of the electric-lighting dynamos at the critical moment.

A few hours later, the ship's doctor wrote out, for the behoof of two exasperated detectives, a technically exact certificate of the death of Jake Bravinsky from natural causes. "Bursts blood-vessel," he interpreted, laconically, as they scratched their heads over his text book diagnosis.

. . . .

About the same time, the American manager of the shipping company was dictating a letter to the harbour-authorities wherein he expressed himself as highly dissatisfied with their attitude in regard to freight-car No. 34518, laden with bunker coal for the S. S. Gargantuan and hurled into the dock by a mob of infuriated strikers the night before the ship sailed.

If the spirits of the departed can revisit this earthly sphere, it is pleasant to think that possibly around that irate manager hovered the equally irate but impotent shade of Jake Bravinsky, frightened out of existence under false pretenses.

utter darkness. Again and again these pictures came before him, in a merciless repetition, curiously exterior to himself, as though he stared at a maddening reiteration of the selfsame scenes upon the screen of a cinematograph—in his head the whirring, identical with the whirling of the turbines, of the machine that would not stop.

He flung himself down upon his bunk in an exasperated effort to escape this involuntary visualization of the terror to come, to sleep if possible. But still the whirring in his head continued, beyond his inhibition, placing before him again and again those pictures of impending doom at which the sweat came clammy on his brow. Like a machine it was, he thought, half delirious under his obsession, an infernal cinema machine—yes, that was it—the fever mounted in him—in his head was a whirring cinema machine over which he had no control. He sank at last into an uneasy sleep in a dream where that cinema machine in his head was geared somehow to the whirring turbines, was itself that infernal machine that should explode. . . .

He was awakened from a nightmare where he was clutched by nameless things by the two detectives standing over him.

"Time for exercise, Jake," said one of them, as the prisoner stared blankly into his face.

He roused himself stupidly, grasping only two outstanding facts. He was still alive. That infernal whirring in his head had stopped.

The three of them passed out of the cabin into the long corridor tenanted only by cleaners and an occasional hurrying steward, climbed stairways and again stairways, and finally emerged into the damp early morning chill of the open air. They passed aft to the steerage deck, where a few sailors were busy with hose and swabs. No other passengers had yet made their appearance.

His terror woke alive again in the wretched prisoner as, between his captors, he walked up and down that deck at a pace which they dictated to him. In his sleep down below there, the menace to his existence, although ever at the back of his consciousness, had lost actuality—seemed unbelievable when he awoke. Up here, on the deck of the great ship whose white superstructure lifted and sank against the grays of a stormy sky, her shrouds moaning in the cold wind which smote him like a douche, he was brought sharply back to contact with reality. It was real—terribly real—this ship solitary upon the vast ocean where great waves rolled with foaming whitenesses under the torn clouds of an incipient gale. Even her immensity dipped to their turbulence.

He glanced along to the rows of boats swinging high up above the terraced promenade decks, ready for the almost unthinkable catastrophe, glanced still higher to where the four enormous funnels poured out volumes of black smoke that mingled with the low clouds. They fascinated him, those funnels. He could scarcely turn his back upon them when the limit of the deck was reached and he faced aft once more. He looked at them again with a strange relief when yet once again they turned. They were still vomiting their smoke, volute upon volute in endless succession of emergence, black smoke that was normal and still normal, welling and still welling in an even laziness of black coils that rolled about the funnel tops ere they were torn away by the wind. He agonized for the sudden upward burst of flame from one of them. . . .

The gale grew worse as the day wore on. Even Jake Bravinsky, immured in his steel cell far below decks, could tell that its violence increased from hour to hour. The loose fittings of the cabin jangled and rang in the staggering impact of the ship into the great waves which smote her at brief and almost regular intervals. The streaming glass disc of the port rose disturbingly toward a zenith which flooded the confined space with a cold gray light, and fell back again through a long arc to souse itself in green waters and a temporary gloom. Though he could see nothing, the panic-gripped wretch crouched upon his bunk could imagine the totality of the scene—the great liner wallowing in the enormous rollers which ran upon her in an endless succession of lifting, moving ridges diagonally to her bows, the beaten smoke—still in uninterrupted emergence from her funnels—mingling with the spume and spindrift flying over her upper works.

At every few moments a vicious intensification of the whirring vibration of her turbines was eloquent of propellors lifted clear of the seas and racing in furious and futile energy. Then, with a thudding crash, that shook every atom of her structure, her bows lifted again to yet another wave on which the propellors, once more immersed, drove her fiercely forward.

Hour after hour crept by in alternate illuminations and sousings of the porthole, in disconcertingly sudden drops that lifted the stomach in their apparent bottomlessness, in a never-ending succession of savage crashes and violent blows that checked for the instant the mighty momentum of that enormous mass of steel driven onwards and yet onwards by its own unconquerable power. And still the whirring vibration of the machinery that was the heart of her continued, continued until once more it became the dominant perception of his overwrought brain, continued through minute after minute, hour after hour, where to him each instant menaced awful cessation.

Once more, to his horror, he found his brain identifying itself with those rapid revolutions. Once more the machine in his head began to whir, beyond his control, presenting vividly to his mental vision those terrifying pictures of disaster—the upgush of flame, the viscerated ship plunging into the depths. And now to these pictures was added another, suggested by his experience of the morning—the wind-torn seascape of white foam creaming upon the heads of an infinity of waves leaden-gray under a sullen sky. No boat could live, be launched even, in such a sea.

He visualized, nevertheless, involuntarily, the ugly, panic-stricken rush for the davits—and then remembered, with a sickened shudder, that down here he was debarred even from participation in that hopeless fight for life, had not even that slender chance. The pictures repeated themselves, over and over again, to the accompaniment of the whirring turbines. He felt himself going crazed, tortured into madness, under their diabolical insistence. If only he could shut them off—stop that infernal whirring cinema machine in his head!

Food came to him midway through that endless, timeless day, was pushed into the cabin as to a kennelled dog by a callous steward who slammed the door upon him and would not wait for the cry he was so long in bringing to utterance. He had had a vague idea of calling for a doctor—anything to stop this maddening visualization of the impending terror, to stop that infernal machine whirring, whirring, whirring relentlessly in his tortured brain. He tried to eat for a distraction. Faint though he was, the food sickened him. He pushed it away untouched.

Night came. The port that lifted itself in its long slow rise above the waves ceased to be a disc of light; it rose and fell in an equal gloom, water leaking in through its brass circumference. The cabin was illumined only by a diffused radiance entering by the narrow slit above the door from a source somewhere along the corridor.

Still his brain remained terror-riveted upon the one theme, a furiously whirring machine out of control—he found himself still staring, against his will, at a funnel whose rolling heavy smoke suddenly shot upwards upon a sheet of red flame, a geyser of flying cinders. . . .

The hours passed in the half-light of his steel cell, far down in the depths of the great ship that crashed and thudded tirelessly into the buffetting seas. The dishes slid, overturned upon the floor as she pitched and wallowed and shivered in the ever-renewed collision of blindly meeting forces. Still the feverish whirring vibration of the turbines continued undiminished, permeating every atom of her structure as it did every fiber of his body, blurred ever and anon by the heavier vibration of propellers racing free in the instant or two before their automatic check came into play, stunned into abeyance every minute or so by the smashing impact of yet another great wave that swept down her length in a swish and scatter of flying water.

Up above there—the scene came vividly to him—behind the oilskinned watch upon her bridge, the great funnels were still belching black smoke into the blackness of the night. Under them—he thrilled with fanatic hatred—damnably confident passengers in their evening finery were seated at flower deckeed tables in gilded saloons. Under them again, far, far, below, the firemen were shoveling, shovelling, naked to the waists in the eye-scorching hell of the open furnace doors. From the bunkers the coal was tumbling down to them in an avalanche of black chunks, all indistinguishably like each other.

His hyperexcited mental activity began to find new channels for itself.

He found himself speculating—unable to stop speculating, a new form of torment reeled out by that ceaselessly whirring machine in his head—on the nature of the explosion when it should occur. Would he hear it in this part of the ship? He remembered, in newspaper accounts of torpedoings during the war, the statements of passengers in big liners who had heard nothing, felt only a slight shock, when the ship's side was blown in. That diabolical little German-Jew's infernal machine would explode deep down in the very center of the vessel—"blow de belly out of her"; the forecast rang in his ears. What sound would come to him here? A mighty roar, rending her vitals, flinging every one prostrate, or . . . ?

What was that? His heart stopped in recognition of a faraway, muffled shock. He listened, his senses strained to an intense acuteness. What was that dull shock, deep down in the ship? His scream rang, strange and terrifying, in his ears, unconscious as he was that he had uttered it. He started from his bunk, clutched at the edge of it with claw-like, rigid fingers, sweat pearling upon his forehead, as he steadied himself upon the sloping floor that listed away under him and came not back. He listened, ears at strain for the slightest sound. There was a strange hush, an utter absence of the vibration so long continued. The engines had stopped!

At last! It was the explosion. He had no doubt of it. A breathless terror swept over him, denying utterance to the flood of wild blasphemy which rose in him like an inversion of agonized prayer. Mingled with it was a great relief. The whirring of that infernal machine in his head had stopped. He could think now, think with a rapid lucidity that amazed him. His mind, miraculously alert, took in all the implications of his position, while yet he clung to the bunk, speechless and incapable of movement.

Would any one come to let him out? There was a rapid scurry of feet along the corridor. It passed, ceased definitely. Then, in heart-stopping confirmation of his fear, the light in the corridor went out suddenly. He stood, clutching at his bunk, in an absolute darkness that enveloped him almost tangibly. He let go of the bunk in a dash for where he knew the door to be, slipped, with a sharp stab of accentuated terror, upon a wet floor sloping permanently at an acute angle, despite its slow rise and its seemingly endless subsequent subsidence. He crawled upwards on it, knocked his head against the door, pulled himself upright with a grasp upon its handle. Then, in a sudden access, he found his voice. He shrieked—piercingly, shriek upon shriek that rang through an appalling silence—shrieked like a maniac forgotten in his cell.

None came to answer him. There was no sound in the corridor outside. What was happening in that deathly silence which pervaded the great ship? He failed to bring himself to exact imagination. She still rose, still subsided, heavily, lazily. But the list which sloped the floor slippery under his feet remained uncorrected. Was she still afloat—settling, slowly but surely? He ceased his maniac shrieks to listen. There was no sound. This far-down corridor, remote from the general life of the ship, tenanted only by emigrants on the westward voyage, was deserted. He shook furiously at the implacably locked door, crashed his fists against its panels in frenzied blows that had no result but the flaying of his knuckles. He flung himself against it like a wild thing in a cage. The door remained immovable.

He stopped again, listened—listened for the rushing cataracts of water he knew must be pouring into the ship, down her companionways, along her corridors. He heard nothing. There was no sound perceptible in that rayless blackness which pressed upon him, save a sough and swish of water exterior to the ship. Then he understood. Of course, they would have closed down the watertight doors! He shrieked a curse at that unknown officer on the bridge performing his obvious duty, in a vivid imagination of the great steel doors sliding down into their immovable positions, shutting off the water indeed from this compartment, shutting him off inexorably from escape even could he break out into the corridor.

In the horror of this realization he relaxed his hold upon the door tilted forward against him, slipped and slid, in that utter blackness, down the sloping floor to the wall of the ship. He felt over it with trembling eager hands, felt for the heavy brass fastening of the porthole. It was still firm, though his hands were wetted in the water which welled up gently around its rim.

Despite the complete cessation of the crashing impacts with which the ship had so long smashed into the heavy waves, her equilibrium was by no means stable. She still rose, though heavily and draggingly; still sank, ever more and more deeply it seemed, in a sluggish roll which emphasized in its swing-back the ugly list that the lift had failed to correct. In that engulfing blackness she seemed to subside ever lower and lower, inert, incapable of righting herself, cradled still by a motion of the waters that swished and washed against her flanks, sinking with every lurch into rayless, unimaginable depths.

The frenzied man huddled there in the darkness against the wall wet with water from the leaking port had no doubt of it. He knew. That infernal chunk of coal had done its work only too well. Paralyzed for any movement, his imagination worked feverishly and yet, in that complete dark, could form no definite mental images. To his horror, that terrifying machine in his head had started again—beyond his control.

It was like being in a darkened movie-hall, where the still whirring machine could only project flitting and fragmentary pictures from a torn film in the intervals of frequent "black-outs" upon the screen. But still the machine went on maddeningly—the more maddening because somehow the machine was part of himself. The mental photograph of a sinking derelict he had once seen recurred over and over again in that patchy sequence—the hulk sagging in the seas which lapped over her, higher and imperceptibly higher—the decks awash, waves licking the canvas of her bridge—and then the silent, sudden engulfment, disappearance.

Were they still afloat, upon the surface? He dared not give himself the answer. Even though they had sunk beneath the wave-tops, he remembered—all scraps of apposite knowledge that he had ever picked up coming to him with a memory preternaturally acute—that great ships likt the Gargantuan; if their bulkheads were closed, did not drop like a stone to the bottom of the sea, but remained, swung as it were at an intermediate depth, in a slow and gradual subsidence as one compartment after another was burst into by the pressure of the water.

Such—he knew it—was their position now, rolling sluggishly fathoms down—how many he wondered?—below the surface of the sea, sinking gently, ever sinking, down, down, down in the darkness towards the bottom. That darkness! The awful of it came upon him suddenly in a renewed access of horror. He put his hand out in it, invisibly. That darkness, utterly black, blacker than the blackest night, which enveloped him and seemed to choke him as he gasped in his terror—that darkness would never be lifted again!

It was black, stifling darkness for him for all that was left of his life—darkness, complete, unbreakable, inexorable, until—until—death—death in that blackness! He shrieked again and again, purposely, for he knew there was no hope of rescue, shrieked stridently in a mere blind escape of energy from overcharged nerves.

For an indefinite period of time, hideously prolonged, he sat huddled and gasping, crouching against that wet wall of his lightless cell. How long was it since it had happened, since the engines had fallen silent, since their relapse into darkness? It seemed an eternity, was certainly many, many hours. Long, long ago they must have disappeared below the surface of the sea. He imagined bulkhead after bulkhead bursting under a torrent of unillumined water as they sank deeper and yet deeper, narrowing and ever narrowing the margin of his life. Presently the last bulkhead would burst, and then . . . Or perhaps it would not burst. Perhaps it would hold and then, in a few days, as he used up the limited supply of air, he would suffocate. In a few days! He had been here, in this darkness, days already—days and days!

Yes, days and days he had been here and he was suffocating—he was suffocating now! He felt his heart, big and thumping heavily, in his breast, swelling as though it would choke him. He tried to rise to his feet upon that unstable sloping floor, reached for an unfound support in the blackness, and sank down again, gasping.

Then, in that pitch blackness, the ship gave a heavy lurch, lifted once more as with difficulty, subsided in a long roll that threw him against the wall. The floor seemed to sink endlessly beneath him. He clawed himself partially upright and shrieked, with his last breath, curses—curses—curses—upon Rosa Bauermann, upon the "comrades," upon that diabolical little German-Jew. Yes, she was going now—going finally.

He shrieked once more in that awful, oppressive blackness, shrieked, his ears singing, that infernal machine in his head—be-

PRETTY PAL by Edward J. Doherty

THE greatest contrast between his wife and the pretty pal, Jimmy Turner thought, lay in the shape, size, and complexion of their hands.

Mrs. Turner's hands, playing a supper sonata on the gas burners of the kitchen stove, were coarse, rough, red. Her fingers were short, stubby, calloused, and unlovely; though there was no question as to their deftness and capability. Her nails were—well, just nails.

The pretty pal's hands were long and slim, white and dimpled, and the slender fingers were tipped with shining beauty.

One pair of hands was always skimming over typewriter keys, turning gracefully the pages of fashion magazines, patting a wad of sunny hair, or playing with something—so it seemed to Jimmy Turner.

The other pair had known little play, opened few magazines of any kind, wandered over no typewriters, enthralled nobody by its beauty—it had been employed mostly for utility.

Jimmy worked in the loop, and his was a responsible position. Among his other duties he had that of writing the signature of S. Lee Barker on numerous, if unimportant, letters.

It was an important consideration, to Jimmy, that Mr. Barker had not asked any one else to write that famous name. Nobody could put the flourishes to it that Jimmy could. It didn't procure him any more money, this task, but it made him feel more content with himself.

Besides it was a recognition of his usefulness. He had worked for the firm for twenty years, and he felt it time his value was acknowledged.

He sat at a desk a little removed from the others in the room, and nearer to the stenographer than was good for him. He couldn't help watching her.

She was a pretty girl, and Jimmy's eyes felt rested when he looked at her. Sometimes he consciously avoided looking, but the noises she made all day long, with her machine, her vanity case, her candy box, her pencils, her papers and carbons, or her dainty mouth, forced him to turn his head.

Jimmy hadn't thought much of Gladys when she first came to work, or, for that matter, much about her. Mentally he had criticized her hat with its great dangling bunch of black and red cherries, her silken hose, her short skirts, her odd handbag, and even the way her hair was arranged upon her forehead.

"Why will they wear those stilts instead of heels?" he asked himself, "and how do they ever manage to get around on them?"

Yes, Jimmy was even a little irritated with the newcomer, until she laughed aloud one afternoon. It was a beautiful thing, that laugh, as sweet to his ears as an April rainbow to his eyes. And thereafter she was his pretty pal, and nothing that she did was wrong.

It got so he used to think of her the first thing in the morning, while Mabel was out at the gas range, in her faded blue cotton kimono, her hair untidy, her eyes still full of sleep.

And the more he thought of Gladys the more—and paradoxically the less—he thought of Mabel. He couldn't help the contrast. He couldn't help wondering why Mabel seldom smiled and never laughed any more, why she was so plain, so unromantic.

He never thought of Mabel these days after he had left the house. His day was filled with Gladys. He would sit back in his chair, when she had left the room, and compare her to springtime and flowers and rippling streams, the splashes made by leaping fish, the chiming of bells, and the music of flutes and fine old violins.

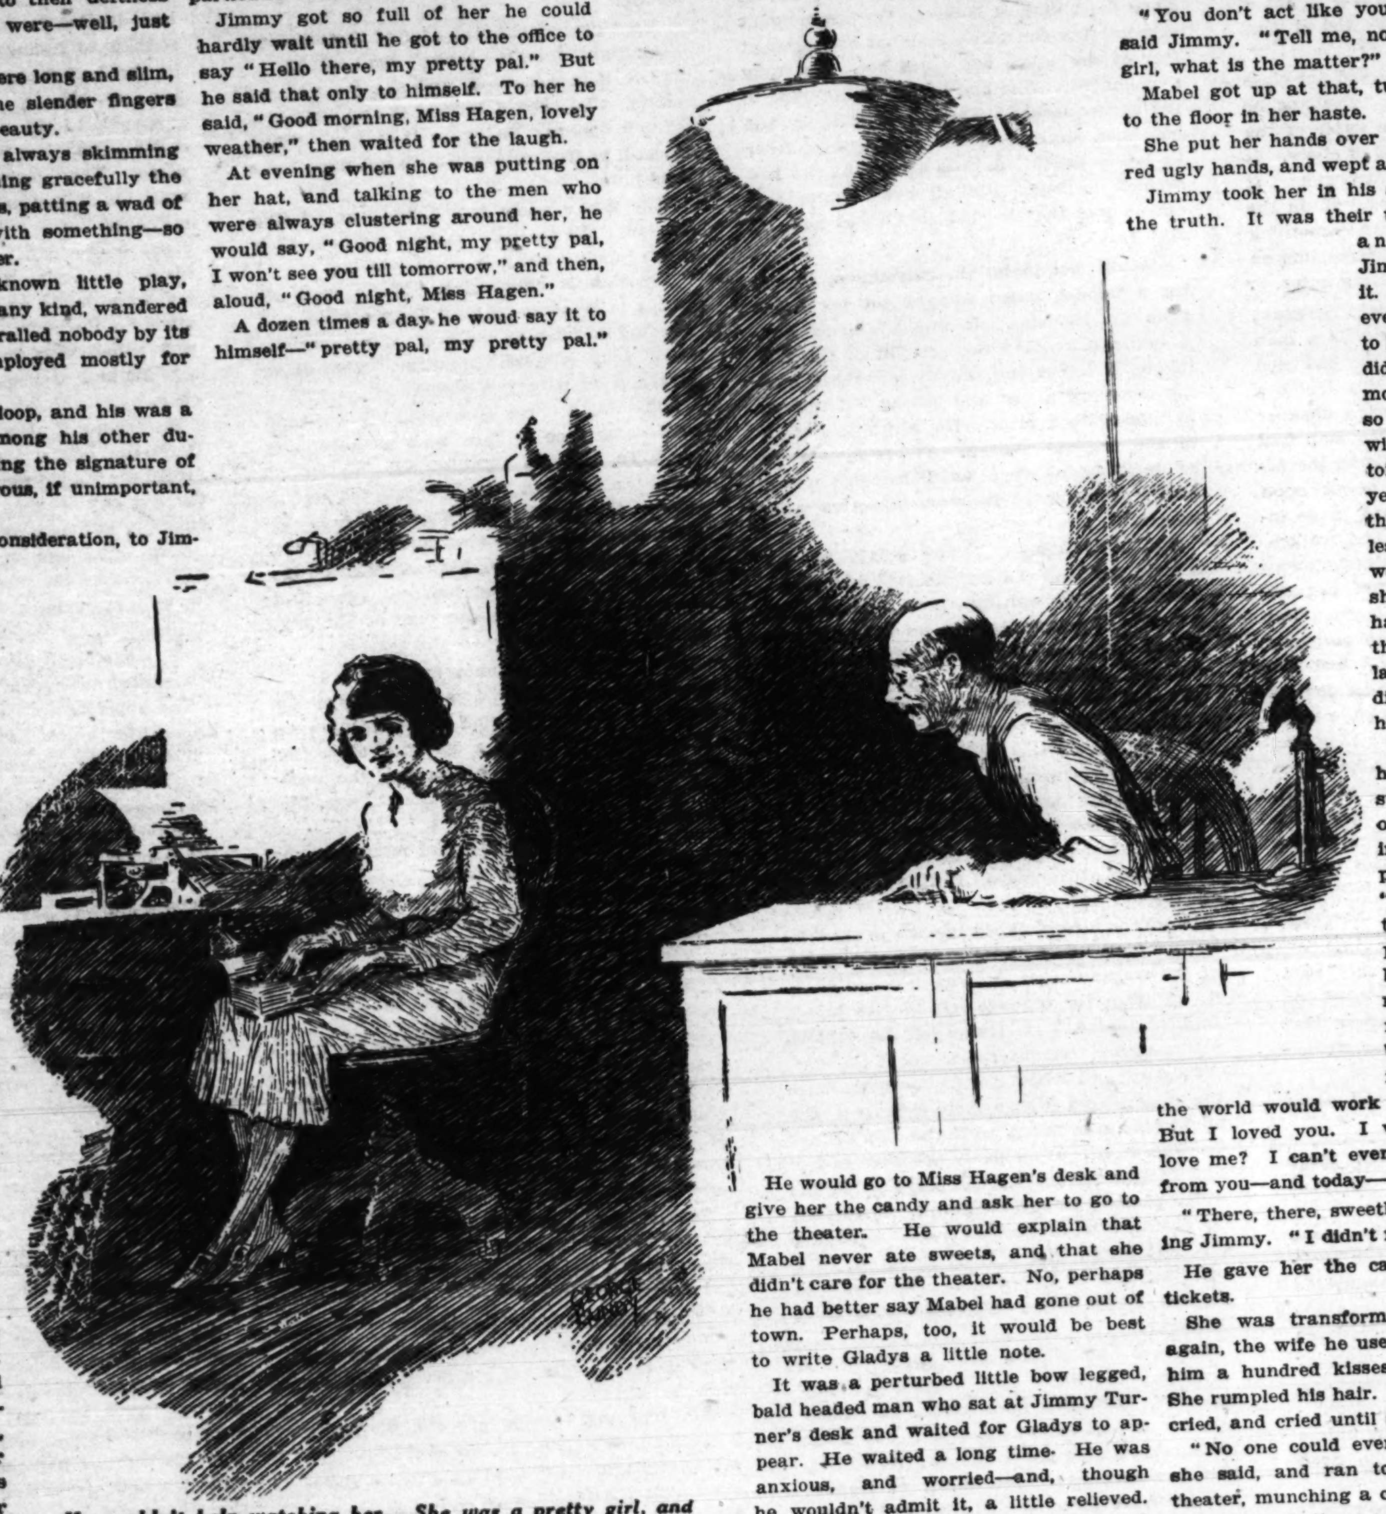
Gladys was full of joy. She laughed at everything. Jimmy used to think up things to make her laugh at; and it was hard work, too, and not at all necessary.

She laughed at his interest in a new dress, a saucy hat—"outre," she called it—the shape of a new handbag, anything or everything. She didn't have to have anything in particular to make her laugh.

Jimmy got so full of her he could hardly wait until he got to the office to say "Hello there, my pretty pal." But he said that only to himself. To her he said, "Good morning, Miss Hagen, lovely weather," then waited for the laugh.

At evening when she was putting on her hat, and talking to the men who were always clustering around her, he would say, "Good night, my pretty pal, I won't see you till tomorrow," and then, aloud, "Good night, Miss Hagen."

A dozen times a day he woud say it to himself—"pretty pal, my pretty pal."



He couldn't help watching her. She was a pretty girl, and Jimmy's eyes felt rested when he looked at her.

Sometimes he said it with a little shame, some times as if the words were magic, and again with a sneaking thrill of adventure. But never could he make himself say it aloud.

Once he called himself—to himself—an old poll parrot, and he blushed deliciously.

Jimmy did not love Gladys Hagen, and he knew it. He loved the beauty of her, the grace of her, the vibrant sweet laugh of her. That was all.

He told himself again and again there was no wrong in this—but even so he felt a tiny bit guilty because of this secret love; and he was quite bitter over his narrow life, his bald head, his shabby suit, his bowed legs, and his tired and tattered wife.

He hated to go home. It was always the same. Good-by to Gladys, her departure with the bunch of young clerks, the purchase of the evening newspaper; the long ride on the "L," standing up and swaying, trying to read and keep his feet from under other feet, clinging with one arm to the strap until it was weary, then substituting the other arm; his wife over the gas stove, arms bared to the elbow, coarse hands, red fingers, a hot damp smile on her hot damp face; the evening meal, eaten in silence; the reading of the headlines, a look at the sporting page and the comics; lights out; bed.

Jimmy and Mabel had been married twenty years, and Jimmy had begun to wonder if all marriages turned out like his, so flat and stale, so cheerless, so common; the same routine, night after night. He decided he could not stand it any longer. He was going to break the routine. He was going to have at least one night he would never forget.

On this particular day Jimmy hustled out at noon and bought two tickets for the best show in town. Then, with guilt written all over his face, he stepped into a store and bought a two pound box of candy. He hadn't bought candy for ten, twelve years—more than that, maybe. Anyway, he figured he had a right to buy candy for a friend.

He would go to Miss Hagen's desk and give her the candy and ask her to go to the theater. He would explain that Mabel never ate sweets, and that she didn't care for the theater. No, perhaps he had better say Mabel had gone out of town. Perhaps, too, it would be best to write Gladys a little note.

It was a perturbed little bow legged, bald headed man who sat at Jimmy Turner's desk and waited for Gladys to appear. He waited a long time. He was anxious, and worried—and, though he wouldn't admit it, a little relieved. He wouldn't have to ask her until she came. He wanted to so badly—and yet he didn't quite dare.

When 3 o'clock came and Gladys was still absent he strolled to another desk—a little self-conspicuously, but braving it out—and asked in as flippant a manner as he could:

"Where's the handsome steno? Haven't seen her all afternoon."

The young cub snickered, and Jimmy blushed and began to stammer.

"You, too?" said the clerk. "Poor old Jimmy! You, a married man! Fie for shame!"

Jimmy was covered with confusion, but he stuck manfully to his question until he learned what he had sought to learn. Gladys had called up, saying she had a toothache.

The candy was in Jim's overcoat pocket when he reached home, and the tickets to the show that was to have been such a treat to his pretty pal were in the pocket of his vest. He tossed the coat over a chair in the hall, took his seat in the kitchen, watched his wife cooking supper, and said not a word. The wonderful night he had planned—O, what was the use?

"Supper's ready," said Mrs. Turner.

Jimmy came out of his shattered romance suddenly, conscious there had been something strange in the timber of his wife's voice. Not in what she said—she had said it nearly every evening for twenty years—but in the way she said it.

He passed that over. He was mistaken. But when Mabel suddenly rested her head on her arms and started weeping—noisily—Jimmy knew he had not been mistaken at all.

"What's wrong?" he asked.

"Nothing," she said. "Nothing at all."

When a weeping wife tells her husband that "it's nothing," the wise husband knows he has somehow committed a great blunder. Jimmy was wise. He knew he had blundered. But how? He was sure Mabel knew nothing of Gladys. So he asked her again, this time more gently.

"Toothache," she said.

"You don't act like you had toothache," said Jimmy. "Tell me, now, there's a good girl, what is the matter?"

Mabel got up at that, tumbling the chair to the floor in her haste.

She put her hands over her face, her poor red ugly hands, and wept almost hysterically.

Jimmy took her in his arms, and learned the truth. It was their twentieth wedding anniversary and Jimmy had forgotten it. He hadn't spoken even a pleasant word to her in months. He didn't love her any more. She had tried so hard to be a good wife to him. She had toiled for him twenty years. She had rubbed the skin off her knuckles washing his underwear and his shirts; she had ruined her hands and reddened them ironing his collars, and cooking his dinners, keeping the house clean for him.

"Look at those hands," she demanded suddenly, holding them out before him, turning them to show the palms and the backs. "Look at those hands that I was once so proud of. They were beautiful when I married you. Look at them now, Jimmy Turner. Twenty years. Slaving. Nobody else in all the world would work for you like I have. But I loved you. I was a fool! Do you love me? I can't even get a pleasant look from you—and today——"

"There, there, sweetheart," said the soothing Jimmy. "I didn't forget."

He gave her the candy, and the theater tickets.

She was transformed. She was a girl again, the wife he used to know. She gave him a hundred kisses. She squeezed him. She rumpled his hair. She laughed until she cried, and cried until she laughed.

"No one could ever love you like I do," she said, and ran to get dressed for the theater, munching a chocolate and trying to talk through it.

She left Jimmy dazed, shamed, and yet jubilant.

He was shamed because what his wife had said to him was true. It was his fault that her hands were red and ugly. He had squeezed the whiteness and the shapeliness and the tenderness out of them. He had even squeezed the joy out of her life.

And then, when he had made her a frump, what had he done but compare her to a younger girl? A chit of a girl who had never worked for the comfort of any man, whose hands were still white and glorious, and whose laugh——

Jimmy's meditations were cut short. Mabel was standing in the doorway, dressed for the show. She was dressed in prim oyster linen, a shiny brass brooch at the throat, her old shoes, her ridiculous old hat with its faded flowers, her mended old gloves, and that terrible thing that once had been a coat.

"How my pretty pal would laugh at that!" Jimmy said to himself. He could even hear her laugh; and it enraged him. In that minute all the love that Jimmy Turner had ever felt for Gladys Hagen was put aside forever.

"Ready?" he asked. "I've been waiting weeks for this one night. I wanted to surprise you, dear. That's why I didn't tell you soon as I came in. You know what I was thinking when I watched you cooking dinner? You were turning the gas up and down, you know, now this burner, then that. I thought of the organist at the cathedral playing a wonderful hymn.

"Come on, we mustn't be late—my pretty pal."

THE BOGIE OF FEAR

ILLUSTRAT

THE STORY.

ALLAYNE GUERNSEY has inherited the Guernsey millions and an inborn dread of scandal. Her besetting fear of being talked about has led her, at 24, to magnify a trivial quarrel with

SPENSER BOURKE, her fiancé, break the engagement, and rush into a heedless marriage with

BENNETT HALSEY, a smooth crook, who is at the end of his resources and needs Allayne's money. At the start of their honeymoon Allayne learns of the existence of a woman known as

ROSA HALSEY, whom the crook discarded to make his marriage possible, and she promptly tells Halsey she is through with him. The train on which they are passengers is wrecked and Halsey, seeing his scheme a failure and fearing the police, who are always on his trail, conceives the idea of "playing dead" by exchanging papers with one of the wreck victims. Allayne's former romance is renewed and, supposing Halsey to be dead, she and Bourke are married and find themselves supremely happy. Then Halsey, who has been traveling about again with Rosa, reappears in the rôle of blackmailer. Allayne has put all her wealth into Bourke's business and is at her wits' end when the crook asks for money. Therefore she complies without question when he demands that she meet him at a roadhouse. Meanwhile Halsey has had a heart attack, knows himself to be at the point of death, and has turned his thoughts from greed to revenge. He proposes, he tells Allayne, to kill himself and let her be found in the locked room at the roadhouse with his body. As he is about to carry out this threat, Rosa, who has provided herself with a revolver, enters the room through a window and kills him. Allayne, terror-stricken at the thought of further scandal, makes her escape from the roadhouse with Rosa, hoping that Halsey's death will be thought a case of suicide. But she does not reckon on the resourcefulness of RANDOLPH JENKINS, the town's chief of police, who finds two weapons in the roadhouse room and no burns on the dead man's forehead, where the bullet entered—conclusive evidence, Jenkins decides, of murder. Nor does Allayne know that Halsey, as a part of his scheme of revenge, wrote a letter to this same chief of police, summoning him to the inn.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

Rosa Pays the Piper.

THE Chief turned to the door and beckoned the trembling clerk to enter. The man did so.

"Who had this room? I mean, did he give any name?" asked Jenkins.

"He telephoned—gave the name of Carver," replied the clerk.

"What time did he phone?"

"Between twelve and one," was the answer. "Said that he wanted a private dining room. He got here a little before one, ordered luncheon for two, and said that a lady would arrive shortly and to send her up here. When she came she went right upstairs, after asking me where Mr. Carver's room was."

"Ever see her before?" asked Jenkins.

The clerk shook his head.

"How was she dressed?"

"I didn't really notice, sir," said the man, "except that her clothes were dark and that she wore a heavy veil."

"Couldn't identify her then?" asked Jenkins.

The clerk shook his head again. Jenkins looked beyond him to where, in the doorway, stood the sergeant and his followers, plainly piqued that their Chief had beaten them to the scene.

Jenkins beckoned to the doctor. The surgeon entered and bent over the dead man. His examination was cursory, perfunctory.

"Death instantaneous," he announced, rising from his knees.

"All right," said Jenkins. He bent over and picked up from the floor the automatic pistol lying by Halsey.

"One shell fired," he announced. He walked to the table and picked up Halsey's revolver. He "broke" it and found that none of the cartridges had been exploded.

He waved a hand to the sergeant and the plain clothes men entered. "Take charge, sergeant," he ordered. He turned to the clerk. "I'll talk to you later. Where's the waiter who served them?"

The man came quickly forward. "We'll talk outside," said Jenkins. He left to the sergeant the detail work of examination.

Downstairs, in the private office of the manager, he questioned the man.

"Never saw the dead man before?"

"Never, sir," replied the waiter, nervously.

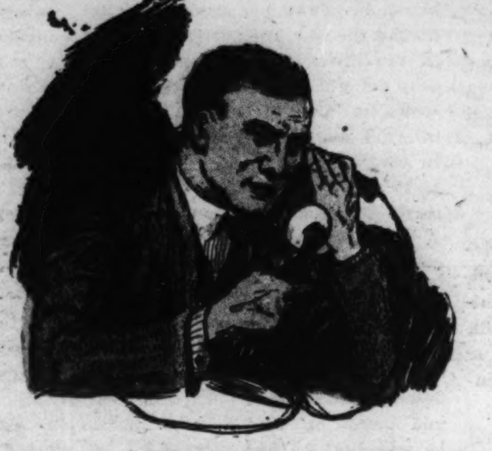
"Tell me what happened—from the moment of his arrival," ordered the Chief.

The waiter's forehead wrinkled. He was not a bright mentality, but mentality is not required of waiters. But he was honest and very anxious not to omit anything.

"Well, sir, the man—Mr. Carver—had ordered luncheon for one o'clock."

"From you—or from the clerk?"

"From me, sir. As soon as he'd come I went to the dining room upstairs, sir. He ordered the regular table d'hôte meal, sir. Then he asked me for pen and ink and stationery. I brought them to him, sir. A few minutes later he rang for me, and when I got to the room he gave me a letter and told me to mail it. He gave me a dollar tip, sir, and said to mail it right away. And so I walked right down to the letter box and dropped it in."



"There's been a murder at Hillcrest."

He paused, as though for dramatic effect. He had got over his first nervousness. Doubtless he visualized himself as the center of an admiring circle of friends tonight, thrilling them with the tale of the drama in which he played a leading part.

"And the letter was addressed to you, sir!" he cried.

Jenkins stared at him. "To me?"

"Yes, sir. He made out it was so important that I took a look at the address. And it was addressed to the Chief of Police of Hillstown, sir."

Jenkins had had, in the few brief months that he had been at the head of the Hillstown police force, many exciting experiences. But this was the most exciting of all. The dead man upstairs had written to him shortly before his death. Why? The answer came immediately to his mind: because he feared death, knew that some one intended him injury, and wished the forces of the law put immediately upon the trail of the slayer. Unquestionably, even the name of the slayer would be contained in the letter.

The reasoning must be sound. Why else should the dead man have written to Hillstown's Chief of Police?

He reached for the telephone upon the manager's desk. He was connected with the Hillstown postmaster.

"This is Ran Jenkins speaking."

"Listen," said the postmaster. "I don't belong to your party. If you have any complaint to make, please address it through the proper channels. Or is it a dinner invitation, Rannie, old top?"

"Neither," said Jenkins, "a favor."

"The bank account is yours," said the postmaster, chuckling.

"Not even that," laughed the Chief. "There's been a murder at Hillcrest. I've just learned that the murdered man wrote a letter to me before he was killed. How recently has mail been collected from the box near the Inn?"

The postmaster whistled his amazement. Then, "Just a minute till I find out."

Jenkins heard him speak to a clerk. In a moment he said, "The last collection was at eleven this morning. The next is at seven tonight. What time was the letter mailed?"

"About one," said Jenkins.

"H'm. In that case it's still in the box. I'll send an inspector out at once to open it. I'll have him give you the letter. Where'll you be?"

"Well, if he comes right away I'll be waiting at the Inn," replied Jenkins.

"All right. Anything else I can do?"

"Not a thing, old man, except," he added, "not to mention this letter."

"Silence is our middle name down here," said the postmaster.

Jenkins hung up the telephone and turned again to the waiter.

"Well, what happened after that?"

"Luncheon had been ordered for one o'clock sir, and I brought it up in a heater, just as a lady came up the stairs to the door. I opened it for her and let her in. Then I went in, too, and began serving the meal. Then I left them. About an hour later, sir—maybe less—I went up and knocked. I heard the lady ask what I wanted. I told her that I'd come for the dishes. She called through the door that they'd ring when they wanted me. So I went downstairs. I usually go off duty at half-past two or three, sir, until the night trade begins. But I couldn't leave until I'd brought the dishes downstairs and been paid the check.

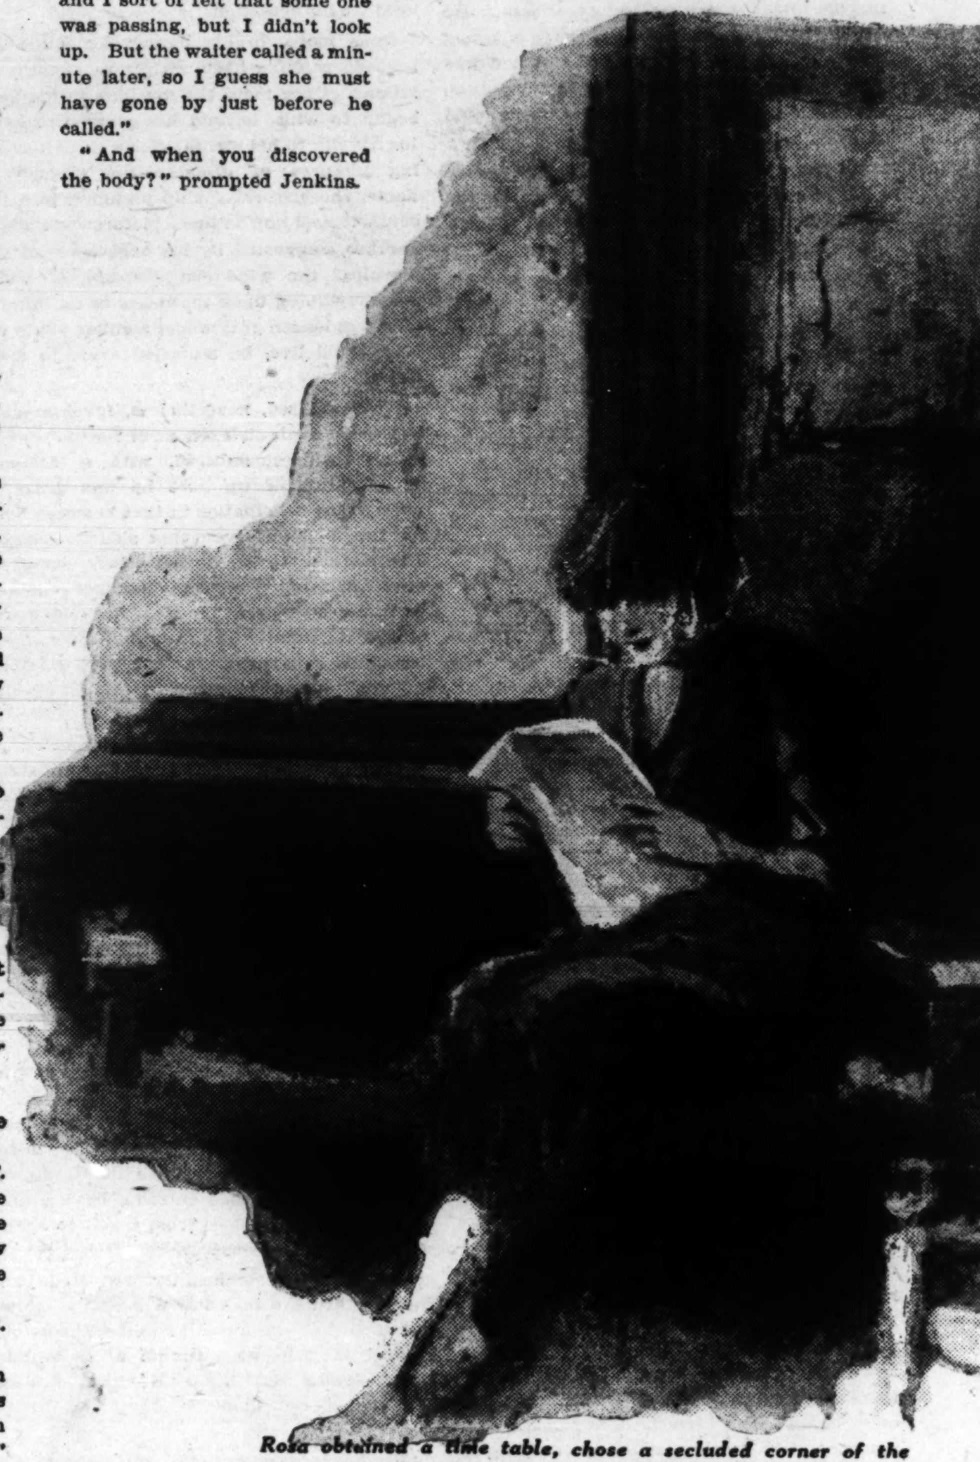
"So, bye and bye, I went back and knocked. This time no one answered. I tried the knob and found the door locked. So I went to the top of the stairs, thinking it was pretty funny, and called to Mr. Kenny. He came upstairs and we knocked and called. Then, getting scared, we broke open the door. Mr. Kenny ran right downstairs and saw the woman driving off in her car. Then he telephoned—and that's all, sir."

"And very well told," Jenkins complimented the man. He sent for Kenny, the clerk.

"Did you see the woman leave?" he asked.

"Well, sir, I didn't exactly see her," said Kenny. "I was going over some accounts and I sort of felt that some one was passing, but I didn't look up. But the waiter called a minute later, so I guess she must have gone by just before he called."

"And when you discovered the body?" prompted Jenkins.



Rosa obtained a time table, chose a secluded corner of the waiting room, and sat down to study it.

"Then I ran downstairs and looked out the door in time to see the woman going down the driveway in a car. I hollered to her, but she didn't stop. Then I telephoned the police."

"Didn't notice the number of the machine?"

The clerk shook his head.

"Send in the rest of the employés," ordered Jenkins.

But half an hour later, when he had questioned all of the servants, Jenkins gave up the idea of discovering the number of the machine. He went upstairs and talked with the sergeant.

Halsey, in his way, had been something of an actor. It was necessary that he should be, inasmuch as he played so many parts. And when he was posing as an Englishman he carried no papers that, falling from a pocket, might have unmasked him. At the time of his death he had been posing as William Carver. To have carried any papers identifying him as Bennett Halsey, or as anyone else, would have been reckless. So, upon his body had not been found a single document that would indicate that he was anyone other than Mr. "Carver."

As a matter of fact, beyond a few engraved cards, bearing that name, there were no papers whatsoever upon him. Save for the letter that had been mailed to hi Jenkins could see no clew to the possi identity of the slayer. Of course, the might be finger prints upon the handles the weapons, and these were careful shielded. Also, the sergeant and his m would later examine the man's clothin looking for laundry or other marks th would serve to place him. But just n there was nothing to do save wait for t arrival of the postal inspector.

He did not keep the chief waiting lon But when he arrived carrying in his ha a bundle of soiled, muddied envelopes, face wore a puzzled expression.

"Sorry to keep you waiting, chief," said. "But—somebody skidded into the ter box at the foot of the drive. Knocked over and busted the mail box. I found the letters in the road, but—that's all."

He handed them to Jenkins. There no letter addressed to him.

"Did you get them all?" he asked.

The inspector shook his head. "I pick up one of these in the trees across the ro There must have been a high wind blowing no, I don't suppose I got half of them. A it's so dark now that it isn't much looking."

But Jenkins disagreed with him. On more he picked up the telephone and issu orders that half a dozen men, equipped w flashlights, should be sent out at once. their head, a little later, he began a s tematic search of the neighborhood of t broken letter box. But two hours later temporarily gave up the search. Envelop had been discovered as far as fifty yar away from the box. Others might have be carried by the wind even farther. He drove back to headquarters. He wished that the identity of the murdered man—and of his murderess—could have been solved tonight. Tomorrow's opposition paper would make much of the mystery. Of course, it was absurd to expect the police department to solve every crime within a few hours of its commission, but still—he wished that it could.

And because of that wish, he did not close his desk and leave the office. Perhaps he was assuming too much. The letter of the dead man might be void of clews. It might be the letter of a crank. It might contain—anything. If, in the meantime, he could learn something about the man, without depending on the discovery of the missing letter.

At ten o'clock that night Sergeant Blaney reported to him that a man named Carver, and his wife, had been registered at the Longridge Hotel, a questionable hostelry in the cheaper section of Hillstown. The man had been heard giving a taximan the address, "Hillcrest Inn," about noon today. Later his wife had made inquiries about him, and had walked, apparently much disturbed, away from the place. She had not returned. It had also been learned that the man Carver had been seriously ill the day before and had had two doctors called to him. These doctors had been interviewed, but knew nothing of the man, save that they had attended him and that he had been dangerously ill, at the point of death, in fact. Servants had heard the woman called, by her husband, by the name of "Rosa." She had not returned to the hotel since she left it, shortly after noon. The sergeant had a description of her.

"Send that description out," said Jenkins. "Have her arrested on sight. Anything in the rooms that would tend to tell who they were—anything about them?"

The sergeant shook his head. "Not a thing, Chief."

Jenkins nodded. Shortly, there being nothing else to do, he went home.

Criminals of the confidence game type can have no homes. The burglar, plying his trade by night, his identity masked, may find it possible to maintain a residence. There is no reason why, by day, the burglar should not be a respectable-seeming business or professional man. Doubtless many of them are. For, unless he has bungled his work, he need not fear recognition.

But the confidence man, the swindler, works in the open. He presents his forged note of introduction, insinuates himself into his victim's good graces, perpetrates his chicanery, and—must needs fly to fields afar. He cannot meet his victim next day at the club. For his identity is known. He must depart with all the celerity that he can muster.

Rose, wife of a confidence man, had never known home life since the ill-fated day when, a cashier in a little southwestern restaurant, she had made the acquaintance of Benny Halsey, who was at that moment engaged in laying the foundation for an oil swindle of some magnitude.

Since the day, shortly after their meeting, when she had married him, she had always "traveled light." For it was essential to their liberty that they be able to step aboard a train or boat at a moment's notice. It was cheaper, Halsey used to say, to buy new things than to wait for the laundry—and a policeman.

So that there was nothing of hardship, nothing unusual, in the fact that Rosa found it necessary to leave Hillstown without any of the effects that she had brought there. She had slightly over fifteen hundred dollars, enough to keep her going for some time. After that—O, she could take care of herself.

Just how she would take care of herself was not important at the moment. She had been honest until she met Halsey. Whether or not she would have remained honest had she never met Halsey is doubtful. She was of the sort that takes what it considers the easiest, most comfortable course. If circumstances arranged themselves so that honesty would be easy, Rosa would be honest. But with her future she was not at all concerned. Only the immediate present interested her.

She had progressed through many moods since the killing of Halsey. On the moment of regaining consciousness that ever-present fear of the police had ruled her. But only momentarily. She had become indifferent to the consequences. Then, a little later, she had been anxious to end everything, either by jail or death. A little after that she had decided to begin life all over again, and escape was the thought that ruled her. It still ruled.

She did not make the mistake of engaging a taxicab when Allayne set her down from the roadster. It was a stormy day. A taximan, reading the account of the killing at Hillcrest Inn, might remember having conveyed a wet and bedraggled woman to this or that place. No, she would walk to the railroad station. Ticket agents in so bustling a place as Hillstown would hardly remember every prospective passenger.

But, unfortunately, there would not be a train for New York until late afternoon. Rosa, in the waiting room, studied the situation thoughtfully. In an hour or so—perhaps less—the railroad stations would be watched. Unfortunately, a description of Allayne—if one were obtainable—would loosely fit herself, Rosa. They both had worn dark clothing, were veiled, and their general complexions were the same. Rosa was tempted to remove the veil, but decided not to. Some employé of the Longridge Hotel might be in the station, attending to tickets or baggage for a guest of the place. Curiosity might be aroused at sight of her.

From the information window she obtained a timetable. She chose a secluded corner of the waiting room and sat down to study it. A train for Chicago left in two hours. And, of course, local trains left for various points at frequent intervals.

Chicago and New York, however, were the only places where Rosa felt that she might hide in security. And she didn't know Chicago at all. It suddenly occurred to her that there were other roads besides this one which passed through Hillstown. She asked for a timetable of another road. Studying this, she found that a train for New York left Stasburg in two hours. According to the map, it was only a dozen miles or so from Hillstown.

She left the station and approached a taximan. She knew that it made her conspicuous, that the man would remember her, but it was extremely doubtful that the Hillstown evening paper of today would contain any account of the killing of Halsey. Her brief residence in the town had taught her that the evening paper came out at one o'clock and that it published only one edition. She doubted that it would be enterprising enough to publish an extra. Therefore, the taximan wouldn't connect her with the killing—supposing that he did—until tomorrow morning's paper had been published, at the earliest. And by that time she'd be in New York.

"Can you drive me to Stasburg?" she asked.

The man eyed her appraisingly. With her hat and suit wrinkled by the rain, she did not look like the sort of person who could pay fifteen dollars for a taxi ride.

"It's nearly thirty miles," he said. "Cost you fifteen dollars."

"That's all right," she told him. "How long will it take?"

The taximan glanced at the slippery street. "Pretty muddy over the hills," he said. "Ought to do it in an hour and a half, though."

Rosa opened the rear door of the machine. "All right; take me there," she ordered.

The man hesitated, and she guessed the cause. She opened her purse and extracted fifteen dollars. She gave it to him. "And there'll be five more when we get there," she told him.

The man's surly face lighted up. "Hop in, lady," he invited. A moment later they were turning away from the station.

Emotion is exhausting. There were no pangs of remorse to keep Rosa awake, and she had no fears of capture. Wherefore she sank into a placid slumber. She never awoke from it in this world.

Rounding a curve on a steep hill, the taximan came face to face with a descending car. To save an infinitesimal fraction of time, the taximan was hugging the wrong side of the road. The other was a heavy touring car and its brakes could not stop it; barely checked it. The taximan whirled his wheel over. He saved his own life. But the big car tore into the rear of the taxi and crushed it.

Hours later the taximan awoke in a Hillstown hospital. Beyond a bad shaking up he was well enough. And in the morning he was able to talk with a detective of police, and give information concerning the accident. Frankly he conceded that it was due to his own recklessness.

"How's the lady?" he asked remorsefully.

The detective told him. The taximan groaned in horror.

"Who was she?" demanded the detective.

The taximan shook his head. "Never saw her in my life before," he stated. He narrated the circumstances of his engagement by Rosa.

The detective was quick-witted. He saw a connection between the victim of the accident and the woman wanted for the Hillcrest killing. So, in the morning, employés of the Longridge Hotel definitely identified the body of Rosa as the missing "Mrs. Carver."

Jenkins, arriving at his office at nine, was greeted by the detective. He listened attentively to the man's story. He nodded approvingly.

"Good work, Wilson," he said.

A reporter from the afternoon paper was waiting to see him. He ordered that the man be admitted.

The morning paper, pro-administration, had contained a long account of the mysterious killing, and had wound up with the statement that the police were showing remarkable efficiency.

Jenkins smiled as he read this. There had been neither efficiency nor inefficiency shown as yet. But now, this information brought by Wilson clarified the case. There remained to be found the letter that had been written to him by the dead man, but that would merely explain, probably, the motive for the crime. And that was not nearly so important as the identity of the slayer.

And that identity, Jenkins believed, had been discovered. The woman was fleeing Hillstown when she had been killed. It was known that she had been excited at learning that her husband had left the hotel. Of course, there was something puzzling in the fact that "Carver" had made, apparently, an engagement to meet a woman at Hillcrest, and that his wife, who patently had been there and killed him, should have been excited at his departure from the hotel.

Still, Jenkins reasoned, they had intended to go together, but for some cause the man had decided to go by himself, leaving the woman to follow later. The letter written by the dead man might clear up this gap in his reasoning.

And that letter would soon be found. Half a dozen men had been searching for it since dawn. They were, according to a report upon his desk, climbing trees, looking in the branches. . . . They'd find it. And, because a crowd of amateur searchers would hinder the police if the existence of the letter were made known, nothing had been given to the newspapermen about it. The waiter had been instructed to keep silent, and Jenkins was quite sure that he would obey.

So, feeling that with the identification of Rosa the department had a good night's record, he smiled upon the representative of the evening paper. Personally, they were friendly, although politically opposed.

"Anything new on the Hillcrest murder, chief?" asked the reporter.

"You can't bawl us out this afternoon, Kennedy," said Jenkins. "Anything new? Well, something. We've found the woman who killed 'Carver'."

The reporter was a sportsman; he could appreciate the dexterity of a foeman.

"Nice work," he commented. "How'd you do it?"

Jenkins told him. The reporter nodded.

"Anything on the motive?" he asked.

"Not yet," Jenkins admitted. "But we hope to learn something."

The reporter nodded again. "But you can't prove that this woman killed the man," he objected.

"It's circumstantial; I'll concede that," said Jenkins. "But pretty good at that."

"I'll say it is," the reporter congratulated him. "Much obliged, Chief."

Jenkins grinned. "Don't mention it, Kennedy."

"All right, I won't," smiled the newspaper man.

There was something mocking in his smile, something that made Jenkins vaguely uneasy. Did the man know anything that was not known to the police? Mentally he began reviewing the case as it had progressed thus far.

He had an excellent brain. And he had not been thinking five minutes before he began to see, not the one flaw in his reasoning—the strangeness of the fact that, if "Carver" were planning to have luncheon with his wife, he had not driven to the Inn with her—but several others. For opposition sharpened his wits.

The case, with the identification of the body of "Mrs. Carver," had seemed so simple that he had been content with what had been done. But the mocking smile of Kennedy made his brain, lulled into contentment, awaken.

"Mrs. Carver" had been killed in an accident to her taxi. But she had ridden away from the hotel in a car which she had driven herself. What had become of that car? It couldn't have been a taxi, or there would have been a chauffeur. Why had a woman, who apparently owned her own car, later used a taxicab?

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A NO. 1 SALESMAN.

1. We require the services of three high grade clean cut salesmen of the "go-getter" type, willing to leave Chicago after special training and take charge of choice territories. The position we offer gives to the right man an opportunity to get into a business for himself. The man we want will be well educated, be able to furnish bond and will possess moderate financial resources; no investment is required; preference will be given car owners.

2. Ours is a liberal commission offer and the average yearly earnings of our salesmen are from $6,000 to $7,500 and some go well over the $10,000 mark; our 1921 sales are nearly up to our record of last year.

3. The article is a nonseasonable, high class, nationally known machine sold on easy terms to grocers, delicatessens, restaurants, butchers and others; our company is the oldest of its kind in America.

4. Write fully, giving age, experience, past earnings and ambition; replies held in strict confidence. Address O O 583, Tribune.

A BRANCH MANAGER FOR EVERY WARD.

Leading Casualty Insurance company has opening for men of ability and integrity. An opportunity to enter the insurance business; to take charge of outlying suburban and ward offices in Chicago and vicinity, handling health and accident insurance and casualty lines.

Office will be furnished; a reasonable salary and commission paid and full co-operation given by the co. to enable each manager to succeed and build up a business of his own that will net him $3,000 income first year.

Requirements: Men of character, good education and personality, good habits and record. Experience in selling is valuable but not essential if the man is of the right caliber. The opportunity is as big as you make it. We want hard workers who will put in their time building up their business, not easily discouraged, fighters, and willing to work overtime if necessary in the supervision of his office.

We invite replies from former or present industrial, life and casualty men, bond, real estate, and specialty salesmen, who desire to better their working conditions. An appointment will be arranged on receipt of information giving your ward [new] number, exp., past and present occupation, age, and refs. Floaters and soft job hunters save your postage. A BETTER CHANCE.

[This ad appeared two weeks ago and I got two men that are crackerjacks. I can talk brass tacks pretty quick to another good man.] Sales Manager.

A chance to make better money than he is now making—I mean for the man who has shown he's got downright selling ability and who gets orders where other birds fall down. He's got a dominating, likeable personality and a tireless worker; in fact, a better man than his present job. And if he had a line that had it over any competition in price and quality and was a big seller he'd make a killing. He may now be selling something entirely different but that cuts no ice providing he has shown he's SELLING it. One who is a top notcher on groceries to the retailer or with similar experience would probably have an initial advantage, but not necessarily. Nine of my men in Illinois are daily putting it across big and our heaviest selling season is still before us. But they have a way o f getting what they go after. I want another man of that caliber. He will make around $4,000 clear the first year, maybe $5,000. Some of our men will run close to $6,000. This is no shyster proposition. I am State Manager for one of the big concerns in the U. S. and I have sold the line for six years. I know what can be done. If you are the hefty kind of man I am looking for, around 30 or 35 likely, not broke, have an auto and want to earn all you are worth on straight commission, I can show you where the money is. Down state men may send photographs, which will be safely returned.

But Write Me Fully If You Expect Consideration.

ADDRESS M 340, TRIBUNE.

A DISTRIBUTOR OF A well known automobile has room for 3 Salesmen, age between 35-40. Auto experience not necessary, but must be a high class salesman. See MR. SHEEHAN, between 9-11 a. m., 2929 Wabash-av.

ALUMINUM WARE SALESMEN—

We have vacancies for a few more salesmen in middle western territory. Our line is one of the largest made; price competitive; fall buying just starting; commission with drawing account to producers; line includes exclusive patented proposition on which we have practically no competition. Apply giving full particulars of experience, etc., which will be held in strict confidence. Sales Manager, American Aluminum Co., St. Louis; personal interview will be given in Chicago to applicants whose letters impress us favorably.

ANOTHER NEW ROGERS PARK SUBDIVISION

to be opened up in the next few days. This is the fourth new North Shore property acquired by us within the past thirty days.

WE HAVE NOW OVER $500,000 OF NORTH SHORE PROPERTY.

With the opening of this new property we can use a few more salesmen with or without experience. Have openings also for two Sales Managers. Plenty of live leads passed out daily. Investigate this immediately. This is a ground floor proposition with a rapidly growing organization. Apply

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

GET INTO A LINE THAT SELLS TO MERCHANTS NOW!

If you are one of the many who pulled down a good income until a few months ago and are looking for a chance to get into a line where men are earning from $400 to $1,000 a month RIGHT NOW, we have just this kind of an opportunity. Many come to us when other propositions begin to slip and have maintained a splendid average. This remarkable sales connection has gone through adverse conditions which hit other lines, and we would like to show you what some of our men have been paid so far this year—it is actually astonishing. Our proposition sells to merchants when nothing else is sold to him; it makes him a great big new found profit when everything else slumps. It is just what he wants, and if you are a hustler you can sell for us whether you have ever sold before or not. We have put on a number of men this year who are making more than $800 per month. We would be glad to show you their records. Unless you are ambitious to get ahead, don't waste your time and ours investigating us. If we accept you we will train you and pay commissions on everything sold in your territory whether you sell it or not. Nearly one half our sales are made on leads. Present sales force numbers close to 200. We want six or eight good high grade men to call at the Hotel Brevoort Monday and Tuesday between 9 and 12 a. m. and 2 and 4 p. m., and inquire for Mr. Hough, who will explain this proposition. Out of town applicants write. No one under 26 years of age will be considered.

WANTED—FEMALE HELP.

Stores and Offices.

STENOGRAPHER AND ASSISTANT—THIS adv. is placed in the hope of finding a smart business young lady out of whom I can ultimately make practically a business partner. You may have worked ten years or you may have come out of business school yesterday. The matter of experience or age is not vitally important, but a love of work, an interest in business, a young lady who works because she likes it and intends to make it her life work, dispatch, a natural sales instinct and a keen desire to get somewhere in the business world—these are the important things. Listen, I am about to start a small mail order business—selling auto specialties through agents and specialty salesmen. I'll pay a moderate salary plus a share in the profits. Starting a new business is tough going in these hard times—the position may amount to a big thing or may amount to nothing. If you're the right young lady for the job—you should have twenty or thirty girls working under you within a year and be getting a man's income. Write, telling me why you are the right person for the job—stating salary asked—qualifications, etc. Address K 565, Tribune.

TRAINED NURSING

Is the only profession in which one may secure a degree without expense.

THE HAHNEMANN HOSPITAL,

one of the oldest established and accredited training schools in the city for nurses, provides its pupils with maintenance, text books, uniforms, and a monthly allowance while in training. Graduates earn from $1,800 to $3,500 per year. Requirement 1 year high school or its equivalent; preferably 4 years. For complete information address HAHNEMANN HOSPITAL, 2814 Ellis, Chicago.

WOMEN—$50 PER WEEK SPARE TIME.

Chicago is short 100,000 homes. Our plan will enable every one to own their own home if they have a few hundred dollars. This is the greatest plan in Chicago. Our business is growing so rapidly that we must have from 10 to 15 spare time workers who are now employed to work 3 hours 3 nights a week. Our part time plan will be outlined at our Lecture Hall Monday, August 8th, at 7:30 sharp. This ad is your ticket. Bring it with you and come early, Monday only. Room 1016 North American Bldg., 36 S. State-st.

STOP.

I have decided to put 5 or 6 more women in our Organization, who are ambitious, willing workers, trustworthy, and will do what they are told to do. Your earnings will be $25 per week to start. This is not selling or canvassing. No experience necessary, as we teach you. Ask to see MR. TARBET, City Employment Manager, Suite 1016, 36 S. State-st.

PAIGE
Prices Reduced

When Bird-Sykes say "Rebuilt Paige," they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up" and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented, and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charges.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE 6-42, 1920, 5 PASSENGER TOURING. Just rebuilt and refinished standard coach painters green. Runs and looks like a new car. This car has had very careful driving here in the city. Top and upholstery good. Bumper and excellent set of tires. This has the same lines and is practically the same car as our 1921 model. Here is an opportunity to get a late model, high grade economical car at a great saving. Price $1,350.

PAIGE ROADSTER, 1921, Model 6-44. Only delivered about 3 months ago and in excellent condition throughout. Runs and looks like new. Equipped with spring bumpers, fore and aft, cord tires, lock, etc. Upholstery and top show no wear. This makes an ideal car for some one wanting one and does not cost much to operate. Just the car for sales work. Has ample space in the rear decking for three suitcases and additional space in rear of driver's seat. A substantial saving over the price of a new car. Price $1,500.

PAIGE 1920 LARCHMOUNT SPORT. Rebuilt and refinished beautiful deep maroon. This type of car is famous the country over for its peppy and powerful Continental engine and luxurious deep upholstery and easy riding qualities. This car in particular has had very little service and very good care. General coach condition excellent. Is equipped with 5 good tires, bumper, motometer, tools, etc. This is an opportunity to buy a high grade sport model in the pink of condition at a reasonable price for the service it represents. $2,000.

PAIGE SPORT, 1921, MODEL 6-66. Like new; just gone through our shops and refinished a beautiful mouse gray. Car has seen very little service. Top, upholstery, and general coach condition excellent. Equipped with good tires, spring bumper, motometer, lock, etc. This car has a countrywide reputation for its unsurpassed power, speed, and hill climbing ability. This powerful engine answers the slightest touch of the accelerator. See this wonderful car. Price $2,600.

PAIGE, MODEL 6-55, 1920, BROUGHAM, 5 Passenger Coupe. Rebuilt and refinished same dark blue color as our 1921. Ideal all year car for a small family. One of the most popular cars in our line. Equipment most complete, including 5 good tires, bumper, heater, spotlight, cigar lighter, vanity case for the ladies, and other accessories. Top a taupe color; velour upholstery; Continental engine. Car has our famous cantilever springs and makes a very easy riding automobile. Ample carrying space in rear to accommodate two suitcases. Account of reduction in prices, we can sell this for only $2,550.

Eight Good Automobiles

From $200 to $500 that will make eight wise families happy. All of these cars are in real good running condition and their value lies in the service rendered to the family. They put more people and happenings into your daily lives, broaden your world, and multiply your educational, social, and business opportunities.

Denying yourself a good automobile inflicts a penalty on yourself, your comforts and conveniences, and the penalty amounts to a greater part than your automobile.

Come down and let us show what a wonderful car these prices can give you. Get one today. Get out into the air and live.

The list includes four Oaklands, from $200 to $500, one late Maxwell, $450, three Studebakers, $175 to $250.

PACKARD

Packard Twin Six Touring. This car has been very well cared for and is in excellent condition throughout. It is very attractively painted in light green and completely equipped. The price is low at $3,000.

Packard Twin Six Model 2-35 Limousine. This car is equipped with a custom built body by Kimball, painted in Brunswick green and trimmed in green gray cloth. The tires, mechanical condition and coach condition speak of very careful handling, and the price is exceptionally low at $3,000.

Packard Twin Six Roadster. Here is an opportunity for some one. Car is just out of the paint shop, is in first class mechanical condition, and is certainly a fine looking car. The price is only $1,250.

Hudson Sport Sedan. This car is in exceptional condition throughout. The equipment includes excellent cord tires, new spare tire, front and rear bumpers, heater, etc. The paint is dark blue and in perfect condition. The price is very attractive at $2,250.

Haynes Touring Car, 1920 model. Not many of these cars offered for sale, especially if equipped as this car; mechanical condition is good and the price considerably below the market value, $1,500.

Cadillac Town Car. Here's one of the smartest little shopping cars in Chicago. The body is custom built and the appearance very exclusive. Paint and upholstery perfect and the motor extremely quiet. We were fortunate in trading this car at the low price of $2,000.

LINCOLN
LELAND BUILT.

STUTZ, 1920, SIX PASSENGER TOURING. This car is one of the last cars to be delivered prior to the current series. Has been used very little and well cared for as one can see at a glance. Has Biflex bumper, spot light, motometer and other extras. This is an exceptional buy at $2,000.

PACKARD 2-25 TOURING. This car has been turned in by a party who owns several cars and has used this car for city driving only. Car has been overhauled completely and repainted the standard Packard blue at a cost of $700. A ride in this car will convince you of its merits. A real buy at $1,750.

STEARNS-KNIGHT, 5 PASSENGER, SPORT MODEL. This car was purchased late in 1920. Has had very few miles of use. Excellent set of cord tires including a new spare. If you are looking for an economical, light car of the better class, call and see this. Underpriced at $1,600.

CADILLAC 57, 5 PASSENGER, SEDAN. This is the small Sedan with the two extra seats. Has an excellent set of cord tires. The paint is a dark green and very good. The upholstering is a dark blue velour; like new. This car has had very low mileage as the condition will show upon inspection. A real buy at $2,700.

CHANDLER COUPE. This is the current model in excellent shape in appearance and performance. Mechanical condition could not be better. Equipped with 5 wire wheels, 5 good cord tires, bumper, neutral lock, rear vision mirror, clock, etc. Can be had for $1,800.

HAYNES TOURING, MODEL 39. Has just been painted a turquoise blue. Equipped with a practically new set of cord tires. We have just overhauled this car completely. This car is ready to go and be free from the usual car troubles. We are pricing this car low so it will move quickly—$1,050.

NATIONAL SEDAN, $2,250

SUPERB VALUE!

You will be more than pleased when you see the wonderful value we are offering in this high grade Sedan. Mechanically this late series National functions as smoothly, quietly, and efficiently as a new National, which means easy control, lots of "pep," speed, and power, and extremely easy riding. The exterior has been refinished in blue and black and metal parts renickeled. The interior is upholstered in a very fine imported gray whipcord cloth and does not show the slightest signs of wear. Equipment consists of a full set of Truffault-Hartford shock absorbers, bumper, motometer, clock, heater, and excellent set of cord tires and 1 new extra. Carefully driven only 8,000 miles; cost over $5,000 and presents the appearance of new. At our price of only $2,250, including our standard new car warranty, it is a rare bargain.

OPEN EVENINGS AND SUNDAY.

Pierce-Arrow Sport

THE CAR BEAUTIFUL.

$4,500

An unusual offering in a Pierce-Arrow that could not be duplicated for $8,000, at the ridiculously low figure of only $4,500.

Here is a feast for the eyes of the art connoisseur; combined with what is generally conceded to be America's finest automobile.

It is the favorite 6-38 model and the closest observer cannot distinguish it from new. Has had expert care and driven carefully only a few thousand miles.

The equipment is very complete. The finish is a rich special Pierce-Arrow color of autumn leaves with a livening touch of fine red striping. The radiator, lamps, and other metal fittings are gold plated and the "tout ensemble" blends harmoniously with a new set of neutral tone gray "shark-skin" seat covers. The top is hard tailored of imported English Burbanks gray cloth.

Quiet refinement that is desired by those who demand something distinctive and smart appearing in their motors is expressed in the coloring and lines of this superb car.

If you are going to tour anywhere in this wide world here is a car that will take you there and back home again in perfect comfort.

1920 DUAL VALVE 6-38.

Cast aluminum body. Westinghouse shock absorbers, front and rear Pierce-Arrow bumpers. Exterior finished in Brewster green, with light green stripe. Interior luxuriously upholstered. Silk and linen seat covers, never used. This automobile is absolutely 100% in every particular, and driven only a slight distance [1,167 miles] in such careful hands that it is not apparent that this car has been used at all. Never privately owned. It could easily be sold as a brand new car. The Pierce-Arrow coupe is the smartest and most distinctive appearing inclosed car imaginable, and extremely scarce—especially the much favored 1920 model. Open evenings and Sunday.

Fashions Beauty Contests

SOME NEW DESIGNS FOR THE LINGERIE-SMITH

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Some of us who are what David Graham Phillips calls "born women" take to making lingerie like ducks to water. Other of us less gifted sisters take to it like a duck to land—that is, when there isn't anything better to do. And there are a few obdurate swivel chair warriors who won't sew under any circumstances.

Even among the two latter classes, however, the Linger(ie) Longer Lucy movement is gaining fresh converts every day. The truth of it is that never were undergarments and negligees easier to make, and never, too, were they quite so appealing of feature. This—together with the economical appeal of hand made lingerie—and this is always strong—has got the fleet of armchairs on the summer hotel piazza into concerted action. And today if you can't swop a new camisole or nightgown design with your neighbor you feel as homeless as does the resort visitor who has never had an operation nor a bucking thyroid gland nor a case of molar poisoning.

Among the midsummer currents in lingerie may be mentioned first of all the use of appliqued motifs. If you are that kind of woman you may make yourself a set of black georgette with white flower motifs of self material set on with black thread. Right here, indeed, let me say that a black and white wave has passed over our undergarments, and one finds many sets in many exclusive shops that look like a game of dominoes.

At the left upper section of the page you will find a set that invites such appliqued motifs as I have just mentioned. For, instead of the French knots of blue introduced on this rose colored voile set of nightgown, camisole, and step-in drawers, one might effectively place appliqued motifs of voile, georgette, or the blue linen which binds the garments. As it is, however, the dots are extremely dainty, and there will be many who prefer them to the more garish and unusual decoration.

This set in itself is sufficient to prove the vogue of the simple tailored undergarment. We are all for severity of line this year, and our anti-bunchy, anti-fussy mood is reflected again in the nightgown and chemise pictured at the top center of the page. In the nightgown we find the V-shaped neck which is a feature of so many present day models and which is rivaled only by the rectangular line. The material used here is pale pink handkerchief linen trimmed with the white net footing that is encountered so often now on silk, linen, and cotton models. It is administered here with a buttonhole stitch in white, and exclusive possession seems to be assured by the fact that the wearer's name is embroidered in white at the left side of the gown.

"If I could only be a convalescent without being sick," cried a friend of mine the other day, pausing before one of the new and charming bed jackets of this summer's vintage. Her wish, though almost as fantastic as that of the heroine who "would have loved to be a grandmother if she only hadn't been obliged to be a mother first," makes some claim upon our sympathy. However, a consoling view of the situation lies in the fact that these feminine bits of apparel do not obligate us to be convalescents. They are delightful for lounging about in our rooms and for the occasional Sunday morning when we have breakfast in bed.

Second from the right at the top of the panel is one of these garments carried out in two layers of rose chiffon. The darker tone placed underneath is turned back at neck and sleeves and the edges are picoted. A nightgown matching this jacket which is found at the right of the page is developed along the plain, simple lines of which I have spoken. It, too, is made of the two layers of chiffon, and worn with the jacket provides a substitute for the negligee proper.

More robust in conception and echoing faintly the Road to Mandalay is the gold figured black foulard second from the right below. This is bound with black satin, cut out quaintly at the top of the sleeve and finished with black silk tassels. A cap to match becomes, through its two crossed petal-like pieces in the back, quite piratical in suggestion.

The camisole joined to the step-in drawers seems to be one of the favored versions of subconscious dress. Yet another representative of this ilk is found at the lower right. Here the material is the white batiste, ever dear to the heart of the fastidious woman as was the plaited white cambric shirt to that of the old fashioned gentleman, and the trimming consists of insertion of valenciennes.

But, in spite of the popularity of the step-in chemise, the bloomer squad is by no means depleted. The bloomer is, in fact, a hardy perennial, and there is a large number of women who never think of varying their camisole and bloomer combination. For the bloomer addicts we show at the lower left a set of white radium trimmed with lace.

The same old materials are doing duty in the lingerie field. Crepes are particularly strong. So is radium, and many of the newest garments are made of crepe with radium finish. Speaking in general, it may be said that embroidery is much less luxuriant than usual. On the other hand, frequent use is made of a heavy darning stitch particularly effective when appearing in a double row. Even newer than this—in fact, it is one of the novelties of the season—is the hand crochet stitch. Laces—filet, Blanche, valenciennes, and other weaves—all have their adherents, but, as is the case with embroidery, this ornamentation has been partially eclipsed by the present cry for simplicity.

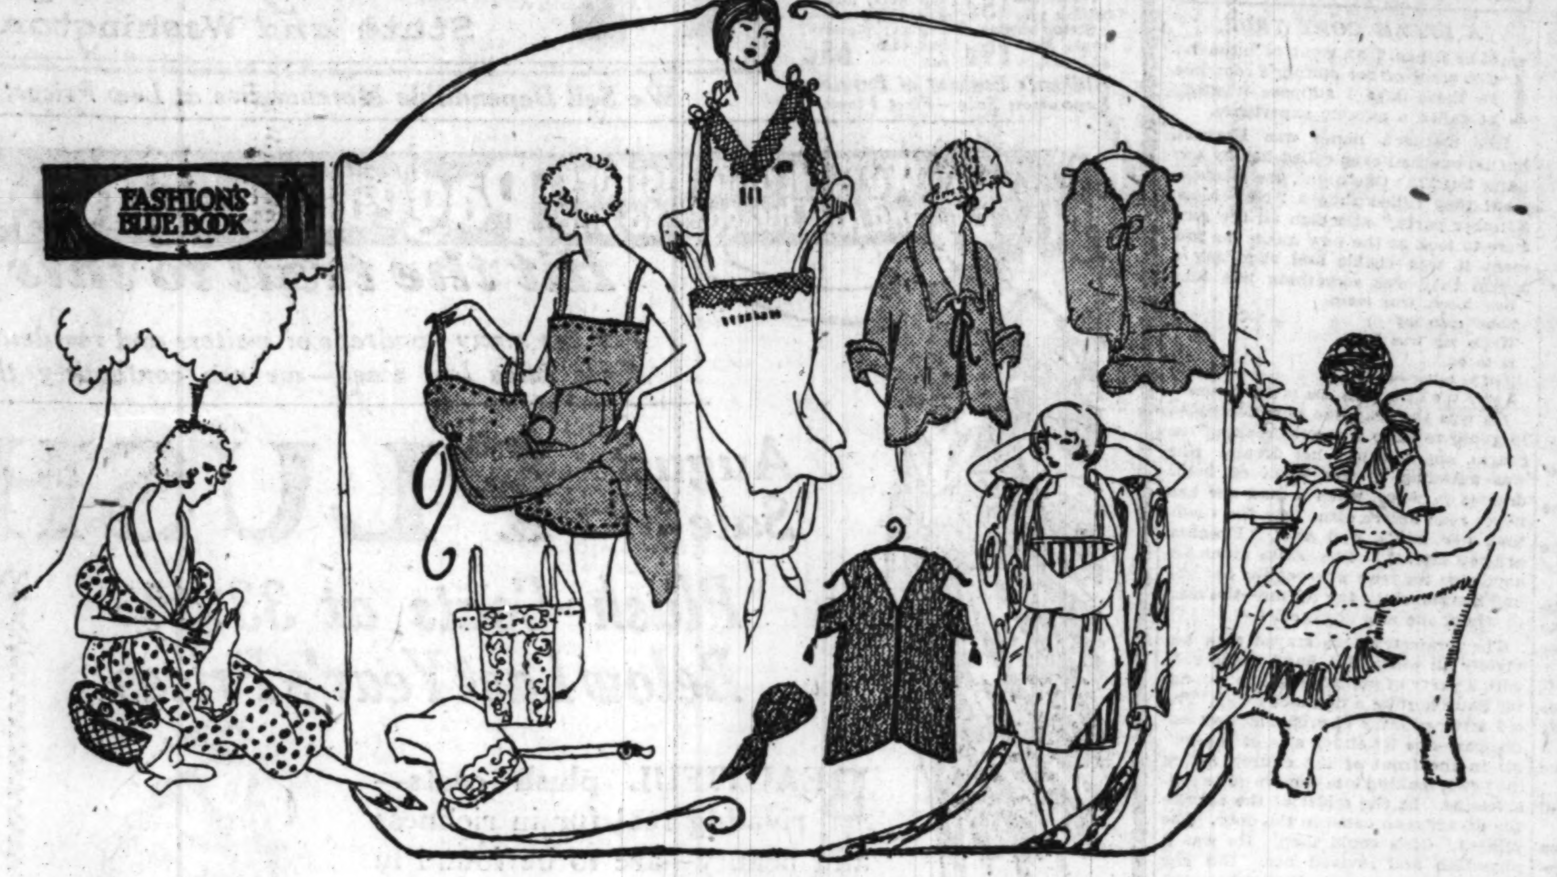
In looking over all the midsummer lingerie one is impressed by the slavishness of the models to the dress styles of the season. Gone are the good old days when a chemise or a nightgown could have a mind of its own, when we wore any kind of an old petticoat under our frocks. Conformity is the rule, and so we behold during the course of our review one garment after another echoing the bloused corsage and the fullness of skirt concentrated at the sides.

Nor is this all. Frequently the material of our undergarments is selected with as much direct reference to the gown as is the garage to our house. Nothing illustrates this tendency more forcefully than the present vogue of the princess slip. Although this garment has long been highly esteemed by our French sisters, we democratic Americans have had no more respect for the princess slip than we have had for the princess anybody else. This summer, however, the well dressed woman makes a point of such correct foundations, and this undergarment is carried out in crepe de chine radium, crepe meteor, handkerchief linen, and organdy to wear with costumes of corresponding material. What is more, the color of these slips is either matching or blending.

Another instance of the way in which our lingerie has been involved in the dress game is the special sports variety that has recently made its appearance. Chemises and camisoles and bloomers, long content to sit on the bleachers and watch the colors play, can no longer be regarded as innocent bystanders. No, indeed! Not when you find them carried out in crepe with applique flowers of gay color or else in men's silk shirting with a festive stripe running through their surface.

I know a woman who says she would be a better and a nobler woman if only she didn't have shoulder straps on her lingerie. These do often create a sort of fret in our souls, and it is pleasant to note the innovation for sports wear which renders them less irritating. Elastic shoulder straps have now been tried out on lingerie for sports wear, and these combine with elastic insets under the arms to give to the player of golf, hockey, or tennis a soothing sense of freedom joined with an even more soothing assurance that her straps are not slipping down over her arms.

As to negligees, these reflect even more than does lingerie proper the whims of the mood. Extremely late models are made, for instance, with the wide armhole and wide sleeve of the Jenny gown. Others attain grace through the popular back and sleeves noted in more formal costumes.



WE are all tempted to linger (ie) longer, Lucy, when we can linger as pleasantly as in the bed jacket of two layers of rose chiffon accompanied by nihtgown of the same fabric found at the upper right. Below this another jacket is conducted in black gold figured foulard bound with black. At lower right a white batiste step-in chemise of white batiste is trimmed with Val insertion, while opposing it, at the lower left, that popular lingerie material radium is developed into lace trimmed bloomers and camisole. The favored V-shaped neckline nightgown is represented in the upper center by a gown of pale pink handkerchief linen finished by white embroidery and by bands of white net. The chemise is made to match. Finally, at the upper left, a step-in chemise of rose color voile, bound in blue linen and trimmed with French dots of blue, is echoed in the nightgown.

Our August Sale of Furs

Offers the Newest Fur Modes at the Lowest Prices in Years

NEVER has our August Fur Sale had such a large response the initial week—but then, never before have we presented such a wealth of beautiful garments at prices so low. So discriminating and so fortunate were our purchases that you have your choice of the most luxurious furs, developed in the smartest fall and winter garments, at prices that are much lower than will prevail after this month.

All the new dictates of Fashion are evidenced in this wonderful collection—the Tuxedo front coat, the wrappy coat, the new straight line effects, handsome jewel girdles and exquisite linings. They are developed in the favored furs —Mole, Hudson Seal, Squirrel, Karakul, Mink, Stone Marten, Hudson Bay Sable, Blue Fox and Pointed Fox, Fitch, etc. Whatever your fancy in furs, you will find it here at a tremendous saving.

Furs purchased now will be held storage free until Nov. 1.

Three Noteworthy Specials

Stone Marten Chokers

One-Skin Scarfs

$36.00

One of the smartest fur chokers this season is the Natural Stone Marten Scarf. These one skin scarfs are truly wonderful values at $36.

Alaska Fox Scarfs

All popular shades

$60.00

One of our most opportune purchases is this group of Alaska Fox Scarfs—for the Fox Scarf is to be extremely popular this Fall. In all the desired shades. They are now only $60.00.

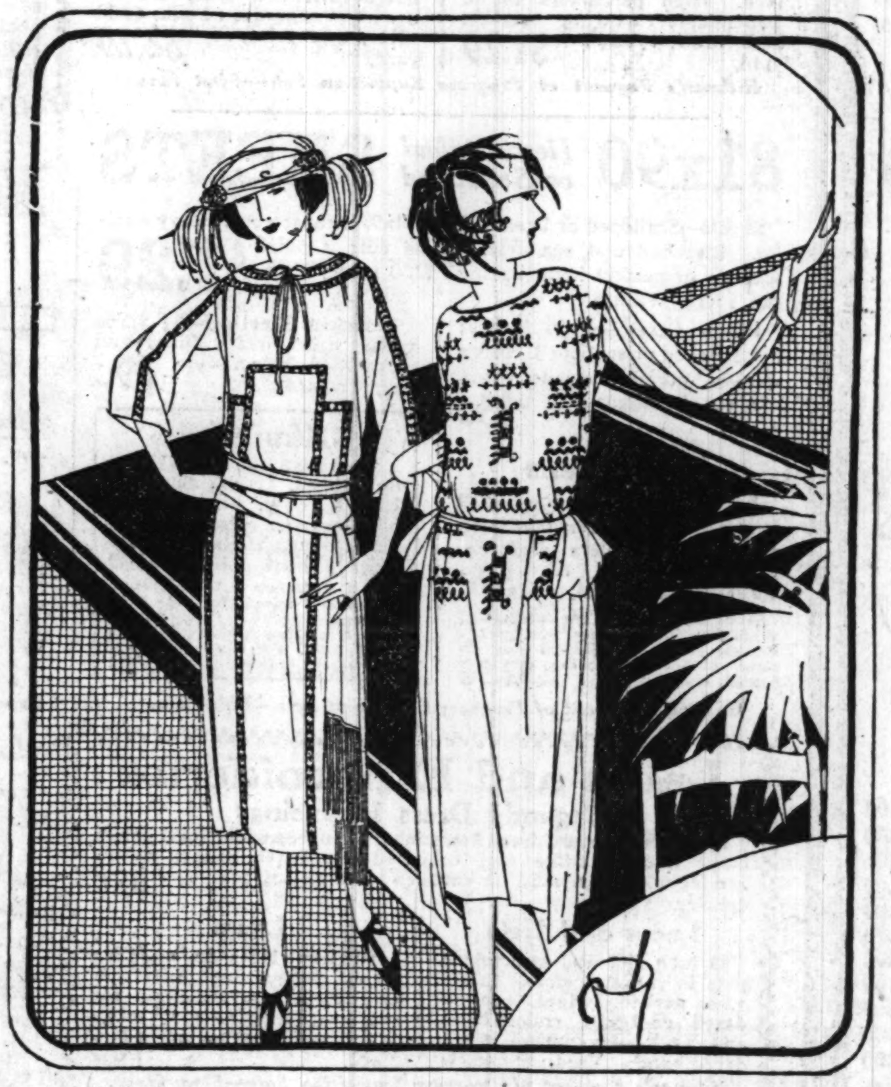
Hudson Seal Coats

36 Inches long—Combination Collars and Cuffs

$295.00

One of the best values of the August Sale is these smart Hudson Seal Coats. They are 36 inches long and have collars and cuffs of contrasting fur—Skunk, Squirrel or Beaver. Coats of the same quality would have sold last year for $550.

Fur Section—Fifth Floor.



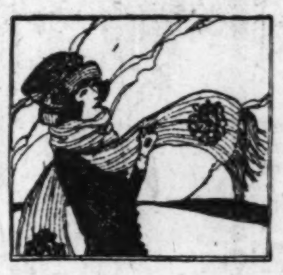
The New Autumn Frocks

Any color—just so it is black—seems to be the verdict of the Autumn frocks. Still adopting crepe as the favored material; they show numerous innovations in line and trimming.

Many attractive new dresses are arriving daily—and are specially featured at $45 to $85. These include models suitable for afternoon and daytime wear.

Simplicity is the charm of this smart Honey-du Crepe Frock. Widely sashed and with three-quarter length sleeves, a striking effect is obtained by an entire slip of contrasting color Canton Crepe.

Paris speaks with favor of Crepe Nusette, which lends itself fascinatingly in this lovely frock. Graceful side panels and soft silk embroidery of contrasting color rival the long crepe chiffon sleeves in smartness.



Something Different in Millinery

These new Sports Sets are one of Fashion's latest whims. This one consists of a smart white wool hat and scarf, richly embroidered in black chenille—a set that will dashingly complete your costume. The soft, high crowned hat has a wired brim which may be adjusted to one's fancy.

Handy Pocket Bag

There is much satisfaction in knowing that you have a really secret place in which to keep your coins—and that is the surprising feature of these new bags. They come in different styles and sizes—black pin seal, brown spider calf and black and brown plain leather—silk lined—$5.95.

Hosiery

For your white costume, for your black costume, for your every costume, Stevens' hosiery comes first in style features and durability. These items offer some special values.

Tricot Silk White Lace Hosiery in several attractive stripe patterns, per pair, $3.50.

Black and White Lace Hosiery in new Fall designs from leading manufacturers is now on display. $4.50 to $15.00 per pair.

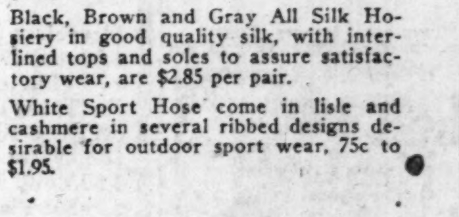
Black, Brown and Gray All Silk Hosiery in good quality silk, with interlined tops and soles to assure satisfactory wear, are $2.85 per pair.

White Sport Hose come in lisle and cashmere in several ribbed designs desirable for outdoor sport wear, 75c to $1.95.

Neckwear

A final touch to the costume is the result of a dainty collar or vest set and the new net guimpes with sleeves so essential to the sleeveless dress are here in numbers. Also a wide selection of vesting and banding in real lace patterns.

Net Guimpes, Special
$1.95 to $2.50
Organdy Collar and Cuffs
$1.75 to $4.50



Gift Suggestions

What could be more alluring to purchase than delightful toilet accessories such as rare perfumes in festive bottles and decorative incense burners? Below are quoted some characteristic items.

Imported Perfumes in fancy bottles and boxes, any of which would make a most acceptable gift. $1.00 to $32.50.

Fancy Silk Vanity Bags and Puff Holders. 65c to $6.00.

Oriental Incense Burners—bronze finish—complete with package of incense powder. 75c net. Other styles $1.25 to $10.50.

Love Lore

by DORIS BLAKE

Sweethearts should not have their pictures taken to-gether before marriage —

SUPERSTITION sayeth two sweethearts should never have their pictures taken together else they will never marry. But a lot of them have done it and seem to be living happily ever afterward.

It says again that a man and fiancée should not stand up together at a christening or they will never marry.

If two sisters marry two brothers, one of the couples will not live happily.

It is bad luck to keep writing your future husband's name before you have taken it on. You may never have it.

If you bump against a closed door, you will not be married for a year.

If you hear of the marriage of a friend, you should not exclaim you wish it had been you, or you will not marry.

It is unlucky to have to do your hair up twice when preparing for your wedding.

It is lucky for unrelated persons of the same name to marry.

If an old person is the last to say good-by to a bridal party, they may expect a long life.

Leave the parental home in haste and you come back in a short time.

It is bad luck for one or other of the contracting parties to go back after having once started to the place of the ceremony.

If you sit in the back seat on the way to be married, you will be second always in his affections.

Runaway marriages are rarely lucky.

Sign the marriage ceremony with a quill pen for luck.

To be married before sunset brings more luck than after.

The first one to cry at a wedding will be the next to marry.

Marriages on board ship are considered unlucky by seamen.

The postponement of a wedding is unlucky.

The first words spoken after marriage will come true.

The bridegroom should get to the home of the bride before the preacher.

The bride and groom should enter the house first and not with a third person.

It is a sign of prosperity and happiness if the sun shines in the door as the newly wedded pair enter.

The bride who first enters her home by the back door will be a drudge.

Change your place of abode the first year, and your life will be unsettled and wandering.

The style of a girl's home may be determined with flower petals, as "Big house, little house, brick house, or barn."

Her trousseau can be told this way: "Big box, little box, bandbox, or bundle." The last petal determining the answer.

Stumble on your wedding morn, and you'll be a widow before a year.

Ill on your wedding day, ill most of your life.

It is unlucky for the bride and groom to see each other before the ceremony.

It is bad luck to break a dish or glass on your wedding day.

Add the number of letters in the first given name of the bride and of the first given name of the groom together, and if the number is odd, he will die first; if even, the bride will die first.

Don't touch a dishrag on your wedding day, or you will be in for hard work all your life.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

IN THE DARKNESS.

DEAREST MAXWELL: Do you really not know that there are no evil goblins in the darkness? Because there are not. As a child, I used to be terribly afraid of everything that I could not see and touch. The nights were an endless succession of horrors to me. Dreadful shapes peopled the dusk; the shadows were black pits, out of which ghostly forms might leap at me.

And then, Maxwell, some one told me that night was the lovely, tender mother of day—a mother who drew her soft cloak across the sky and put out the big, glaring sun, so that all living things might rest for a little while in the haven of sleep. She lighted the tiny lamps of the stars to guide weary travelers who had lost their way; her breath was cool and sweet with the souls of unborn flowers; the touch of her hands was a caress. It was night which brought peace and forgetfulness into a weary world.

Since then I have loved the night, and when the wings of the dusk sweep slowly across the sky, somehow it seems to me that you draw closer to me, and that the soft clasp of the darkness is about us both. In the arms of night there is no room for goblins, dearest; no room for anything save beauty and quiet and love.

The apple tree is a froth of silver in the moonlight; a drift of petals shimmers on every fragrant breeze; the perfume is the soul of spring. Apple blossoms and the mating song of the oriole—and in the enchanted garden, our love—perfect and complete. Is it not enough—and so much more than one would have dared to dream, Maxwell?

With all my heart forever, SHEILA.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

A DREAM COME TRUE.

I HAVE heard an aunt of mine tell this story of her mother's romance. In these days I suppose it would be called a psychic experience.

Her mother's name was Frances, but no one had ever called her by any name but Sis. One night, she attended what they called then a "New Moon Slumber party," at which all the girls were to look at the new moon the moment it was visible and each say a charm that was something like this:

New moon, true moon
Show unto me
Whom my true lover
Is to be.
If it is to be ——,
I pray the Lord I see him in my dreams.

Sis was the only one who succeeded in going to sleep without breaking the charm, and this was her dream. She was standing in her room at home dressed in white when a man she had never seen before came into the room, took her hands and said, "Frances, are you afraid?" She awoke much annoyed, as the man was not the one she had mentioned in the rhyme—the man to whom she was engaged.

The stranger's face stayed with her vividly all week. On Sunday she rode with a party of young people to a country church quite a distance away. The old style country church had two entrances—one on either side of the pulpit in the front of the church facing the pews, making late comers quite conspicuous. In the midst of the service the dream man came in the door. She fainted. Girls could then. He was a physician and revived her. But she couldn't have known that when she fainted.

I have never remembered to ask what became of the other man, but the young doctor lost no time. She had never told him of the dream—she hadn't had time—but on their wedding day, when he came to lead her down the stairs, he took her hands and said, "Frances, are you afraid?"

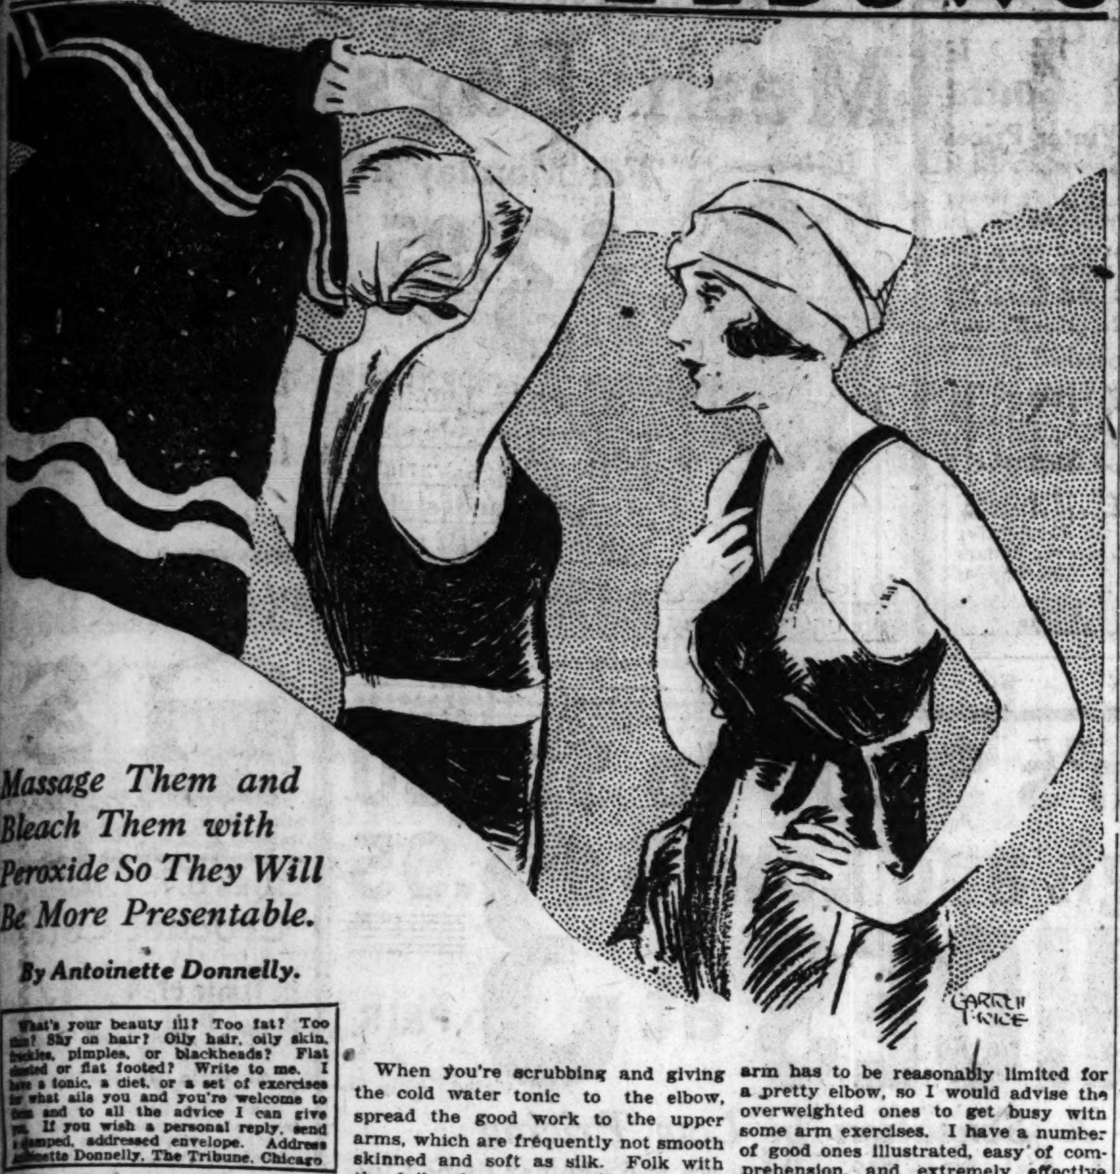
PRETTY ELBOWS



Massage Them and Bleach Them with Peroxide So They Will Be More Presentable.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

ARE yours dimpled darlings or hard, crusty, leathery old knuckle bones? Or didn't it occur to you that elbows were not like our innermost thoughts, for our own private reviews?

Like Socrates' story of Zeus, who put all humanity's faults in two bags, the faults of others in the bag in front of us and our own faults in the bag behind, so we see only the faults of others, it requires some neck craning to find the faults in our own elbows, but others detect them with the lifting of an eyelid, since they are like other well known features of considerable exposure.

Why Not Verses to an Elbow?

I don't remember running across any rhapsodies or sonnets addressed to my lady's elbows, although there may have been. Allee samee, they could be fixed up to inspire some one of our modernists to a lyric outburst if they were enticingly dimply and snowy white. The dimples would needs be a gift of nature, but the whiteness might be home brewn.

By nature of its occupation an elbow is in a position to carry off imprints that are of a character to darken its fair reputation. And by further virtue of its seeming inaccessibility to a wandering scrub brush a dark stain may further compromise its beauty character.

The Short Sleeve Exposure.

As we can't apply a beauty patch as a coverall, we'll have to find some means of presenting arms with elbows in smart condition. This summer's short sleeves will be followed by the sleeveless dress of the dancing party and followed again by next summer's short sleeves, ad infinitum. So it looks as if it is up to us to turn our elbow faults out front and begin a crusade.

If you happen to have been born with a nice roundness by nature, your elbow troubles will be reduced. It's the skinny armed girl who has the elbow troubles. There's no protecting tissue there. However, it's quite simple to keep them from a stained and leathery look at any rate.

Massage Before the Scrub.

After you're through putting your face through its nightly rejuvenating work save a dash of cold cream for the elbows. Massage them with the palm of the opposite hand and thus get the grime loosened and ready to be completely removed by the camel's hair brush and soap and hot water. Scrub with a vengeance and rinse in cold water. Wipe dry.

Then apply a fairly strong solution of peroxide of hydrogen with a sponge or piece of absorbent cotton. You can repeat this bleaching process in the morning, too, if you have time. A couple of weeks of the treatment will make them quite presentable.

Some elbows gather a kind of goose flesh about them that is disfiguring. But the soap and water treatment, followed by the cold ablution, will remedy that.

The Stepchildren of the Body.

If they are particularly rough when you are scrubbing them, put a little powdered pumice stone on the brush and remove the scaly skin.

The massage, which you can give at intervals during the day, just as frequently as you wish, if you are eager to get the elbows smoothed out, is done with a good cold cream. You have a remedy that in the majority of cases elbows have been the stepchildren of the body, pretty badly neglected, so to catch up they have to be pampered quite a bit.

When you're scrubbing and giving the cold water tonic to the elbow, spread the good work to the upper arms, which are frequently not smooth skinned and soft as silk. Folk with the daily plunge or cold shower habit usually have finer skin on the entire body than those whose bath habit is irregular. So, when you are doing reform on one part, why not extend the good to the entire skin of the body, and resolve now when the water is not too cold to be prohibitive to take your daily cold water portion?

Acquiring Dimpled Elbows.

The amount of averdupoise on the arm has to be reasonably limited for a pretty elbow, so I would advise the overweighted ones to get busy with some arm exercises. I have a number of good ones illustrated, easy of comprehension, and extremely effective if persisted in religiously.

The extra thin girl is another proposition. It is next to impossible to fatten her arms unless she goes in for a general fattening diet, and adds weight to her entire person. But she probably would feel lots better and look it for the gain of a few pounds. And if she wants dimpled elbows, that's what she'll have to do.

Beauty Answers

HIPPO: WHY IS IT THE HIPS and waist gather the fat quickest? Because the muscles least disturbed by muscular action give the heartiest welcome to the dis-Hon. Adipose. Your corsets prevent these muscles from normal activity. But here are three good exercises I want you to do morning and night for six weeks without any cheating, and you'll pull them down an inch or two. First: Stand with feet together, hands back of head. Bend from side to side as far as you can without moving lower part of body. Second: Rise on toes, stretch arms overhead, bend body at trunk, and try to touch finger tips to floor. Third: Stand erect, stretch arms out to side; now try to touch finger tips of right hand to toe of your left foot, keeping abdomen flat and knees stiff. Then reverse, touching toes of right foot with finger tips of left hand. Repeat each exercise ten times, gradually increasing. At the end of six weeks write to me again, report your loss in inches, and then I'll give you some harder ones that will take off an inch or two more. In the meantime cut your food ration down a third at each meal.

QUERIER: THERE HAS BEEN a doctrine preached for a long time against drinking water with meals, but medical men agree pretty well that a glass of water at meals is not harmful providing it is not used to chase unchewed food down. The food should be well chewed and swallowed before the water is taken. Some authorities agree that water helps the food to digest. A glass of cool water is a stimulant for the stomach and, if taken a short time before the meal, starts the gastric juice flowing and provides an appetite. Iced water is condemned, however, for it takes about twenty minutes for the normal stomach to raise the temperature of a glass of iced water to the body level. Consequently it should be cool water, not iced, that should be drunk to the amount of from six to eight glasses a day. It helps the kidneys and prevents constipation.

KATE: YOU CAN WASH THE powder puffs quite successfully in warm soapy water and rinse in fresh water that is still a little soapy. The soapy rinse preserves the fluff. There's no other way of keeping them clean but by washing them frequently. We are all guilty of a dirty puff now and then, but some of us are worse than others, and it's an inexcusable thing, really, when soap and water are cheap.

How to Use the Patterns

NEVER has the kimono pattern for waists been more in evidence than this summer; and pattern No. 1079 shows a pretty and simple design, with the kimono waist and a two piece, straight gathered skirt. This style waist is especially becoming to a slender figure, and needs a perfectly straight back—otherwise it would be better to use a set in sleeve. The kimono waist also needs to be generously loose where the armhole would naturally come in another style pattern.

The skirt of this pattern should be seamed together, and the hem put in the bottom and the three tucks laid in the upper half of the skirt before getting the length. Compare your length measures in front and back and over the hips with those of the pattern, making any needed slight alteration before gathering across the top. In that way you will avoid having to do your work over in case your measures do not entirely agree with those of the pattern.

One of the summer wash materials would be ideal for this dress, for even though the summer is surely passing, I imagine most every woman keeps pretty wash dresses on hand to wear all through the year.

There are lovely white materials—voiles, plain or figured—and in the colors there are percales, chambrays, ginghams, and linens in beautiful colors, as well as plaids, checks, and conventional designs, so there is surely enough of a variety to suit every requirement.

A small checked or plain material would make the body of the waist and the skirt, and the vest could be of the same material in white or a contrasting color; or organdie could be used —choosing some color instead of white if you prefer.

The collar, ending as it does in tabs that end in points below the belt, and buttoning to the belt, is an attractive feature. An extra little piece of the collar material had better be laid in between the two thicknesses of the collar where the buttonholes are to be worked, to make the collar stronger there.

No. 1078 is a good pattern for a suit for a boy, and mothers save many a good dollar by making these clothes as long as they can. Often there are clothes that grown people can no longer wear that can be cleaned well and cut over into serviceable and good looking trousers for the young lad. The pattern gives careful directions for laying the pattern on the material, for cutting and putting together, and there should not be any trouble in making either trousers or shirt.

It is best to shrink the shirt material before cutting into it—and do it thoroughly. Open the material well and have enough boiling water to cover it entirely, allowing it to remain until the water is cool enough to put the hands in comfortably. Do not wring it more than you can help and hang up evenly on a line where it won't hurt anything to have the water drip, and allow it to dry, ironing it smooth when it is dry enough to work easily without any extra sprinkling.

No. 1099 is a good pattern for a dress to be worn during the first cool days or damp, rainy ones. Challis, lightweight serge, tricotine, or some pretty silk would make up attractively. If the material is plain, embroidery in contrasting colors would make effective trimming.

The waist is a kimono one and the skirt a one piece, straight gathered pattern, and for size 36 the lower edge measures about 1⅝ yards at the bottom. The waist has surplice fronts, extending into sash ends, which are carried around and tied in the back.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"An association of young people, all having some form of handicap, were promised the use of a camp suitable to their needs for the latter part of August. The money to cover the expense of each participant in the outing had been collected, when the association was notified that the camp would not be available. Owing to the lateness in the season it is difficult to find another suitable place, and most of those concerned are likely to be deprived of their vacation altogether.

"If a suitable site could be secured, camp equipment could probably be borrowed or rented, and the outing need not be abandoned. Is there among your readers a country-place owner who would give the use of a part of his grounds? Or some organization, having a camp, that would extend the courtesy of its use for two or three weeks from the middle of August? The members of this association are mostly self supporting and the association would undertake to pay all expenses, leave the grounds as they found them, and conduct the camp in an orderly manner.

"A place near a lake would be desirable, as many of the young people swim and row; but shallow water near the shore would be necessary. The association takes a chaperon and a cook, and will hire the labor necessary to keep the grounds in good order. It is ready to show financial responsibility to carry out the arrangements indicated. This is a case requiring prompt action.

"I am presenting this matter to you, Friend in Need, because of my confidence in your sympathy and experience in your efficiency. I have never known any agency that accomplished so much good in so simple and effective a manner. The best of it is that there is nothing in the way your work is done to wound the pride or hurt the sensibilities of the most sensitive, while those who love to do good in secret have their opportunity too. Long life to you, and continued success to your beautiful work. "H. H."

I hope with all my heart that this apepal made by H. H. in behalf of the handicapped young people, will meet the attention of someone who can solve the problem of their outing for them.

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS.

MARION and Dorothy have been away almost a week now. They are spending their vacations together, and from the single brief report I've had they are evidently making the most of their holidays.

Since the girls have been away the tête-à-tête chats Ann and I have been having over our lunch have naturally developed a personal and confidential angle that has left our respective jobs and their locale in the background. So for a topic that might be of general interest to business girls I'll have to go back a week and report as accurately as I can two contrasting stories Marion told us the last day she and Dorothy had lunch with us.

It's necessary to summarize Marion's stories because she related them rather disjointedly between moments of abstraction in which she wondered aloud whether she had everything she needed for the morning trip or whether she wasn't leaving undone some important part of her work.

Miss Jones had been with the firm that employed Marion for three years. She had worked pretty faithfully during that time, and as she developed a genuine ability which was recognized by her superiors, she steadily advanced in salary and was promoted from one position to another until she became numbered among the three or four women in line for an executive position.

Then one day, this was about two months ago Miss Jones announced to her boss that she had accepted a position with a rival firm and that she was to start on the new job in the morning. She was leaving her work in good condition, she informed him; it was all up to date, and she could coach the girl who was to take her place in a couple of hours.

Nothing was said about her leaving like that without any notice, and when she said good-by that night she was on friendly enough terms with everybody. She even came in about two weeks later to pay a little friendly visit to the people in the department. Marion didn't see her at that time, nor, in fact, did she hear anything further about her until she came in one day last week to tell Marion her tale of woe and ask her advice.

It seems the new job didn't work out very well. That is, it wasn't as good as it looked from the outside. The promised raise didn't materialize when due, and in other respects it was disappointing. After a two months' trial Miss Jones decided that she was through with it and would go back to her other job.

She reckoned, however, without her former employers, for when she returned ready to step into the old job she was told that there wasn't a place for her. Since she had left them without a moment's notice she couldn't, of course, expect to be taken back. She wasn't to be relied upon.

She was really astonished over this decision. Hadn't she made a slave of herself for three years, working overtime without a word of complaint whenever they wanted her to, and wasn't she entitled to some little consideration for her past services, she indignantly demanded of Marion? Finally, when she had cooled down a bit, she asked Marion what she ought to do about it. The only thing Marion could honestly tell her to do was to make up her mind to look for another job and to treat her next employers, when she found the job, with a little of the consideration that she took for granted was her right from them.

Marion's other story was about a friend of hers for whom, after a great deal of maneuvering and letter writing, she finally succeeded in obtaining an interview with the head of a highly endowed charitable organization with reference to a position on his staff. Marcia had taken a course in sociology at the university, but had never had any practical experience in social service work. She had taught school for a while, but as she found this work too confining and uncongenial, she posted her friends to look out for a job for her along social service lines.

The position in question involved just the sort of work that Marcia had decided she was fitted for and that Marion believed she could handle competently. But when it came to being interviewed, Marcia simply talked herself out of the job.

Instead of emphasizing her college training and the belief that she was naturally adapted to work of that sort, she began by enumerating every misgiving she felt about her qualifications and ability to handle the work. Of course, she didn't get the job and was terribly depressed by her failure. But she got no sympathy from Marion.

A certain amount of self-confidence is essential if a person is to succeed in business or in anything else in life.

38th August sale of furs—"the" season's success

—and a merited one, for women are profiting through our early, careful planning. Months ago we bought the choicest products of an undepleted fur market, at that market's minimum quotations. With the "fur season" far in advance, we had regal coats and wraps exquisitely tailored by the most expert of furriers—and unhurriedly. Fur salon, fifth floor.

Now in this famed annual you may select the authentic furs of fall and winter—at prices very much lower than will prevail later on.

A—Scotch mole wrap—"the very latest"

August sale $595 Model sketched —of superior mole, with standing collar and 14-in. deep border of dyed squirrel. The lining is gorgeous.

B—Wrap of Persian lamb, in novel straight line, at $675

Select pelt with sleeves and long lined collar and cuffs of Japanese sable. Supremely serviceable.

C—Coat of Hudson seal, with Kolinsky at $745

This has blouse back with cord girdle, fancy border cuffs and square chin collar of Kolinsky.

The skins perfectly matched: workmanship "of a rarity"

—and quality, that vital consideration in furs, is the sort you will acclaim "premier."

August sale "the" time in which to purchase furs for in many models there is but one of a kind which may be unavailable later at any price.

Furs will be remodeled during the August sale, in the 1921-22 fashions, for less than usual charges. Furs bought in the August sale will be charged, if so desired, on November bills, and stored free of charge. If you have no charge account, a deposit will hold your purchase until November 1.

Printed Shantung silks

Mr. Brown was hoeing in his vegetable garden when he happened to notice his daughter and another girl in the flower garden. "Bet," he yelled, "don't step on those small aster plants."

"I am eighteen inches from them," responded Bet.

At supper that night Mr. Brown related the incident to his wife, and then, turning to Bet, he said: "How long is eighteen inches?"

"As long as my doll," came the reply without hesitation. The answer was correct.

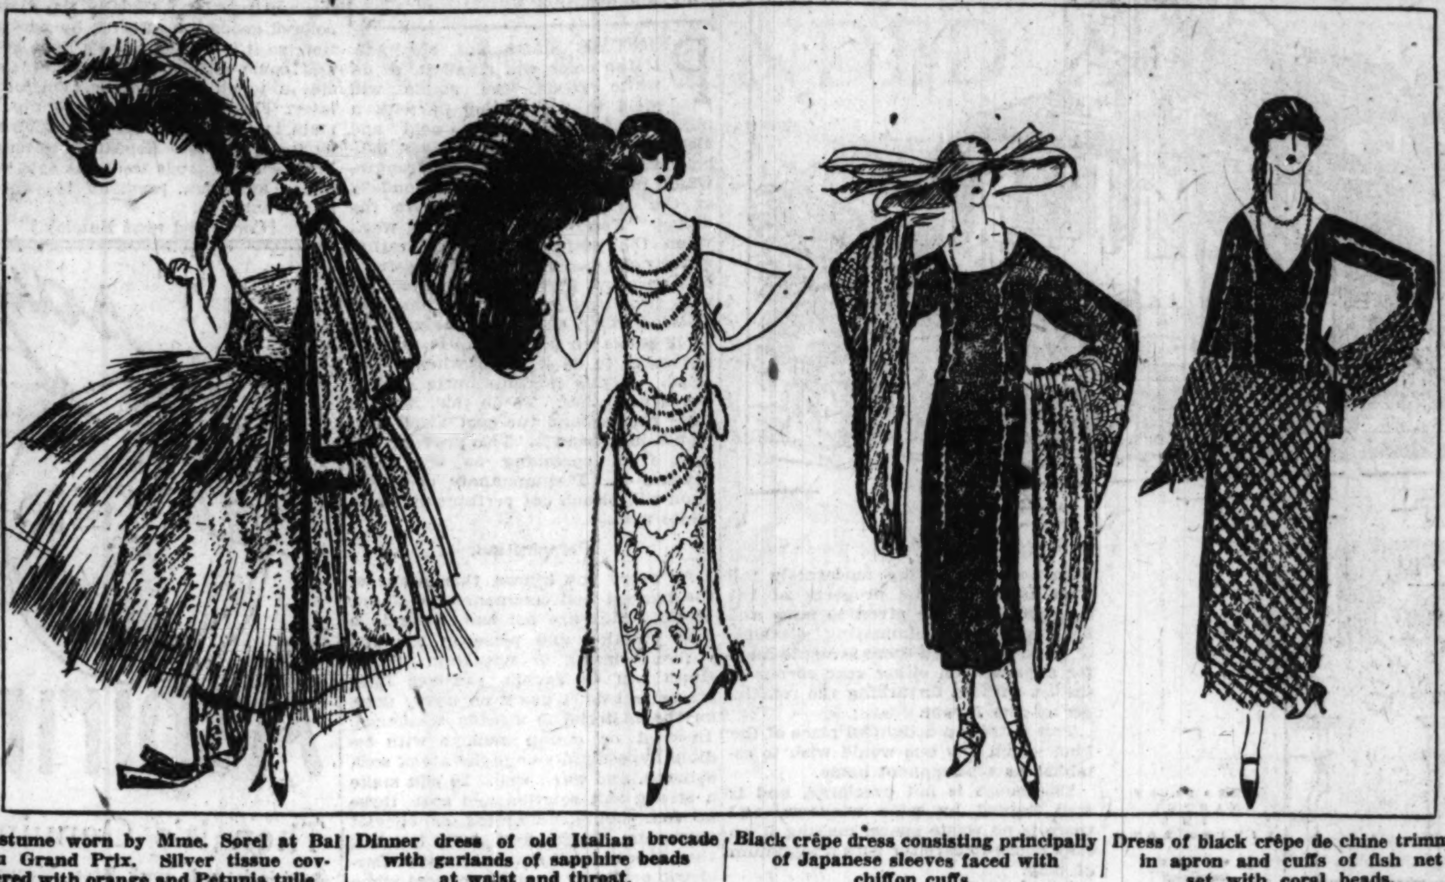
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

MME. SOREL'S BALL DRESS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]



Castume worn by Mme. Sorel at Bal du Grand Prix. Silver tissue covered with orange and Petunia tulle. | Dinner dress of old Italian brocade with garlands of sapphire beads at waist and throat. | Black crêpe dress consisting principally of Japanese sleeves faced with chiffon cuffs. | Dress of black crêpe de chine trimmed in apron and cuffs of fish net set with coral beads.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—What do you suppose I saw a hat trimmed in this morning? There was only one blessed thing on it, and that was in the back, right where your hair comes, and it was a tortoise shell comb.

Miss Cornelia Skinner threw up her hands for joy, being now in possession of some ten or twelve of the highest, fanciest ones outside of Spain. The way they happen to be outside of Spain is that she brought them out about a week ago, when she and her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Skinner, returned from their tour of color collecting for the new drama to be presented this fall.

There was only one trouble in the world about the combs, and that was she didn't think any Americans would wear them. She had got them for her college friends, and her father, being of that unfortunate sex that always discourages all progress, said every time he saw them: "No American girl will wear a comb like that." If they won't, they can use them as hat trimmings, and the world is saved.

I also saw this morning a little green lizard, made of I know not what, in a crawling position on a bag. A turtle is apparently living up to his reputation on another bag and coming in at the head of the race, as he maintains a position much nearer the clasp than the lizard has attained on his territory.

Mrs. Otis Skinner has been trying to tell me about a cape that one of our American friends bought out of Lewis' the other day for about a million dollars that consisted of a couple of bolts of ribbon—black alternating with white—I believe, in long, fringelike streamers from a round yoke of the ribbon interlaced like a cane bottomed chair. The streamers are held gently at the waist line, and after that are left to fly. It must look awfully pretty over a white dress. A useful costume that, I should think, for a Lake Forest horse show—do you have them still? Mrs. Granville Miller bought it; daughter-in-law of Henry Miller.

But to get down to everyday practicabilities, such as the ball following the Grand Prix races. It was a costume affair, the gayest of anything—I was going to say, since Babylon fell. What I meant was since the war. You couldn't go, if you were a lady, unless you wore something in fuchsia color or magenta, and not having that in your wardrobe regular, you had to stop what you were doing and lay out about a million dollars to get something.

It wasn't altogether extravagant in the eyes of the rich to do so, because, of course, this creation of the best skill and art of Paris could be dyed for motoring.

Anyway, here is the simple thing which Mme. Sorel, most spectacular of French actresses, whipped up for the occasion. It consisted of a coat of silver tissue and a huge skirt also of silver tissue, spraying from which were flags of tulle in orange and petunia colors. The coat was lined with a splash of magenta chiffon. The helmet was of silver, stuck with all the lengths and shadings of ostrich plumes.

Descending in an anti-climax, we arrive at a dinner dress of some one whom the artist describes as "one of the most attractive of the younger countesses." It is of old Italian brocade, and it goes back to the middle ages not only for the inspiration of its material but its line also. As you can see, it is the straight silhouette which we have long called moyen age. To resort once again to the phraseology of the artist, it has a "single accent of decoration." This consists of garlands of sapphire beads at neck and waist. The younger countess carries a huge ostrich feather fan of the color known to the French as "lie de vin," which means dregs of wine.

We are working our way gradually to the practical. Pretty soon we shall arrive at something that can be worn. Here is a gown consisting almost entirely of sleeves. They are Japanese in line, and French in embroidery. It is in black silk and jet. The sleeves terminate in deep cuffs of chiffon. As a complete anti-climax to such spectacular sleeves, the simple chemise dress which carries them has a narrow, inconspicuous belt of black patent leather. The material is black crêpe Marocain, topped with a wide, flat hat of yellow organdie, with a wide, flat airplane of a bow across the back. A woman was seen wearing this dress at a smart art exhibition.

The artist says that the following dress has an amusing sleeve. The value of it and the sleeves to me is that they illustrate a present and growing style for ornamentation set on more or less extraneously, and as if they had run out of ideas and had to make a showing.

The trimming in this case is of fish net studded with red coral beads. The dress proper is of black crêpe de chine, made perfectly plain except for these two excursions into ornamentation, with an undecorated back and a V shaped neck. That is to say, the skirt is plain except for an ample amount of fullness, and this is by way of pointing a finger to the fact that all autumn skirts stand a show to be gathered fuller.

The weight of the apron is an important feature in making for its attractiveness. The hat accompanying the dress is of black crêpe, decorated with a fringe of the beads.

Got the Coffee.

Although the Hayes family is wealthy and lives in a fashionable neighborhood of the town, Mr. Hayes is addicted to wearing old clothes.

Early one morning he and his wife arose and in the preparation of breakfast the discovery was made that they had no coffee in the house.

Seeing a light in the next house but not knowing that their neighbors had a new maid, Mr. Hayes went over to borrow some coffee.

When he asked the maid for a little coffee for breakfast, she told him she had not yet made any and that he would have to wait until she did. Knowing that she mistook him for a tramp and enjoying the joke, he told her to give him a little fresh coffee and he could boil it on the fire he had back of the garage. Keeping her eye on him to see that he did not pick up anything, she procured the coffee, and he went away, as she thought, tickled to pieces to get a little coffee.

Prejudiced.

I was a student at a certain university which had a most unpopular dean. At the dining table in the girls' dormitory was an exceptionally well bred and cultured girl, whose friendship I was desirous of securing, but who always baffled me by her aloofness. By way of an entering wedge to getting acquainted, I attempted to interest her in a personal grievance I held toward the dean. To my huge delight she seemed inordinately interested, though she said little. So pleased was I to have found a subject which would even attract her attention that I enumerated the various atrocities attributed to him; I ridiculed his mannerisms; and by way of a grand finale, I voiced the imaginary indignation of the entire student body with the grossest of exaggerations. She, my idol, listened but remained silent.

By way of encouraging her to come down from her pedestal and join in the general condemnation of our executive, I inquired: "And what do you think of the 'Old Bear,' Miss Bart?"

Imagine my embarrassment when, with a steely glint in her eyes, and her lips firmly set, she replied in a cold voice: "Cousin Frank has always been lovely to me."
M. D. B.

Solemn as Could Be.

When quite young I was called to testify in a lawsuit. I never had been in a courtroom before.

When I was called to the witness stand to give my testimony the officer whose duty it was to administer the oath began: "Raise your right hand." Then, "Do you swear to tell the truth and nothing but the truth?"

I raised my right hand and repeated it after him as solemnly as could be:

"Raise your right hand, do you swear to tell the truth and nothing but the truth?"

The jurors wiggled in their seats, the court acted as though they were witnessing the movies, and the judge pounded his desk with the gavel.

If it hadn't have been for the cold look that our lawyer gave me I might be wondering what they were laughing at yet.
D. E. G.

Curious.

One summer evening, while out for a stroll with my sister and friend, we saw a wedding party about to alight in front of a church we were passing.

My husband exclaimed, "O, that is the Upton wedding; let's go in!"

None of us was familiar with the ceremonies of a formal occasion, and in our innocence we thought we could quietly slip into one of the back seats of the church.

I entered first, and a regular Beau Brummel of an usher stepped forward and offered me his arm, which I perforce took, and was led down the aisle, well up in front. My sister and friend followed, vainly trying to suppress audible titters.

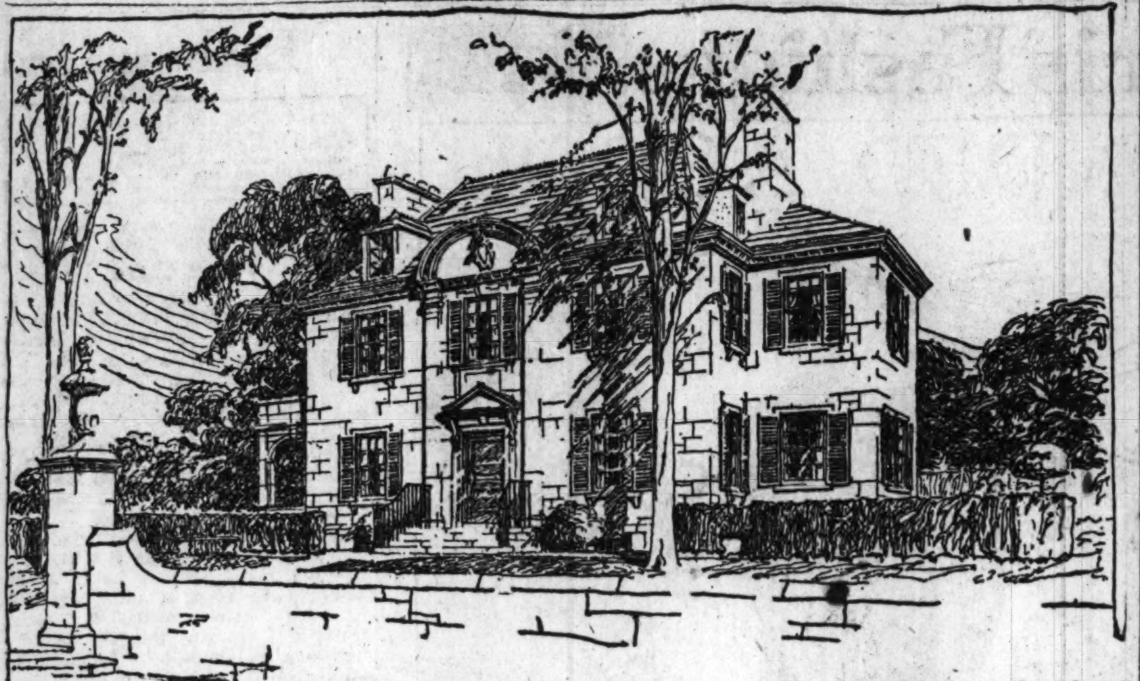
Limestone Offers Attractive Exterior for American Homes at Moderate Cost

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to house building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



THE question that is often asked, "What style is that house?" as applied to some of the best and most livable houses, is frequently found difficult to answer.

Houses are not always stylistic in the style period sense, although they may have a distinctive style that is all their own and are entirely free from any obvious effort at originality.

These remarks may be applied to the house illustrated, which is not colonial, though possessing some characteristic colonial details and is not English, though unquestionably related closely to certain English types.

It is just a sensible American home. There is nothing fussy about the design and there is no meaningless ornamentation of the plain sawed stone exterior. Apart from entrance feature and walls of loggia porch, the walls are perfectly plain but are made interesting by the use of a vari-textured limestone. And the proportions of the building are so good that nothing further is necessary in order to give the house a most refined, pleasing and cultured homelike character. Any one who instinctively enjoys a semi-formal balance and symmetrical propostions will appreciate this design.

The stone for these walls is not of the ordinary uniform sort but of the fine and rougher grades mixed, some of the coarser stone being sawed across the grain to give the maximum range of surface texture and a very few of the stones are hand tooled to further accent the vari-textured surface.

A facing of rough sawed Indiana limestone of this character backed up with load bearing hollow tile gives a most economical form of permanently beautiful masonry wall construction. Such a wall is entirely different from all ordinary walls and will age beautifully.

Rather wide sash windows, divided into fairly large panes and with the frames and shutter blinds painted a sage green, further assist in giving the house an interesting character.

The roof is of a rough greenish gray slate laid in a sowemhat irregular manner. The brown oak panelled main entrance door, the iron railings at sides of entrance porch painted a dull dark green and the buff fire clay chimney pots surmounting the broad stone chimneys give further touches of color that add to the effect, the whole color scheme of exterior blending beautifully with the garden setting.

The main portion of the house, not including porch and kitchen wing, measures 29 feet by 40 feet. This house is one that is either suitable for a comparatively small plot in outlaying residence sections of a city, or for a larger plot in the suburbs, and is shown located on a lot 100 feet wide by about 160 feet deep with spacious lawn in front and ample secluded garden in rear.

There is a paved terrace on level with the lawn, across the entire front of the house enclosed on ends by the clipped privet hedge and delightfully shaded by the two fine trees. Two carved stone garden seats are placed at the ends of this terrace.

The central entrance at the rear of the stair hall just a few steps below the main floor level opens on to a lawn or grass terrace enclosed for the sake of privacy with a rather tall hedge. Ample shade is provided by two well placed trees.

From this terrace a semi-circular flight of three stone steps lead up to a charming little formal flower garden having gravel walks and planted with old fashioned flowers. In rear of garden opposite to steps is placed a semi-circular carved stone garden seat.

The hedge which incloses this little garden also flanks the cross walk leading to pergolias placed at each side of property. The pergola or kitchen side of the house serves as a grape arbor and on the living room side is covered with honeysuckle and climbing roses.

The back of the property is planted with a row of bushy moderately tall fruit trees and the property at the sides of the house given to lawn and shrubbery. By eliminating a couple of these fruit trees there is ample room for a garage on either rear corner of the lot without disturbing the remainder of the layout.

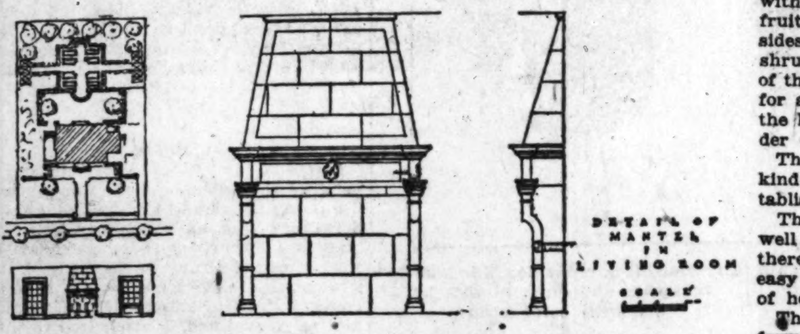
This is truly a delightful place of the kind which any one would wish to establish as a permanent home.

The house is not overlarge, and is well lighted by wide windows, and there is no waste space, making it an easy house to care for with a minimum of help.

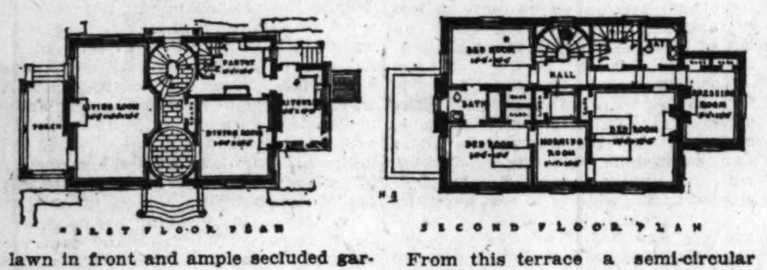
The front entrance opens on a rather formal eliptically shaped hall connected by wide passage with eliptical stair hall at the rear, all floored with stone. On the left is a large living room lighted by unobstructed windows on three sides, and having a French window opening onto the loggia porch, which is placed to catch the prevailing breeze, and which could be readily inclosed as a sun room in winter. There is a recess for a piano in the living room opposite to the hooded limestone fireplace of Italian design.

To the right of the entrance hall is an ample sized dining room, connecting with a spacious pantry, but so arranged that it, also, is almost directly connected to the kitchen and kitchen entrance. The kitchen is well lighted and cross ventilated, having three outside walls and the entire service portion, although roomy, arranged to save steps.

A circular stair leads to the second story which is excellently planned, containing a large main bedroom connected in suite with a sitting room, dressing room and private bath and two other bedrooms with connecting bath. Ample closets are also provided.



DESIGN FOR A DETACHED RESIDENCE OF INDIANA LIMESTONE



PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE

IRONING BOARD COVERS.

AMONG the many pieces of work that fall to the housewife is keeping her ironing board covers clean and well put on. Most women, I imagine, use the long board that comes attached to a stand that can be folded against the board when not in use. And many women use pieces of old sheets, more or less clumsily tacked or pinned on.

And doubtless many times these covers are allowed to remain until they are rather disreputable, because it is such a nuisance to take tacks out, and put fresh muslin on.

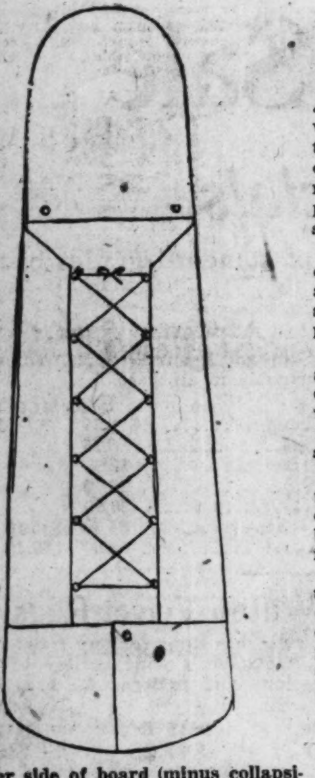
Ironing board covers that can be slipped on and off quite easily are on sale in stores, but if a woman likes to do these various things she will not mind including the making of several covers in her list.

Heavy unbleached muslin is the thing to buy, and if it is going to be of service after it is laundered, it will be best to shrink it well before making up.

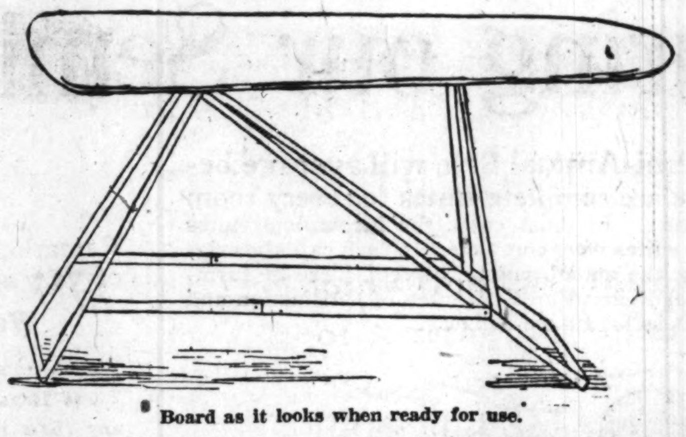
Set the ironing board up and lay the length of muslin on it straight the entire length, allowing it to come enough over the edge at the widest part to cover the depth or thickness—about one inch. Then, cut it like the diagram. You will see that it is cut to fit around the widest point to a depth of six inches. From that point it is cut straight out for, say, five inches, and then straight down to within twelve inches of the opposite end. From there on it is cut to fit the end of the board, allowing the one inch margin on both sides the same as at the opposite end.

The long ends of the cloth are hemmed and a piece cut exactly like the narrow end, making it twelve or a little more inches long. For the wide end two lengths of material about six inches deep and wide enough to lap at the middle one inch after a narrow hem is put in are cut to fit. These pieces are hemmed down the middle and across the ends, then basted to the cover and stitched in a narrow seam; then turned to the right side. At the narrow end the piece is hemmed across the bottom and then basted and stitched on and turned to the right side. Small rings are sewed at two inch intervals down each long length of the cover.

To put the cover on, slip it over the narrow end first, then over the wide, and lace the sides together, using a corset lace. A couple of thumb tacks will hold the ends in place, and the result will be found to be worth the trouble. It is a good idea to keep two of these covers on hand at a time.



Under side of board (minus collapsible frame) with cover fitted on. Rings and thumb tacks hold it firmly.



Board as it looks when ready for use.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Rather a Nice Habit.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18. I know quite a few young men. Now, Miss Blake, what I want to know is this: I have a bad habit of blushing when speaking to these young men and, with your kind advice, I would like to know how to break myself of this habit. FLO."

Blushing is a rather nice habit, Flo, these days when so many girls of 18 are too possessed and bored women of the world. However, if it embarrasses you, the way to control it is to keep your mind entirely off yourself and on the other person when you meet and chat.

Rather Late to Open Fire.

"Dear Miss Blake: I know two fellows who live in the same street as myself. Two years ago these same two fellows and I were friendly, but we had a disagreement. I don't really know what it was about, but am writing to you to ask you how to make up. You may wonder why I have waited two years to do so, but I have only just got the nerve. MISS V. D."

It would strike them as amusing if you were to open up fire now. I think, instead of writing, I would await an opportunity of running into them on the street, and speak to them as though nothing had ever happened.

Guardian's Consent Necessary.

"Dear Miss Blake: This is the first time I have ever written you. I wanted to ask you if a girl 18 years could get married without the consent of her guardian if her parents are not living. I will appreciate your kindness in answering this through your column. ANXIOUS."

No, she cannot. Twenty-one is the legal age for girls in most states in this country.

The Magnetism of Complexion

Why the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Has Such an Influence That It Clears Skin of Pimples.

It is generally admitted that the laxative action of calcium sulphide is one of the best influences to clear the skin. But not until Stuart's Calcium Wafers were introduced was this fact so generally manifest.

Their action in the bowels and liver is so prompt that the blood is cleansed of those impurities that show in the skin in the form of pimples.

The skin thus influenced by these wonderful Stuart's Calcium Wafers clears of those little eruptions, and firm skin shows with the health that protects from wind and weather.

These wafers contain no poisonous drug of any kind and soon overcome bad breath and the dull, stupid feeling that results from constipation. Mild in action.

No matter how hard you have tried to make your skin beautiful, Stuart's Calcium Wafers should work wonders with it. Rash and a muddy "filled-up" skin texture all give way to a more lovely complexion.

You can get Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 60 cents a box, and you will be positively delighted with their wonderful laxative and beauifying influence.

DEL-A-TONE

Others see you raise your arms 100 times a day.
Are you guilty of an indelicacy of toilet so common among women?

What Many Women Do Not Realize

So many women do not realize that this season's thin waists and low gowns have made necessary a precaution in toilet.

Heretofore a growth of hair on the underarm has gone almost unnoticed. It has been kept out of sight by cumbersome dress shields.

But now the underarm is plainly seen. It is exposed every time the arms are raised—and we do raise our arms unconsciously very often.

It is delightfully easy to remove this unsightly growth and leave the soft curves of the underarm white and smooth, adding immeasurably to the attractiveness of pretty arms and shoulders. The secret lies in Delatone.

Delatone is one of the oldest depilatories and the most widely used among fashionable women. It will remove hair from the neck, face and underarms—surely, quickly and safely.

Beauty specialists have used Delatone for years because it leaves the skin naturally clear, firm and smooth without the slightest discoloration.

Delatone comes in neat little airtight jars. This enables you to mix it fresh when wanted. Money back if not satisfied.

Dry Cleaning at Home

By Alma Harding.

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the fifteenth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

PERFUME stains are obstinate. If the color will stand it, or on white goods, the stains will yield to hot alcohol or with a mixture of warm acetic acid and alcohol. Sometimes a continued dabbing with peroxide of special strength, which must be asked for particularly at the drug store, will remove the stains. For white cotton or wool, when the perfume has been rather generously daubed all over the front of a garment, fill an ordinary atomiser with two-thirds peroxide and one-third distilled water, and spray the garment as it hangs on a hanger. It may be necessary to do it again when it has dried. If this mixture hurts colored goods use ether. To do this, make a little ring around the spot about one-eighth inch from it. This prevents the spot from spreading as the ether touches it. Permanganate of potassium will bleach out perfume stains in white wool.

Perspiration.

As every one knows, this is one of the hardest and commonest of stains. If the stains are not bad, wash in a soap solution and place in the sun without rinsing or wringing. Sometimes eau de Javelle removes light stains, but don't use it on heavy ones, as the material is already weakened. In wool or cotton remove with sodium hyposulphite or perborate of soda solution, and wash well. In silk make a strong salt solution and soak three or four hours. Worsted or cheviot garments: Clean first with benzine; then sponge with soap and water. Saccharic acid may be used on wool when the spot has been cleaned as thoroughly as possible with a soap solution. Rinse well after the acid. An effective mixture to keep on hand is one part ammonia, three parts alcohol, and three parts ether. As perspiration weakens the parts stained, greatest care must be taken in the brushing and rubbing. Usually the dyes in colored goods are affected by perspiration, so it is well to have a little brush and some oil paint dissolved in benzine to touch up the areas. One of the latest French methods is to dip the stain in a salt and water solution and let it dry slowly. Repeat if necessary. With colored goods treat the spot with dilute ammonia previous to dipping in the solution.

FEEDING CROWDS OF PEOPLE.

FROM half way across the continent women have written to me for advice in reference to opening and conducting a tearoom or restaurant or cafeteria or delicatessen, or how to go about some form of catering to the eating public. An increasing number of inquiries of this sort has come in.

I am no authority on this subject. In fact, I am more of a Job's comforter than anything else, since I fully believe that there are about three times as many people in food businesses as ought to be in them. Before 1914 the food trades had to support many more people than the traffic could, legitimately, and now, since prohibtion, food sellers have increased by leaps and bounds.

The advice of Miss Alice Robertson, the only woman member of congress, might be worth seeking. She was in the cafeteria business in Oklahoma before her election. Perhaps it is her shining example that has aroused the desires of dozens of women to follow in her footsteps, at least as far as to possess the eating place. No knowing what air castles beyond that they are building.

Without Counting the Cost.

The public is not considered conscientiously by more than one out of an inconceivably large number of people who want to make money by feeding it. There is a larger per cent of true incompetents in food businesses than one would dare mention. It is safe to say that not one-tenth of the feeding done is of first grade. There ought to be some method of grading eating places other than by the prices charged.

People give the shabbiest and most unconvincing reasons why they think they might succeed in food work, although totally inexperienced, totally untrained, and without capital. With people as impatient as they are today, this latter drawback is far greater than the inexperienced can guess. Coffee urns, bread slicing machines, power whips, dish washing machines, and other marvelous labor-money saving and time mulitplying devices are needed to go into this work, even on a rather small scale.

"Always on the Job."

A great number of testimonials might be collected from people of experience as to what is required. But before equipment, I would place the ability to be "always on the job." A woman with a successful eating place in San Diego, Cal., called and calls her place a box because when she began one of the dimensions of her miniature eating place was eight feet.

Judging by her larger place and everything concerning, the merest amateur can see that she does not sit around while some one else does all the work. There is no bit of it she cannot do, whether it is the cooking, or some quite wonderful interior decorating to give her place an absolutely unique and exceptional air, with nothing of that machine made uniqueness we find in some such places.

A woman whom I have watched in her café where 500 people a day are fed, and of whom I would say that "she is always on her job," has deprecated the idea—in print—"that people today can successfully start and conduct a business on a shoe string." Neither will just a knowledge of cooking suffice, she says. There must be considerable capital, some business experience, and good judgment.

5,000 People Fed in One Minute.

The great Oscar, maitre d'hotel of the Waldorf in New York City, who has just made a contract for his services for ten years on a basis of $500,000 for the term, is quoted as saying in an interview that if he had been told ten years ago that the time would come when 5,000 people could be fed in one minute, he would have said it was impossible.

This great chef sees or knows that 500,000 people are fed in the restaurants of New York City between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock. This fact has produced a profound change in menus. To read some of the ways in which this food is avalanched to the crowds is like reading a modern fairy story, with an ogre in the background and all. The quick lunches seem to be the profiteer's chance, for one ogreish thing. There are also good reasons for saying that the most food with the least nourishment is served, as a rule. Machinations in food manipulations, which have come through the uses of marvelous machinery cheat humanity more than it can guess.

Power Mixers Bring Profit.

Take the wonderful power mixers The white of one egg and a cup of some sort of liquid can be beaten up to an incredible volume with this whipping device. One man, serving 2,500 people a day, in answer to a quiz on the subject, said that the power mixing machines increased his volume 25 per cent. And it is quite within reason that this was clear gain to him.

These mixing machines are used for fifteen or twenty different things—mixing cakes and fillings and icings for them, for beating "pie toppings," for bread and griddle cakes, mayonnaise, mashed potato, whipping cream, etc. How could a woman with a small hand egg-whip compete with a 'thing' like this?

If fresh material, as nature made it, was used in all these cases the quality would be improved as well as the quantity increased enormously—but the speed demon of today has his minions inventing all sorts of sophisticated or near foods. There are powders to which some water is added before the power whip is set to work to make out of them pie fillings, cake icings, or, note, "pie toppings." Pie toppings is what they are called in the technique of today. I taste and choke on them, and the overemphasized fillings under them, and do not wonder that "pies are not as popular as they used to be." A great authority says they are not. I have but recently watched some pie crust makers and know that pie crust making is also largely a lost art. Thick, dry, bitter, sandy stuffs are urged upon customers as fine and flaky, though a true mince pie imp would fall down and expire if given such to eat.

Owns 104 Lunchrooms.

But this is not to suggest that some of the largest eating places are not run with wonderful thoroughness and cleanliness. The owners of the great places are sometimes, if not usually, people of much more general cultivation and training than the general and careless eating public imagines. Take, for instance, the owner of a widely scattered chain of lunchrooms—104 in all. An article printed in June, 1921, shows that he is not only a man of wide cultivation, but of indomitable energy, which he has put into his business.

This man contends that a restaurant man, besides having "natural endowments as merchant or salesman," should know about cooking. So what did he do? As he tells it, he first worked in his own bakeries in Boston, learning all he could about bread. Then, having been an extensive wanderer in Europe, and realizing that they had better bread over there than here, he apprenticed himself for eight weeks to a French baker, who, if he had known the facts about his apprentice, would have thought of him as a millionaire and would certainly have bent the knee to him had he known that this man was living with his family in an expensive hotel near. Those weeks were in summer, and the work was conducted in a basement, where "the ventilation consisted almost entirely in the draft through the oven up the flue." But here is a part of his description:

The French Bread Process.

"The custom in that shop was to strip completely to the waist, and the first job every night was to go into the dough trough up to one's elbows and above, and belabor that dough for an hour or more. The dough for French bread has sticking qualities beyond the wildest imagination of one who has made the 'straight or quick doughs' of Boston. It has clinging characteristics only comparable with Wabash mud or Arkansas gumbo. Ever since those fifty-six nights of overexertion, intolerable heat, and smothering closeness, I get a nerve shock when I see an old fashioned dough trough. It was the limit of my experience in hard work."

The hardest work of this rich man had previously been cutting cord wood for 50 cents a cord, pushing wheelbarrows of dirt up long inclines, painting acres of tin roofs in July and August, digging rocks and making fences of them. He had been poorly paid at these, but in this case he paid to a man who cursed, etc. Note then what he brought to the restaurant business to insure the great success that has followed his efforts.

Stuck to Sticky Business.

This man stuck to the sticky business until he could really make French bread. He says: "I was still in pursuit of knowledge in this inferno, and clung to that job as faithfully as that dough stuck to me every night, mostly because my boss actually went in the trough with me and did show me the peculiar movements of my hands and arms in the dough to effect the best results. Then when the dough 'comme finir,' the regular understudy would pare the dough off him and he from me." There are other entertaining details of how the boss gave him only half as much to eat as he had himself, sent him on errands at unearthly hours, etc.

Any one who wants to learn a food business should have this man's spirit. Such a man should have intelligence enough to get and hold a job easily in a place where the necessary things could be learned. If such people are without the grit to do this, they are not likely to overcome the trials of establishing, building up, successfully continuing a place for feeding people, and putting some conscience into their work rather than all selfish concern to "make money."

Bookkeeping Is Important.

Some flourishing eating places go to the wall because a little success, with good clothes and automobiles, turns the heads of the good cooks who started them, and who have to go again into service—and look the part. On the other hand, I have seen a whole family, after coming into great opportunities through money, "stay right on the job," doing the buying, keeping the books, etc.

No one who is too lazy to keep books should try to feed people. It is laziness, or a queer repugnance to that sort of exactions which hinders many an owner of a tepidly run eating place from keeping books. Today, there are curious and wonderful systems, with machines for adding and tabulating, to help in this work, but they cost money. It should be noted, however, that there are great places for feeding people where the bookkeeping seems to be carried on as an end in itself, and everything so conducted by rule of thumb that the food has no more character than a chromo.

There is at least one high class magazine conducted for those in these businesses. It is called "The American Restaurant, the Magazine devoted to Eating Places." It contains some remarkably good reading, as well as every sort of information for those in the business.

The Theaters

WITH the arrival of Fred Stone and "Tip-Top" at the Colonial tonight a new theatrical season comes into being. It has been a dull summer—the dullest in recent history, so far as the theaters are concerned, and the oldest inhabitant would tell you probably that never before have so many Chicago playhouses been closed. Various explanations of this have been given, linking local conditions with the inertia that has prevailed in London and the continental capitals, but one suspects that, after all, the weather man was chiefly to blame. Last week's respite from the depressing heat sent the playgoers flocking to the few theaters that were open. The response was immediate and almost uncanny. Long lines trailed their prosperous length through the lobbies, and in one or two cases the "Seats All Sold" signs had to be retrieved from their long disuse and dusted off by the smiling managers.

So they are beginning already to forget their solemn pronouncements about a bad season. Bad or good, it promises to be at least as eventful as any that have gone before. During this month and next fourteen entertainments new to Chicago are scheduled to arrive, and by the middle of September all of the standard playhouses will again be open. For August, the program runs like this:

Tonight—At the Colonial, Fred Stone in "Tip-Top," a typical Dillingham extravaganza, with the Six Brown Brothers, saxophonists; the Duncan sisters, who sing, and the London Palace Girls, who dance, figuring importantly in the proceedings.

Next Sunday—At the Studebaker, Leo Ditrichstein in "Toto," a comedy of Parisian life, adapted by Achmed Abdullah from the French of Maurice Hennequin and Felix Duquesnel. On the same night Fiske O'Hara will come to the Olympic to sing and act in his new Irish play, "The Happy Cavalier."

Monday, Aug. 22.—At the Playhouse, Leo Carrillo in "The Love Chef."

Sunday, Aug. 28.—At the Cort, "Smooth as Silk" will be followed by Grant Mitchell in "The Champion," a comedy by Thomas Louden and A. E. Thomas. At the same time the Central will reopen with "Three Live Ghosts," a comedy by Frederic Isham, with Charles McNaughton as its principal player, and "The Broken Wing," a melodramatic play about the aviators by Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, will come to the Olympic.

Monday, Aug. 29.—Vaudeville again at the Palace Music hall.

September brings the deluge. Its promises have been outlined before in these columns, and, as you know already, they include an impressive array of things worth while—Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'" at the Blackstone; Holbrook Blinn in "The Bad Man" at the Princess; Miss Florence Reed in "The Mirage" at the Northern (they think they won't call it the Ambassador); "The Gold Diggers" at Powers; "The O'Brien Girl" at Cohan's Grand; Francis Wilson in "Erminie" at the Illinois, and Shubert vaudeville at the Apollo.

The Shuberts' venture in variety will not be inaugurated for Chicago on Sept. 4, as originally planned, however. A change of schedule brings Eddie Cantor to the Apollo on that date in a revue called "The Midnight Rounders," which will remain until a postponed vaudeville opening is staged on or about Sept. 25. Other new arrangements involve the removal of "The Bat" to the Garrick on Sept. 4 to make way for "The Bad Man" at the Princess, and to stay unti Sept. 25, when it is proposed that Cantor be transferred, in turn, to the Garrick. By that time "The Bat" will have established a new long run record for dramatic entertainments in Chicago and will, perhaps, be content to leave.

Meanwhile, the loop holds no monopoly in the matter of diversion. Midsummer nights at the Marigold are nights of elfin beauty, if you are in the mood. As an outdoor playhouse the place is unique in the middle west; perhaps in the world. A spacious stage is set in the midst of friendly trees—real trees, not effete shrubs in boxes. On one side a huge fountain flings its spray among the leaves; on the other a Dutch windmill turns lazily. Twilight skies blend their lovely colors with the more garish hues of painted curtains and vivid lanterns; sometimes a complaisant moon appears to add the final touch.

In this setting Mr. Young's richly caparisoned "Passing Parade" gambols intermittently—pretty girls in bright costumes, and a handful of principals who sing and dance. Dance superbly, too, some of them: the dashing Miss Dorothy Lang, for example, and a whirlwind octet of young women identified only as the Kate Simmons dancers. Somewhere among the trees an imperturbable youth who looks like a studious bank clerk and rejoices in the name of Jones elicits wild Negroid melodies from a band whose most notable feature is the biggest and shiniest oom-pah horn you ever saw. The only man more imperturbable than Jones is the seemingly immovable waiter who stands in front of you. Sometimes he steps aside, and you see what is going on.

When the Colonial reopens tonight you will find its interior transformed. Cannily perceiving the fact that box seats are not good seats (playgoers knew it long ago), the management has removed entirely the stage boxes and loges on the main floor. Walls and ceiling, too, have been redecorated in what is described accurately if somewhat prosaically as a cafe-au-lait color, and the necessary contrast is provided by new velvet draperies of deep blue and old gold and new taupe carpets.

Mme. Lydia Lipkowska has been chosen by Henry W. Savage for the prima donna rôle in his approaching revival of "The Merry Widow." She has been one of the more decorative artists of the Chicago Opera company's roster, and it is reported that to obtain her services Mr. Savage had to arrange her release from a contract to originate the title rôle of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Snow Maiden" at the Auditorium next winter. Her appearance in "The Merry Widow" will be her first venture in the field of light opera.

An affecting picture of the passing of George M. Cohan from the realm of things theatrical is painted by Lawrence Reamer, one of New York's eminent commentators on the drama. Read and ponder:

"The roots are up, all right, in the former Cohan offices at 237 West 45th street. The office furniture on the first floor is piled in rather dusty disorder. Deserted desks look out pathetically from the corners. A detached telephone board stands in the middle room as a mute witness to the suspension of business. Stretched on the floor is the long black and gold sign which used to proclaim from the facade that George M. Cohan had converted the brown stone residence into an office building for his own business. Mr. Cohan's office is the front room on the second story. There is still his desk. Sitting there, he is directing the pulling up of the tiniest tendril, for the Cohan activities are at an end."

What other figure of the theater would have achieved as much publicity through his retirement as the redoubtable George? He has always been the

Caruso's Memory Honored in Song at Ravinia Today; News of Music

By Edward Moore.

BEING the one musical organization around Chicago at present in readiness to go ahead with such a project, the Ravinia opera company will give a concert this afternoon to the memory of Enrico Caruso.

It was only because of conflicting dates that Caruso never sang at Ravinia. No later than last summer Mr. Eckstein entered into correspondence with him on the subject, offering him the freedom of the park and the entire north shore if he would consent to make one or two guest appearances. Caruso was tempted; he admitted as much, but the details of an approaching concert tour made it impossible, and a courteous letter of declination expressed his regret at not being able to come.

Mr. Eckstein was much moved by the death of the eminent tenor. He says:

"In the passing of Enrico Caruso the world has lost not alone a great artist but a great man. For Caruso was great in spirit no less than in achievement—great in his possession of all those qualities that are endearing in life and enduring in memory.

"Springing from the soil as he did—whence all great genius springs—there is some alleviation of the world's regret in his passing that the end should have come to him on the soil of his dearly loved Italy. By his friends it is all but impossible to realize that the sunny smile and the warm handclasp will not be seen and felt again, and by the millions throughout Europe and the two Americas that his voice of gold is stilled forever."

The concert this afternoon will be free to the public. The park gates will open at 1 o'clock and remain open until 3, from which time they will be closed until 4. Visitors are requested to be prompt, as the concert will begin at 3:15.

The program is appended:

1. Adagio from "Eroica" Symphony.......Beethoven
Chicago Symphony orchestra.
Conductor, Giacomo Spadoni.
2. Ingemisco from Requiem Mass.......Verdi
Mario Chamlee, soloist.
Chicago Symphony orchestra.
Conductor, Gennaro Papi.
3. Funeral March from "Götterdämmerung".......Wagner

Operas for Coming Week.

Two more operas, "Mme. Butterfly" and "Fedora," will be added to the Ravinia répertoire this week, and there will be many changes of cast in the works announced for repetition. In detail the week's program will include:

Tonight—"Mignon," with Alice Gentle, Florence Macbeth, Charles Hackett, Leon Rothier, Philine Falco, Giordano Paltrinieri, and Paolo Ananian.

Tomorrow night—Moving pictures, the John M. Stahl production of "The Child Thou Gavest Me," with cast headed by Lewis Stone, Barbara Castleton, William Desmond, and Dick Headrick.

Tuesday night—"Pagliacci," with Frances Peralta, Morgan Kingston, Riccardo Stracciari, Millo Picco, and Paltrinieri.

Wednesday night—"Mme. Butterfly," with Anna Fitziu, Miss Gentle, Mario Chamlee, Graham Marr, and others.

Thursday afternoon—Children's concert, lecture by Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer, and concert by Chicago Symphony orchestra, followed by Dugald Stewart Walker, story teller.

Thursday night—"Cavalleria Rusticana," with Miss Peralta, Mr. Chamlee,

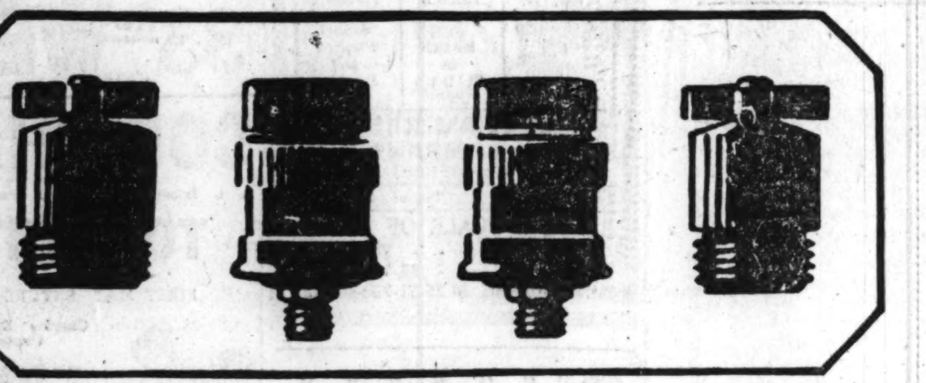
MARMON 34 IS 1,000 POUNDS LIGHTER THAN CARS OF COMPARABLE WHEEL BASE



Only Four Grease Cups on the Marmon 34

New Ideas in Simplified Lubrication Insure Greater Efficiency and Less Care

In comparing cars, note well the different systems of lubrication, the complicated old-time ways and the Marmon way.

Marmon engineers, always leaders in advanced designing, have reduced the care and attention necessary to chassis lubrication to a new minimum.

Through the development of oil-less bearings, spring shackle bolts, brake operating and clutch throw-out connections, in fact, all places on the chassis which ordinarily require constant attention, are now protected on the Marmon 34 by these oil-less bearings.

In conventional construction, grease cups or receptacles are found throughout the chassis, each requiring constant attention—unpleasant job.

MARMON 34 PRICES

	NOW	WAS
7-Passenger Touring 4-Passenger Touring Club Roadster	$3985.00	$5000.00
Speedster	4185.00	5300.00
Coupe	4875.00	6150.00
Sedan	5275.00	6600.00
Limousine Town Car	5400.00	6800.00

All prices at Indianapolis and subject to war tax.

Grease cups are usually neglected, running dry or allowed to cake and harden. This brings on wear and deterioration.

Marmon oil-less bearings provide perfect contact surfaces, the movement and wear being absorbed by an asbestos fabric bushing between two steel casings.

Let the study of lubrication be one of the deciding factors in choosing your car. It is of major importance.

We will be glad to explain Marmon lubrication, so that you can make comparisons.

WE BELIEVE THE HUPMOBILE TO BE THE BEST CAR OF ITS CLASS IN THE WORLD

Hupmobile

Where, within $400 of the new Hupmobile price, would you match the sound, known value of the Hupmobile? If you pay more, would the value be equally greater? At a lower price, would less in the car, and from the car, satisfy you?

What about economy? Hupmobile economy is dependable. What about repairs? We believe Hupmobile repair costs are lower than those of any other car in the world.

What about ability to keep going every day, as the Hupmobile does? What about long life and high resale price?

These things make value, and they are value. You are sure of them in the Hupmobile; and you get them at the new low price of $1485.

The Handwriting on the Wall.

Caruso's death will quite probably mark a turning point in the operatic history of the country, certainly for the Metropolitan and almost as surely, though indirectly, for our company here in Chicago.

For a number of seasons back the Metropolitan has had three potent assets, the prestige of its own name, Geraldine Farrar, and Caruso. Now one-third of these is wiped out. No later than Wednesday night, the day of Caruso's death, the New York critics and managers began casting about for his successor, perhaps not quite realizing the enormous difficulty of finding one. For Caruso was to the operatic stage what, to go afield for an illustration, John L. Sullivan was to the padded arena, a figure of supreme popularity. No one ever took Sullivan's place in popular esteem, and there is little chance that there will be another to fill Caruso's niche.

On the face of the situation it would seem as though the Metropolitan would be forced to confess its second place to the Chicago company. As far as active talent is concerned, the Chicago company is immensely superior to its eastern rival. Whether it will remain so is at present a serious and complex question.

With Miss Garden and Mr. Gatti-Casazza combing the continent of Europe for operatic talent and looking into every minor opera house for possibilities, there are two courses open to the Metropolitan. One is to bury the hatchet and agree to an amicable interchange of artists. In view of past history, it hardly seems likely that this will be adopted. The other is to renew efforts to induce Chicago artists to come to New York.

GALLI-CURCI
PHOTO © MATZENE

Last season the Gothamites harvested Titta Ruffo and part of the time of Amelita Galli-Curci. It would have been her full time if she had not been insistent upon reserving a period for Chicago, and it will be made her full time if ever she can be induced to forego the city where she made her first great success.

Suppose, needing artists as the Metropolitan does, that the next campaign should be more fruitful. Suppose, let us say, that Muratore, Rosa Raisa, Georges Baklanoff, Tito Schipa, and Edward Johnson, were induced to sign on the dotted line for elsewhere. What would be the result to the Chicago company?

The supposition is by no means as absurd as it sounds. Opera singers are out to sell their talents and voices in the best market, and they know, no one better, that their greatest earning capacity extends over only a limited number of years.

They also know, no one better, that a great part of the Metropolitan's prestige depends upon the fact that it is a permanent organization, while the Chicago company is just now hovering on the verge of a radical change in policy, of converting itself from a privately owned institution to a publicly guaranteed, semi-civic utility of art. At present only half enough guarantors have been secured to ensure its permanency. No one can predict what is to come with any certainty. No one can do more than hope for the best.

The future has its possibilities, and those of the most serious nature. Miss Garden, as brilliant an artist as there is in the world today, gives every indication of being an equally brilliant executive, but she cannot carry on a company unless the company is secure for her to carry on.

Wherefore, if the Chicago Opera association is worth anything to Chicago, and no one has had the temerity to say that it is not, it behooves Chicago to look to it. The handwriting is on the wall.

With the Melody Makers.

It would seem that the Apollo Musical club is well on the way to continued existence and the prosperity arising from public support. A third list of guarantors has reached this department, which, in connection with the other two, will give it a reasonably good fund upon which to draw.

Among the new names are those of L. S. Baker, Mrs. A. W. Bersch, A. G. Becker, Julia Boarini, Beatrice Byxbee, Etta Camann, Martha Camann, Capital State Savings bank, John Alden Carpenter, Jessie Colvin, Katherine Colvin, B. F. Conklin, Mrs. J. R. Custer, Louise Fairman, John Leo Fay, Mrs. W. R. Galloway, Stella Groves, Mrs. Burton Hanson, Mrs. A. W. Harris, H. B. Harvey, Mabel Sharp Herdien, Mrs. Harry Hart, Leslie H. Kamper, Klee, Rogers, Wile & Loeb, Charles M. Layne, William Lester, G. C. Longman, John B. Miller, Frank Parker, Charles Pfanschmidt, George J. Pope, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, L. J. Plymouth, Mass., is having a pageant of the landing of the Pilgrims on the same ground where they landed in 1620. Prof. George P. Baker of Harvard wrote the text. Leo Sowerby of this city provided part of the music, the rest being contributed by Henry F. Gilbert, Edward Burlingame Hill, Edgar Stillman-Kelley, Frederick S. Converse, George W. Chadwick, Chalmers Clifton, Arthur Foote, and John Powell.

The pageant is in four episodes and twenty scenes, beginning with the early exploration period of Thorvald and the Norsemen, Champlain, Capt. John Smith, and others, and then leading into the flight of the Pilgrims to Holland, their determination to sail, and the end of the journey at Plymouth.

It is said that the noted Russian basso Feodor Challiapine is on his way to America. If this is the case, it is undoubtedly with the sanction of the soviet government, since Challiapine has been rated as the official soviet musician of Russia. Miss Garden has several times expressed a desire to secure him for the Chicago opera, and is even said to have sent a representative to Russia for the purpose.

By mutual consent, says the announcement, the agreement hitherto existing between Rudolph Reuter, pianist, and the Chicago Musical college has been dissolved. Mr. Reuter will in September open a private studio in the Fine Arts building.

The prize offered some time ago by Swift & Co.'s Male chorus for the best setting of Charles Luders' poem, "The Four Winds," has been won by Franz C. Bornschein, a violinist and composer of Baltimore. Honorable mention was given of the settings by Charles H. Bochau of Ocean City, Md., and Dr Louis Adolph Coerne of Connecticut college, New London, Conn. The award was made by Leo Sowerby, Allen Spencer, and D. A. Clippinger.

The Chicago band, William Weil, conductor, will play at Grant park Wednesday night; United States hospital, Drexel boulevard and 47th street, Thursday night; Home for Incurables, 5535 Ellis avenue, Friday night; and East End park Saturday night.

The Theaters

despair and admiration of the press agents, and is so now more than ever. Reams of good white paper, gallons of ink, column after column of type are being devoted to comment, interviews, and speculation as to what he thinks and is doing and proposes to do. Meanwhile, "The O'Brien Girl," a Cohan show, is coming to Chicago to start a new season, just as if nothing had ever happened, and is suffering not at all from lack of advertising.

McVicker's theater, built in 1857, will observe its sixty-fourth birthday next week with the last of its many anniversary celebrations. If present plans are carried out it will be razed next spring and a playhouse seating nearly 5,000 will be erected in its place. When the present McVicker's was built, one-half of the ground plot was used for a stage, the result being that the theater, in the old days, was always in demand for the great Drury Lane spectacles and similar massive productions. The new McVicker's will have a stage but thirty-five feet deep, which is all its sponsors expect to need and which will make possible the increase from its present seating capacity of 2,700.

Rehearsals begin tomorrow for the New York Hippodrome's new spectacle, which is to be called this year, "Get Together." They were much disturbed on the Atlantic seaboard during the summer by Charles Dillingham's expressed doubt as to whether there would be any more Hippodrome shows, and seem greatly relieved by his announcement that the huge playhouse will continue to observe its traditions. Fokine and Fokina, the Russian dancers, will stage a ballet, there will be movies, and the best seats, formerly $3, will be purchasable at $1.50.

Miss Catherine Calvert is coming back from the movies to be Otis Skinner's leading woman in "Blood and Sand," the new play based on the Blasco Ibanez novel of the same name.

John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," revived in London is again having a prosperous career, this time showing for the first time in the West End, at the Lyceum. Says the London Times: "Mr. William J. Rea is playing the part of the President as well as ever. One still feels that his performance is a remarkable piece of penetrating and well sustained work, and it was pleasant to hear again his rich Irish brogue in a part which must be one of the longest that a modern playwright has attempted."

An Irish brogue!

The Kansas City Star has unearthed the fact that the man who first sang "Dixie," Sam Gilder, is still in the game. He believes that he is the last of the old minstrels, for it was in 1859 that he put on burnt cork.

"Jim Jam Jems," the entertainment in which Miss Sophie Tucker will be the principal figure, is scheduled tentatively for an early showing at the La Salle. . . . Instead of coming just in time for the curtain, as they usually do, Leo Ditrichstein and his company will arrive in Chicago tonight and will devote the week to final rehearsals of "Toto," which they are to present at the Studebaker beginning next Sunday. . . . Sir Harry Lauder sails from Scotland for America Sept. 24 for another of those transcontinental tours. . . . Miss Margaret Anglin has entered into an "association" with Lee Shubert for the production of various plays. The first of these, "The Open Fire," by Hulbert Footner, was revealed down east last week with a cast headed by Miss Anglin. . . . Miss Fay Bainter has put off for the present all hope of having a new play and will spend the season touring in "East Is West." An important item of her plans is to show her home state, California, what she can do.

New Plays in New York.

New York, Aug. 6.—[Special.]—After a somewhat desultory preliminary, the theatrical season will get under way in earnest during the coming week when five new offerings will be revealed on or in the neighborhood of Broadway. Three of these will be comedies, and two of a musical nature.

"Idlers of 1921" opens Monday night at the Eltinge theater. This is an unofficial Lambs' gambol—an entertainment put together largely by Will Morrissey, and with a cast made up of the various satellites of the Lambs, who find themselves able to spare the next week or two.

"Tangerine" opens Tuesday night at the Casino theater. It is the first musical comedy of the new season. The authors are Philip Bartholemae, Lawrence Langner and Guy Bolton—the first and third well known in the writing field and the second an executive of the Theater guild. Howard Johnson and Carlo Sanders are responsible for the lyrics and music.

Miss Julia Sanderson will be the particular luminary of the proceedings with Jack Hazzard and Frank Crumit also prominently cast.

"Honors Are Even" will appear Wednesday night at the Times Square theater. Roi Cooper Megrue, leaving melodrama behind him, is the author. Miss Lola Fisher and William Courtenay are the heorine and hero.

"March Hares" begins Thursday night at the Bijou theater. Harry Wagstaff Gribble, who will be remembered as the author of "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," presented here last season, is the playwright.

"Dulcy" gets a start Saturday night at the Frazee theater. The Dulcinea of Franklin P. Adams, to many a familiar figure, is the central character of this play—a comedy by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly. As in Chicago, Miss Lynn Fontanne will have the title rôle.

Claude King has persuaded the Selwyns to release him from "Daniel," and will have the leading male rôle in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." . . . The "Hunted Lady" in all probability will be the title of the play in which Louis Mann will be seen this season. Samuel Shipman and Clara Lipman are the authors, and rehearsals are about to begin. . . . Miss Alice Brady will open in Atlantic City in "Drifting" Monday night. The play will probably come immediately to New York. . . . Maclyn Arbuckle has gone with the Shuberts and will be seen next month in something or other. . . . The cast of "The Pink Slip," coming to the Central in September, will include Bert Williams, Bobby Watson [late of "Irene"], Miss Lois Josephine, Spencer Charters [the hired man in the New York production of "The Tavern"], and Miss Eva Puck. . . . Al Jolson, according to a rumor, paid [or offered], $25,000 for a quarter interest in "Getting Gertie's Garter," while that entertainment was in Atlantic City. Despite the general verdict, incidentally, the play is starting well at the Republic. . . . "Pomander Walk" is to be turned into a musical comedy. . . . "Sally," in its thirty-two weeks at the New Amsterdam, has played to more than $1,000,000.

1921 Is Rewarding Fighters

He Makes Eyes 'Cause He Can't Make 'Em Behave

By Mae Tinee.

It sure seemed like the old days—following a manager behind the scenes, object being to interview an actor in his dressing room. Even the smell was natural, and I tripped over a property stool and was crazy about it. The actor? Ben Turpin.

They'd told him a lady was coming and he had his neck craned through a crack in the door, looking for her. He didn't need to turn his head, because he is so constituted that he can see in all directions not immediately behind him. We greeted each other cordially and came right to the point:

"Permanent!" he said, looking at me and vice versa.

"Wave?" I said, looking at his hair, pretending not to understand.

"Nope. Eyes," he told me. "Always just as you see them now." He handed me gallantly to one of the two chairs in the room, took the other, which was in front of his dressing table, and started to make up.

"Born that way?" I asked sympathetically. He smeared a hectic flush over his cheek bones and shook his head.

"Nope. Used to be a juggler. You know—juggled three balls. One of them rubber—you know. The rubber one hits you on the head and you click the other two together, so the audience thinks you got a real rap. One of them hit me, and it wasn't the rubber one. When I came out of the hospital I could see the boats in the Chicago river and the trains pulling out of the Illinois station. Been like that ever since."

"O, well," I said cheerfully; "O, well—"

"Lucky day for me," he said. "Say"—he whirled about—"do you know what I was making when I was out at Essanay?"

"No," I said. [I didn't.]

"Twenty dollars a week," said Mr. Turpin, impressively. "And Mrs. Spoehr lent me $50 to pay down to an installment house. That's the way I got my flat furnished. We didn't feel able—my wife and me—to get a regular kitchen stove, so we just got one of those little laundry stoves—you know—and fried eggs and things on that. I'm a wonderful man, Miss Tinee, been married to the same woman fifteen years!"

"I'll say you are!" I said. "I bet you like her."

"I bet I do, too," said Mr. Turpin, with great finality. He added, "I wisht she was here. But I'll bring her over to THE TRIBUNE to see you."

That's nice, isn't it?

"How'd you find out how funny you were?" I wanted to know.

"Well," he said, plastering on his famous mustache, which isn't permanent. (He's clean shaven and has gold in his teeth.) "Charlie Chaplin told me to go and make up, and when he saw me he laughed till he almost bust, and he said he wouldn't work with me, because I was the funniest man he ever seen and he'd be damned—pardon, lady—if he'd work with me.

"But I did a couple of pictures with him. Mack Sennett saw them. It started him thinking. Then people began asking where the long-necked, cross-eyed guy was, and Sennett told me to come on over. I did, and when they asked again he said I was with him. He gave me 200 bucks to start. Want to know how much I'm getting now?"

"Too polite to arsk," said the lady reporter.

"Tell her," said the press agent, who was also there.

"No, don't," said the lady reporter. "For I probably wouldn't believe you or die of envy if I did. I suppose you have houses and lands?"

"House and yard," said Mr. Turpin. "Live stock—one parrot and a dog. The dog is cock-eyed, too."

"He never IS!" I exclaimed.

"Well, I bet he is," Mr. Turpin said. "Only he never juggled. He was born that way."

We chatted a while longer, and then it was time for the funny fellow to go on and do his act, which consists of a lot of falls and some jokes that are funny and some—that sound funny because he cracks them.

My advice to you is to go right on pulling for Mr. Turpin. He's homely and rejoices in the fact; he's cross-eyed and thinks he's lucky; he has no education and will tell the world he hasn't; he and what is known as "the big head" are stranger, and I bet he'd give friend or foe his last dime if he thought they needed it.

That's Ben Turpin—old funny face!

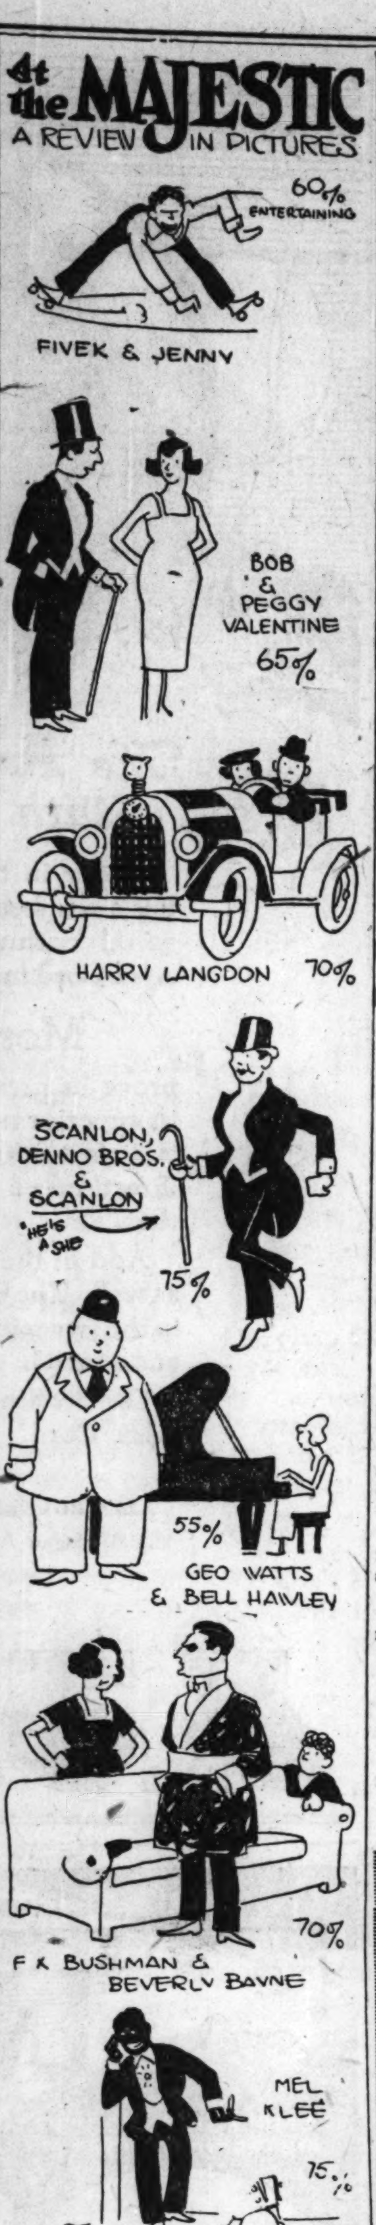
A REVIEW IN PICTURES



CLOSEUPS

The Oliver Morosco company has just finished the filming of "Slippy McGee." The entire picture was taken in Natchez, Miss., and it is said that many historical scenes and ante bellum mansions were used in the various scenes.

A young inventor of Halle, Germany, named Paul Mereenkind, claims that he has completely solved the problem of color photography. A French chemist, whose name I haven't, declares he has invented an unbreakable film. Another expert steps forth to announce that he is responsible for a process that will "practically do away with the perforation of film stock." Vurrily the world do wag!

Tom Forman will direct Thomas Meighan in his coming picture, "A Prince There Was."

Harry Beaumont, formerly of Essanay, later with Goldwyn, husband of Hazel Daly, will direct Viola Dana in some of her coming productions.

Though there are some actresses who can weep on demand, experts declare that the glycerin tear has come to Hollywood to stay. It's a good, reliable old tear. It stays put and never gets messy.

A fox, hiding in the bush, popped out suddenly and forced a retake of some of the scenes in "Peter Ibbetson," which stars Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid.

George Loane Tucker's last picture, "Ladies Must Live," completed shortly before his death, will be released shortly by Paramount.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

STEPHANIE: Don't believe everything you hear. You'll be too uncomfortable. Sorry you missed the answer the other time. Here it is again. Address Edmund Lowe, care of Edward Small, 1493 Broadway, New York City. Y'wekkum.

P. F. M.: Thanks ever so much for the cards. You are always so thoughtful. I enjoyed your last letter.

M. M.: I haven't had a crush on an actor yet—but hope on. While there's actors there's hopes.

E. G. S.: Been doing some thinking, haven't you? You were nice to send along the suggestions.

S. G.: "Rave on, mad man," is right! Ethel Clayton's hair is not red, but blonde, with a tendency that way. At least, that's how it was when I saw her several years ago.

T. J. W. Jr.: I'm dreadfully sorry you've been sick! Double pneumonia is no joke, is it? And with all that worry about graduating and everything! Lucky you to have had the credits! Mighty glad you like the column. I like you.

MARJORIE E., Canada: How I envy you! I've never been there, and to go is one of the ambitions of my life. No vacation yet. Soon. Write again. Please!

FRANCOIS: Wee, maybe sometime we press ze han', you and I! Est ees to so hope—nicht war?

Vaudeville Wit

MAJESTIC.

Harry Langdon:

"Lean on the car, and I'll take your picture."

"I can't lean on the car. It's all damp."

"Why is it so damp?"

"I don't know, unless it's just that there's so much due on it."

"There, now, I took the picture."

"O, let's see it."

"You can't see it now. Wait till it's developed."

"Aw, no, lemme see the synopsis."

"What is your order, please?"

"I'll take broiled lobster."

"And what do you wish?"

"I wish you all a merry New Year."

"O, waiter, change my broiled lobster to a cocktail."

"O, can you do that?"

"Why, certainly."

"All right, then, change this auto to an airplane."

"What do you think of my girl?"

"She's all right, but the last time I saw her she was a blonde."

"How dare you sit there and let her abuse me like that?"

"O, all right, I'll get out and stand up."

"That stuff looks good. Any kick?"

"Nope, nobody's said anything so far; but listen, when you're through drinking that, just lay the money around any place, but don't give it to me direct."

"How do you expect to get home in this old bus?"

"Why, this is the best car on the market."

"It may be the best car on the market, but it's not the best on the roads, and I wanna get home the worst way."

"Well, we'll go in my car. Gimme a kiss, kiddo, gimme a kiss."

"I won't."

"If you don't, you'll have to walk home."

"Then I'll walk."

"Isn't it funny they'd all rather walk home? Guess I'll buy a motor boat."

George Watts and Belle Hawley:

"All I liked about my wedding was the cake."

"If you marry me, I'll be too good to be true."

"A woman marries a man for his money, divorces him for alimony, and outlives him for his life insurance."

"A cat has nine lives, but a bullfrog croaks every night."

"My sister has water on the knee from wearing pumps."

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS

the Truth is that more than to any other class of owners, sales of the LINCOLN are to persons who have owned other eight cylinder cars. They are acquainted with the superiority of the V-type eight cylinder engine as a principle, but they have proven to their own satisfaction that the LINCOLN represents a higher development of that principle, and that it embodies betterments which must eventually force themselves into other V-type eight cylinder manufacturing practice—if other "Eights" are even to approach the LINCOLN in performance and in stability.

And the LINCOLN'S ascendancy in the esteem of motordom is conclusively proven by the fact that in some sections its sales are actually exceeding the sales of any other eight cylinder car.

Iowa, Mud Bound, Bemoans Its Lost Building Years

High Speed Construction Fails to Meet Road Needs

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia.—[Special.]—Iowa, sovereign state, bread basket of the middle west, is embargoed. Iowa, whose rich farms sprout gold and silver from every furrow for the millions crowded in between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, is neck deep today in mud, while the northern peninsula of Michigan, with one family to every ten miles or so and rude clearings instead of farms, goes on blithely about its business and its growing world-business over permanent roads that laugh at cloudbursts.

Twenty-five years ago the traveler might be expected to overlook the pitiful highway makeshifts that, strung together, constitute today the clay sluiceway of the Lincoln trail across the state. In his ten or fifteen mile drive he would fail to notice particularly the two or three spring wagons and straining, mud caked horses he might meet on slippery bridge approaches, or the grain wagons, mired hub deep at the side of the road. But in A. D. 1921 these sights are remarkable. It is unusual, too, to see huge farm trucks anchored under sheds in forced idleness for the week period after a rain and the cavalcades of touring cars, muck coated and dreary, which fill every wayside garage while their owners fume impatiently in the crowded rooms of small town hotels.

Yesterday it rained. Yesterday and today highway traffic ceased and halted with it a transportation business second alone to that carried by steam trunk lines. Tomorrow thousands of dollars will be spent for the extra gasoline, motor parts, and accident insurance required to take the state's highway traffic through the heavy, rutted roads.

State leaders are neither unaware nor unmindful of this condition. For the last five years they have been talking and dreaming permanent paved roads. Counties have gone through the usual bitter bond issue fight and, for the most part, have now provided funds for their vital lines of trade. Here and there state engineers are rushing through the laying of pavement with every resource at their command, but they realize—and admit—that the enthusiasm and actual construction has come years too late to meet the greatest of modern opportunities—paved transport arteries.

In the middle of the greatest touring year in history, with freight rates eating deep into the profit from everything produced in the commonwealth and with the demand for rapid and cheap farm to market and market to market transportation growing with the harvest, they see some 50,000 miles of important communication lines tied up because of a much needed rain.

"Some one has remarked that even the most progressive state, whose highway system is almost perfected, cannot build roads half fast enough to meet the demand," said a construction engineer inspecting newly opened concrete near Cedar Rapids. "We are just getting into a state campaign that should have started years ago, and all of our efforts cannot begin to meet the needs of the through routes alone. Illinois, at least, has a start on its state road program. Recent political events alone have shown us the reason for her criminal delay in this year's building. The people of this state, now that roads are going down, are right on our necks every minute and they won't allow a minute's delay until the state construction work is done."

"Well," said a country editor, kicking three chunks of Iowa clay from his sanctum floor, "our roads are not so bad. You can get on 'em three or four days after a rain and then there's nothing but thick dust and ruts to contend with. You'll find at least a couple of miles of concrete between here and Omaha and more going down every minute. We sure appreciate that couple."

People in Iowa and the thousands of tourists who are forced to use state roads every year are tired of being stuck in the mud. They are building roads as fast as it is humanly possible and their advice to the world in general is "build 'em now."

ANOTHER FRENCH INVASION

EUROPEAN SPORTING EVENTS are not complete this year without an American entry list. Here is the Duesenberg racing team, sent from Indianapolis to compete in the July Grand Prix in Paris as the last event in Duesenberg racing history. The team, reading left to right, includes: Joe Boyer, Louis Inghibert, Albert Guyot, and Jimmie Murphy.

Voice of the Motorist

Rockford, Ill., July 20.—[Auto Editor Chicago Tribune.]—Dear sir—In common with other Rockford autoists I was greatly interested in the story which appeared in last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE concerning your trip to Rockford and into Wisconsin, with comment on roads good, bad and indifferent. For myself I wish to express appreciation of the tribute paid to Rockford in that article, for only too often the big city "feller" who comes out into the byways regards communities like this fair prey for anything from mere sarcasm over "hick" ways up to anything short of committing actual murder on what he thinks are city speedways instead of streets.

However, my purpose in writing this is to acquaint you and perhaps through you the Chicago public with the fact that in a short space of time, perhaps late this season, and certainly before the touring season of 1922 is far advanced, it will be possible for Chicago folk to take the Chicago-Rockford-Madison-Dells trip on concrete or something that is as good as concrete all the way.

The letting of state road contracts this week assures a continuous stretch of concrete road from Elgin to Rockford, which practically means from Chicago to Rockford. Winnebago county has completed its highway to the Boone county line on the east, a splendid stretch of concrete eight miles in length. It was built through county funds, made possible by the enthusiasm for good roads which was created in this county several years ago, and which has resulted in more concrete being laid in Winnebago county than any other unit in this region.

The state road contracts let recently assure through stretches of concrete across Boone and McHenry counties, by way of Belvidere and Marengo, to link up with the fifteen mile stretch of concrete that is now being laid out of Elgin, contracts for which were awarded in the spring. When these jobs are finished every foot of the fifty miles between Rockford and Elgin will be either country concrete or good city pavement.

From Rockford north this county is pushing the concrete toward the Wisconsin line. Four miles of this pavement are now being put in and the work will be completed by Sept. 1. When the contract now under way is finished, there will be just 3.2 miles of road between Rockford and Beloit that is not concreted, and Rockford road boosters are hopeful that the state highway department will finish up this short stretch before snow flies this year.

From Beloit to Janesville leads one of the finest concrete roads in the middle west, thirteen miles long. North of Janesville concrete is being poured on the road to Edgerton, and five miles of permanent pavement have now been laid. When Edgerton is reached the concrete ribbon will stretch clear across Rock county, leaving only the Dane county end of the 160 mile stretch from Chicago to Rockford to Madison that is not concrete, excepting the three miles just south of Beloit, and there is every possibility that this stretch will be poured this year.

Chicago autoists may therefore rest assured that the time is soon at hand when they will be able to take one of the most delightful trips in the middle west, from the metropolis to Rockford, thence up the enchanting Rock river valley into the land of lakes in Wisconsin, over roads that will make such a tour one of real joy. W. H."

Eastern Illinois Makes Gala Plans for Road Opening

August 12 Set for Chicago Celebration of Dixie Highway Day

THE biggest road celebration Illinois has ever known is planned for Aug. 12, when the Dixie highway will officially be opened for traffic between Chicago and Danville.

The hard surfacing of this highway has been completed under the direction of the state highway department. The road is 146 miles from Chicago to Danville and is mostly of concrete construction, although in Vermilion county near Danville it is brick. In most places it is eighteen feet wide. Curves have been eliminated and modern bridges have been installed.

The road enthusiasts who have been boosting the Dixie claim it is the longest stretch of modern road in Illinois, and, therefore, is the finest pavement in the state.

Illinois is the first state on the Dixie highway to complete its quota of mileage. Other states are Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan.

The road from Chicago to Danville is the main Dixie artery to the great lakes region and its opening will be celebrated by a big pageant and automobile procession into Chicago, in connection with the Pageant of Progress. Aug. 12 will be "Dixie Highway day" at the Pageant of Progress on the Municipal pier.

The Dixie Highway association, Illinois Highway Improvement association, Illinois State Automobile association, Chicago Motor club, the Illinois Automobile club, the Danville Automobile club, and municipalities along the highway, as well as their chambers of commerce and other organizations, have combined to make the celebration a big success.

The program will open Thursday, Aug. 11, at Danville, where a barbecue will be staged by the citizens, at which "Uncle" Joe Cannon and M. M. Allison of Chattanooga, Tenn., who is president of the National Dixie Highway association, will be guests of honor.

The tour into Chicago will start the following morning. Tourists will escort into Chicago a pretty southern girl, who will represent "Miss Dixie." Each of the communities along the road in Illinois will select their prettiest girl, they to be "Miss Dixie's" aids. "Miss Danville," "Miss Hoopeston," "Miss Watseka," "Miss Momence," "Miss Kankakee," "Miss Steger," "Miss Chicago Heights," and "Miss Blue Island" will be the personal escort of "Miss Dixie," and on reaching Chicago they will be received by "Miss Chicago."

The management of the automobile tour will be in charge of the Danville chamber of commerce and the Kankakee chamber of commerce. Various communities along the road will have local celebrations on the morning of Aug. 12, and their quota of the automobile procession will join the main group as each city is reached. It is expected that the tourists will reach Chicago about 3 p. m. on Aug. 12.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

FRANK B. ANSTED, president of the United States Automotive corporation, has announced the formation of a new subsidiary, the Fayette Painting and Trimming company, with a capital stock of $500,000 in common shares. A substantial brick plant, including two buildings with a total of 125,000 square feet of floor space, has been put into operation for the painting and trimming of open bodies for the Lexington Motor company in Connersville.

The Buick company is out with an announcement of a new four cylinder line of cars, including roadster and five passenger touring jobs in the open models and three passenger coupe and five passenger sedan in the closed models. All Buick features are included in the new line.

Fred J. Storm was elected president and general manager of the Sewell Cushion Wheel company of Chicago at a recent board meeting. The new Chicago executive has been connected with the parent company in Detroit.

Captain Edward V. Rickenbacker, America's "ace of aces," is the moving spirit in a newly organized $5,000,000 company organized in Detroit for the manufacture of the new Rickenbacker car, a much talked of development in the automotive world. "Rick," as vice president and director of sales, is associated in the enterprise with B. F. Everitt, Harry L. Cunningham, Carl Tichenor, Roy Hood, E. R. Evans and other automotive old timers.

The National Automobile Chamber of commerce has been awarded a certificate of merit by the war department in recognition of loyalty, energy and efficiency in the performance of its war work.

Tourist Hordes Shatter Records of Yellowstone

THE American motorist, treking the long trails as never before, has broken all autmobile travel records in Yellowstone park.

What heretofore has been considered exceptional is this season the rule, and it is now estimated that 90,000 persons will have visited the park before snow barriers block the road. With this in mind, hotels, camp companies, and park officials have made elaborate provisions for handling any numbers that may come.

During the twenty days of June, when the park entrances were first opened, auto travel doubled over 1920, but the July figures show an increase that will set a pace in years to come. The 19th, 20th, and 21st sent all previous records in the discard. The total number to visit the park up to the latter date was 31,310 persons and 6,190 automobiles, as against 27,268 persons and 4,378 cars up to the same days a year ago. And this in the face of pessimistic predictions of an "off year," based on economic reports from the outside.

Careful check at the four entrance gates shows that thousands are this year traveling from five to ten thousand miles. California, for instance, has sent more automobiles into the park than any other state, with the exception of Montana, which borders so closely as to be considered within commuting distance of the north and west gates. The check shows also that scores are routing through Portland and Seattle and the entire northwest, and are visting most of the western states adjacent to Yellowstone.

An unusual number are showing an interest in the Jackson Hole country, to the south—the north part of which soon may be annexed to Yellowstone National park—in order to view the incomparable Tetons.

"In the thirty-eight years, I have visited Yellowstone, I have never seen the highways in such excellent condition," is the statement to Park Superintendent Horace M. Albright from Senator A. W. Miles, Montana, who for nearly half a century has been active in park development work.

The camp sites and general accommodations are also shown in various reports to be in better shape than ever before.

NEW MARKING.

To make automobiles distinctive a New York inventor has patented a process for producing designs or initials on their radiators by partially expanding certain of the cells after they are assembled.

Security and Satisfaction are His, Wherever the Cadillac Owner May Tour

Before starting a tour across the continent, it is desirable to know something of the company which built your car, as well as the car itself.

In the very broadest sense of the word, the Cadillac is a sound and strongly established American institution.

There is probably not another plant in the world as advantageously equipped as the wonderful new works which the Cadillac Motor Car Company has just occupied.

The Cadillac has always been a model in manufacturing fitness and fineness, to which manufacturers of high grade cars the world over have gladly paid tribute.

The new Cadillac plant insures a degree of scientific exactitude, efficiency, and economy, beyond the fondest dreams of anything attained in the past.

Its far-flung system of sales and service puts friends within easy reach for the Cadillac tourist, wherever his fancy may carry him.

Back of every Cadillac sold is a solid history of eighteen years of unique experience, hammered and welded into a positive knowledge of how to build a car of the highest grade.

Back of every Cadillac is business responsibility—a splendid past, a solidly successful present, a sure, substantial and brilliant future.

The knowledge of these things brings a sense of certainty and satisfaction to the Cadillac owner second only to the certainty he feels that his car will do all he expects it to do, and more than he could hope any other would do.

"Weegee Board" Separators

You know what a Weegee Board is. A flimsy, shaky, undependable sort of an affair that can make a bad guess on anything from whether it will rain to who will be next governor of Texas. "Holy telephones," I call 'em. Old chap I knew used to call up a dead uncle and get dope on the stock market. Made some money, too, until one day Weegee got a short circuit or something and he had to mortgage his house, sell his flivver, and get jobs for all his kids to keep from going to work himself.

It's just like that with these Weegee Board separators. They're all right if you don't believe in them too often, or too long, or too much. For after all they're nothing but timber. The little old board says, "Will I puncture now and tie this guy up or will I wait?" Then along where the houses get scarce and the road bad, and a storm coming on, Weegee says to herself something that sounds like "Eventually, why not now?" and splits wide open. Dead? You said it!

I've talked to enough Weegee Board Separator victims to start a W. B. Separator Club and, believe me, they're a bunch of wise boys now. Every one of 'em knows it costs money to play the Weegee in a battery just like anywhere else.

When a car owner drops in here and says he's been Weegee'd, I don't even need to ask him what he wants—I just figure that he wants what I'd want in his place, and the quicker I get a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery on his car the better he'll like it. He's safe when he lines up with the builders of the 185 cars and trucks who selected Willard Threaded Rubber Batteries.

Judge the Battery by Its Insulation

It is an open secret in the battery business that all storage battery plates are a great deal alike—and that the real difference is not in the plates that supply the current but in the insulation between the plates.

There is enough difference in insulation alone to account for all the difference in battery life, battery reliability and consequently battery value and satisfaction.

Great care is taken in the manufacture of Willard plates, jars, cases and so on down to the last minute detail, but the important difference between the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery and all other batteries is its Threaded Rubber Insulation.

Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation made possible a new thing in the battery business—a battery that does not have to be reinsulated during its lifetime. The full insulating value of the rubber is retained. The rubber is made porous (as it must be) to permit free circulation of battery solution.

You can't go wrong on your battery if you base your choice on insulation—the part that has always been first to wear out, and that has caused most of the car owner's battery worry and expense by its tendency to crack, warp, puncture and give out before the plates. It's just as the Willard Service Man says in his column. You can't go wrong on insulation if you pick Willard Threaded Rubber.

There is only one battery with Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation. You can recognize it by the trade mark stamped in red on the side of the battery case. Look for it! Be sure you get it!

AVIATION

wiss Engineer Has Muffler for Airplane Motors

ngine Roar Reduced by More Than 50 Per Cent

BY MORROW KRUM.

ONE of the great discomforts of travel by air has, up to date, been the noise set by the motor. It is usually so great that conversation even in an inclosed cabin has been extremely difficult, if not impossible, and many passengers suffer temporarily from deafness as a result of their trip. On the big Liberty motored ships the pilots and observers are frequently deaf for hours after flights.

This deafness was noted during the transcontinental race two summers ago. The pilots and observers who landed in the towns along the route were generally thought to have been inebriated. A reporter would ask the motor deafened flyer a simple question, such as "How high did you fly?" and the pilot, overburdened with questions and poor hearing, would reply, "Yes, I think so."

It has not been found practicable to fit silencers of the type used on ordinary motor car engines on account of the additional weight and loss of power incurred by a fitment of this type.

Now a Swiss engineer has apparently solved the problem and brought out an aero muffler which does not heat up or diminish the power of the engine, but reduces the noise sufficiently to allow easy conversation between pilot and passengers. The principle of the apparatus is simple, consisting only of a marked rapid cooling of the exhaust gases, which action is assisted by a short suction by small revolving blades and by centrifugal motion generated in either connection on the camshaft or from small exterior blades around the movable head of the muffler. The gases enter the tapered rear end of the silencer into sleeves similar to an automobile muffler and are sucked and thrown out of the spinning head of the front end.

This reduces the noise by well over 50 per cent, and at an altitude of 2,000 feet the noise of the engine can hardly be heard by a person on the ground, it is said. As the muffler can be enclosed in a streamlike case placed close to the top or bottom of the motor, the extra wind resistance is negligible. Needless to say, this invention will greatly add to the comfort of commercial flying and will be of tremendous use in aerial warfare.

All Air Lanes Soon Will Lead Through Chicago

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Chicago is destined to be an important traffic center on three of the great airways charted by the war department, not only for military preparedness, but also for commercial transportation. The northern trans-continentaal airway, starting from Boston and New York and converging at Binghamton, N. Y., passes over Chicago. The north and south route, from the great lakes to the gulf, going from Chicago, through Springfield, St. Louis and Montgomery to New Orleans. Chicago is also on the transcontinental airway from Washington, passing through Pittsburg and Columbus, and westward to Salt Lake City and San Francisco.

It is the intention of the war department to develop these airways through the national guard and tho organized reserve

Important stations of the aerial service units are contemplated in Illinois, as follows:

In Chicago—One division air service [national guard]; one division air service [organized reserve]; one corps air service headquarters [national guard]; one observation squadron [N. G.]; one group headquarters [N. G.]; one balloon company [N. G.]; one balloon company [O. R.]; one balloon park [N. G.]; two photo sections [N. G.]; one communications section [O. R.]; one wing headquarters [O. R.]; two group headquarters [O. R.]; three attack squadrons [O. R.]; two air parks [O. R.]; two photo sections [O. R.]; one airship company [O. R.].

Bloomington, one pursuit squadron [organized reserve].

Carthage, one ballon company [organized reserve].

Chanute field, one observation squadron [regular army] and one photo section [R. A.].

Decatur, one group headquarters [O. R.]; two attack squadrons [O. R.] and one photo section [O. R.].

East St. Louis, one balloon company [N. G.], and one air park [N. G.]

Effingham, one observation squadron [O. R.].

Freeport, one division air service [O. R.].

Galesburg, one attack squadron [O. R.].

Peoria, one balloon company [N. G.]; one group headquarters [O. R.], and one attack squadron [O. R.].

Rockford, one balloon company [N. G.].

Rock Island, one pursuit squadron [O. R.].

Springfield, one division air service [O. R.] and one air park [O. R.].

Aircraft Garage.

The old joke of asking aviators, "Where is your garage?" has become [illegible] with the establishment near London, England, of a bona fide air craft garage intended for the use of aerial taxis and private plane owners. The company's announcement says: "A [illegible] of highly skilled mechanics under qualified ground engineers. Petrol and oil supplies. Overhauls, modifications and repairs promptly executed."

New 'Chute.

A new adaptation of the parachute has been experimented upon by the [illegible] air service. This consists of carrying the parachute in the rear of the fuselage with certain special equipment. When accident makes it necessary for the pilot to leave his plane in midair he simply pulls a lever, disconnecting himself and a section of the fuselage from the rest of the

TRANSFERRED

Friends of Maj. George E. Stratemeyer will regret that he has been transferred from Chanute field to Washington. The former commanding officer of the Rantoul air station has done much to boost aviation in Illinois.

Radio Controlled Air Torpedoes to Feature Next War

FLYING torpedoes directed by Hertzian waves are to be a feature of the next war, according to Le Petit Journal. It is said that the latest experiment of the French aviation service have proved that five or six small and inexpensive bombing planes, without a pilot or a mechanism, can successfully be guided by a "shepherd" in a larger plane by means of the Hertzian. It will be recalled that according to reports Herr Fokker had during the last year of the war received from the German war office an order for a similar device. At that time, however, such an apparatus had not been developed to a practical point, but in the winter following the armistice the Voisin company began a series of experiments at the aerodrome at Crotay.

At that time the flying torpedo employed was too light to be controlled by its shepherd. While it maneuvered satisfactorily during the first half hour, it soon got too far away for control, and fell into the sea. The present achievement of a flock of little planes under perfect control points to the supposition that within a year or two it will be possible accurately to direct the former from a land base at a distance of a hundred miles or more.

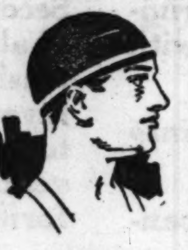
At present the study of controlling machines from the earth is being carried on at Villacoublay. It may be noted, however, that working for a long time in the neighborhood of the electric currents seems to have an ill effect, and several officers and men have been made sick by it. The effect produced is said not to be destructive to the flesh as is the X-ray, but rather attacks the nervous system. Means will be found, however, to overcome this difficulty, and it is predicted that the war of the future may count upon one more effective arm.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Collars for Midsummer Reach Height of Lowness

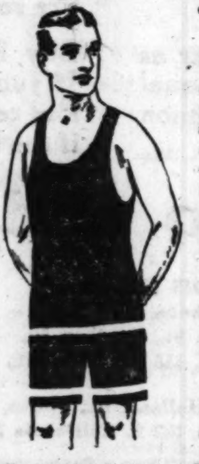
By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

NEW YORK.—Fault finders, who carp that "whatever is is wrong," often declare that the wardrobe of the well dressed man of today is a more extensive, as well as a more expensive, affair than it used to be. Granted. Sports, travel, motoring, week ends, country dances, and increasing social obligations have introduced special garments for special occasions, from duck and flannel trousers for tennis to woolen and linen knickers for golf. However, the manner in which men dress today is merely of a piece with the scale upon which men live—better, more luxuriously, more appreciatively. Nevertheless, an extensive wardrobe is not, in the end, an expensive wardrobe. To possess many garments lessens the wear to which each garment is put. Moreover, it teaches us to take care of our clothes, drape our coats, tree our shoes, and perform all those big, little tasks which add to the looks and life of a man's wardrobe.



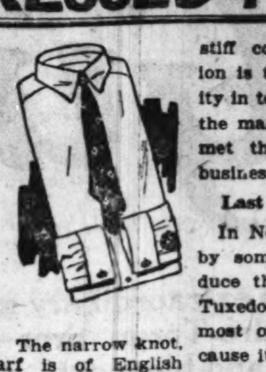
Even though some of us might not take kindly to prohibition, we all take to water, especially in August. The general fashions in swimming suits were described in a previous article. Portrayed here is the sort of a cap often worn by seasoned swimmers, who wish to guard the head against the sharp and sudden impact of cleaving the water in diving. If you have come to the age when the waistline expands and the hairline recedes, such a cap will prevent sunburn upon an otherwise defenseless scalp. Divers' caps are fashioned of thin rubber, transparent oiled silk, or waterproofed woven or knitted stuffs, as may be preferred, plain or striped to tally in color with the stripes upon the swimming trunks and shirt.

Within the Waves and the Law.

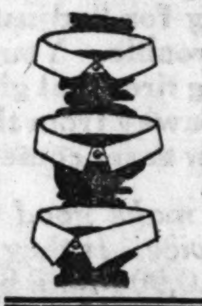


Illustrated is the swimming suit having a shirt which drapes over the outside of the trunks. It is a one garment suit, but of an ingenious type which is permitted upon all beaches, whereas the ordinary one garment suit is barred by the grim, gruff Cerberus who represents Mrs. Grundy. Instead of having to be pulled on over the head, this suit is drawn on from the bottom, and the shirt fastens over the left shoulder with snap fasteners or diminutive buttons. The neck and armholes are cut low for freedom, and the trunks are short and wide for unhindered leg play.

Monotone Shirts—Varitone Scarfs.



White shirts of silk, oxford cloth, cheviot, or linen batiste with ditto—attached — collar are cool and smart for midmost summer and allow the boldest cravats to be worn. One of these shirts is pictured. It has the French fashion double cuffs and a monogram embroidered upon the left sleeve. The narrow knot, four in hand scarf is of English foulard with hand blocked diamond figures in a brightly contrasting color.



A trio of spruce hot weather starched collars is grouped. The first has a wide opening with rounded corners. The second is more narrowly spaced with sharp corners. The third is widely spaced with peaked points. All are two ply in fabric, giving much of the flexibility of a soft collar together with the fixity of the stiff collar. The whirligig of fashion is turning toward greater formality in town clothes, which accounts for the many more starched collars to be met this summer, especially among business and professional men.

Last Minute Modes of the Week.

In New York it is being attempted by some well dressed men to introduce the silk hat with the dinner—Tuxedo—jacket, an experiment which most of us do not view kindly, because it is playing fast and loose with custom and tradition.

The "T" shirt for tennis is a slipover garment of roughish wool, lined with smooth wool, designed to make the player perspire freely and to be absorbent, to boot.

Sporting jackets of stockingette cloth in heather intermixtures are light garments with the needful give and take to grant unhindered arm sway and shoulder play.

White duck trousers are preferred to white flannel by crack tennis players this season, because duck slips over the knee in stooping, while flannel, being of thicker weave, catches on the leg.

First into the field with new 1922 models! The beautiful 1922 Davis is ready for your inspection.

The body lines are low, harmonious and distinctively original. The body and coach work are brilliantly executed. The colors are delightfully different—refreshing and distinctive color combinations make the 1922 Davis stand out as a car apart. The colors are Beaver Brown, "Blue Devil" blue or deep maroon at your option.

The 1922 chassis is the culmination of our twelve years' experience in the building of fine automobiles. It is simple, sturdy, strong and accessible, marvelously balanced and efficient.

Prices for 1922 are based on the present, actual cost of production. At its prices the Davis represents the very maximum of value. It is, as it has always been, a fine car at a moderate price. An equivalent price can not buy greater value. You can not buy more for a great deal more money—a less price will buy a great deal less.

See the beautiful new Davis models. Compare them by any standard, with any car. The Davis welcomes any comparison—especially a comparison based on its dollar-for-dollar value.

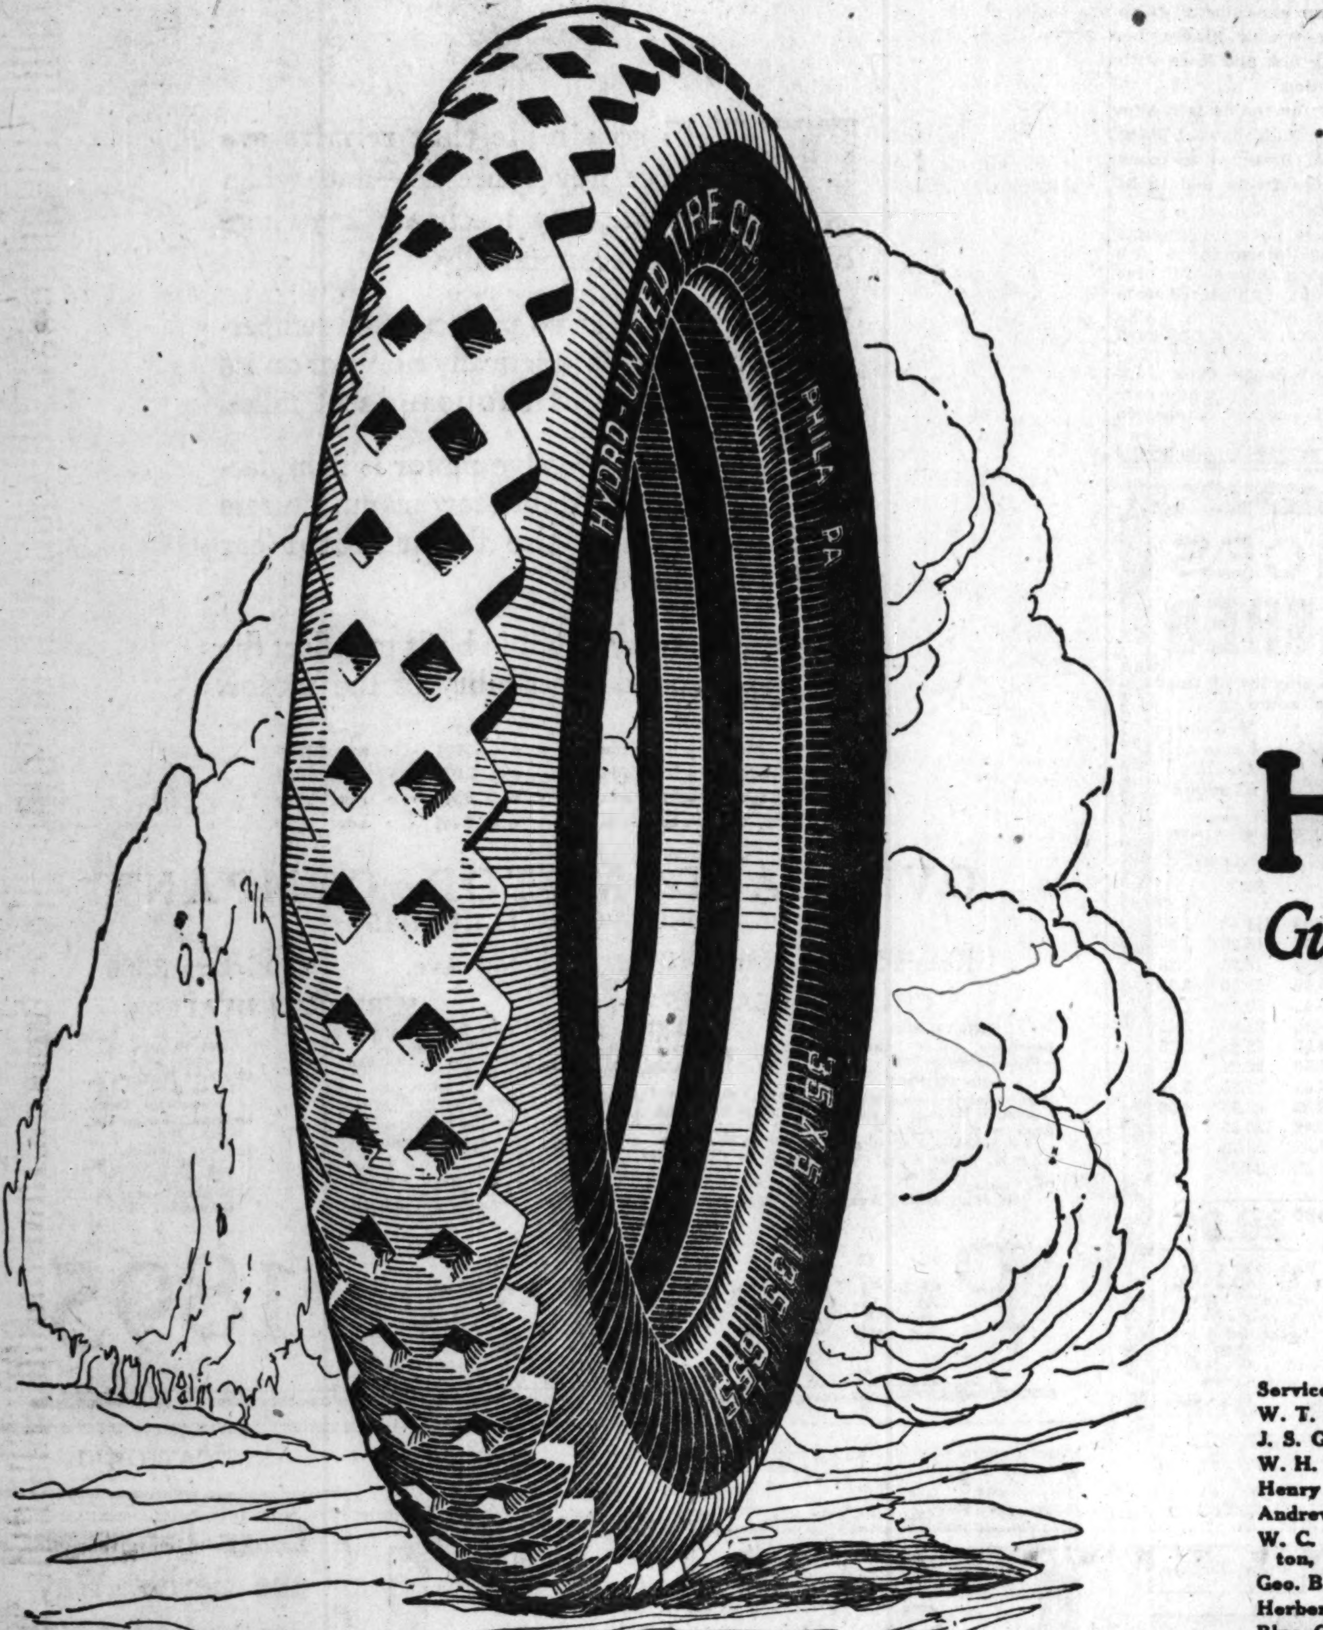
Fearlessly Guaranteed!



HYDRO-UNITED TIRE CO.
PHILA. PA.

The extraordinary guarantee of 10,000 miles on Hydro-Toron tires—against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out—means our own confidence in these tires.

You are not looking for "adjustments." They mean nothing but trouble. You can keep away from them by buying tires that give the promised mileage. We keep away from them by building tires that in very few cases come back.

Hydro-Toron tires make good on this 10,000-mile continuous service. If they don't, you get a settlement on the 10,000-mile basis absolutely. And remember, we consider stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out as tire defects and treat with you accordingly.

Freedom from ordinary tire troubles is built into Hydro-Toron tires in two ways:

First, our wonderful Internal Hydraulic Expansion process prevents injury to the tire while it is being made.

A heavy fabric bag, holding water under pressure, is placed in the tire before vulcanizing. This bag is pumped full of water heated to the proper vulcanizing temperature. The right pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch is applied inside the tire.

All the pressure is from within. No crushing, bruising pressure by forcing the halves of an iron mold together. Result—a smooth, evenly built tire, with every layer of fabric in its proper place—free from buckles and blisters.

Second—the "Toron" chemical no-rot treatment of all fabric used; a new treatment that increases tensile strength, increases the holding power of layers and tread, causes every particle of fabric to become impregnated with rubber, and prevents rot, oxidation and deterioration in all its forms.

HYDRO-TORON TIRES

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone-bruise, Rim-cut, Blow-ou

These greater mileage tires are as big as cords, better than cords, yet sell at standard fabric prices.

A process and a fabric treatment that come as near as possible to insuring perfect tires—plus the oversize equal to cords—and yet costing you no more than common fabric tires.

Become a Hydro-Toron user—a happy patron of better tire service—now!

Buy Hydro-Torons at any of the places listed below. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship C. O. D. and return every penny of the price and carrying charges if the tires are not all that you expect.

THE POTTERS

The Car Goes to the Shop.

by J. P. McEvoy

ILLUSTRATIONS BY J. H. STRIEBEL

PROLOGUE.

It used to be that if one broke a part on an automobile it was worth while to have it fixed or replace it with a new one. Nowadays it is much cheaper to turn your car in as part payment on the part and buy another car.

It was not like that in the olden days,
In the days beyond recall,
When you paid for just the work they did,
Just the real amount—that's all.

Today the total is found by adding to the actual cost such necessary items as the day of the month, the year, the ward number, and the street address. If the cashier thinks you still have some money left, she adds your engine number and the license to the bill and multiplies the total by the horse power.

Scene I.—Pa Hears a Knock.

Pa is guiding the faithful family chariot through the morning mob office bound. With him in the front seat is neighbor Rankin, on his way to Pa's office, where the oil deal will be consummated, with the delivery by Pa of his leases to Rankin in return for $2,000 ($1,000 of which is a bonus—profit, velvet, or off the nut, in the elegant patois of the circus lot).

RANKIN (who, like all motor guests, believes he should entertain with conversation in return for his ride):
It's a wonder to me that we're still alive
The way that some of these dumbells drive.
Lookit that taxicab cut in ahead,
Some of these days they'll be knocking 'im dead.

PA: Why should he care if he runs into us?
It costs him nothing . . . that isn't his bus.

RANKIN: Lookit the cars . . . as far as you can see.
Where do they come from? It sure beats me.

PA: There's hardly room in the streets at that—
(to other driver):
Hey, you boob . . . lookit where you're at?

(Which pleasant matutinal greeting is answered in kind by the motorist addressed: Who's a boob? . . . You're a boob. . . . O, zat so! Yeh, that's so . . . It is, huh? . . . It sure is, etc. . . . Also showing that men may go faster on wheels, but they travel with a fairer courtesy and finer fellowship on foot.)

RANKIN: How many miles to the gallon do you get?

PA (lying like a gentleman and a motorist):
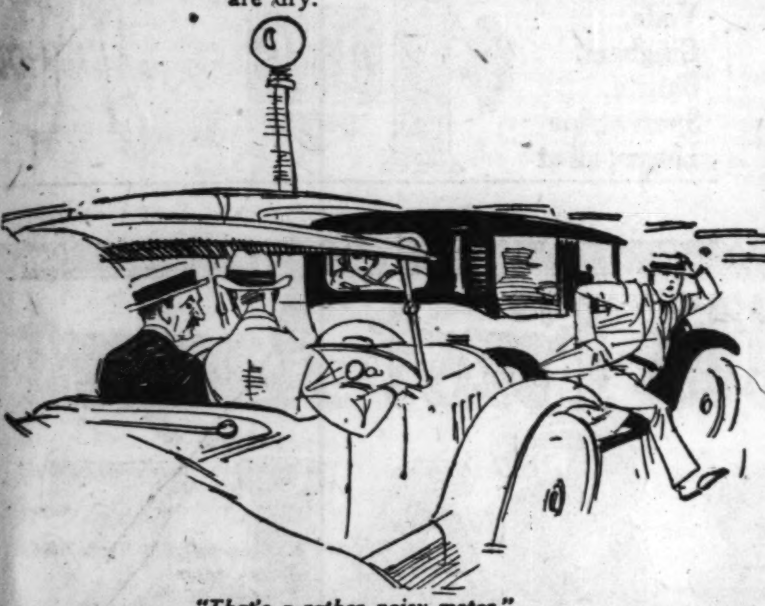
Twenty, I believe, but I'm not sure yet.

RANKIN: I can av'rage twenty-two when the country roads are dry.

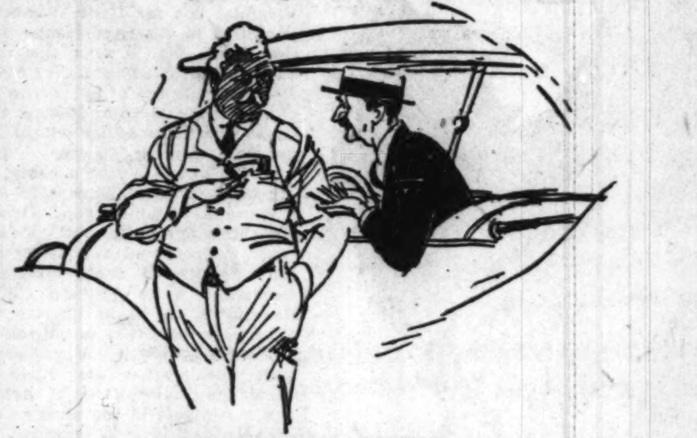


"That's a rather noisy motor."

RECORDING ANGEL:
Mark up Thomas Rankin with another awful lie.

(Thousands of infinite ledgers for automobile offenses exclusively have been installed in the Celestial Recording Office, with three shifts of lightning calculators working eight hours each.)

RANKIN: Have you got those leases I bought in your shop? . . .
Can you park down there? Will the copper let you stop?
That's a rather noisy motor . . . you've a knock or else a slap . . .
Why don't you take it to the shop . . . it may be just a tap. . . .



"Ya gotta wait your turn."

MOTOR (softly but persistently):
Plop. . . . . .Plop. . . . . .Plop. . . . . .Plop.
Plop. . . . . .Plop. . . . . .Plop.

PA: I guess I orta get it fixed—
I'll take it to the shop. . . .
Here we are . . . we'll leave the car . . .
I'll fix it with the cop.

(Pa and Rankin disembark and go upstairs to Pa's office.)

Scene II.—The Garage.

ATTENDANT: You' can't block up the doorway—ya gotta drive in or get out, one or the other.

PA: I got a knock or somep'n (driver farther in). Where'll I go?

ATTENDANT (at some invisible person in the dark depths of the rear):
Jack, O, Jack, c'mere an' take a look this guy's motor. (To Pa): Put 'er in these (indicating hole that looks at least two feet wide).

PA: It's a knock, I think, or some'n. (Goes into first and starts maneuvering car into hole indicated.)

ATTENDANT: Hey, wait a minute—not so fast—now cut it—now back—wait a minute—now straight ahead—a little more—now back—cut it—CUT IT—more yet—now straighten'er out—there, that's enough—THAT'S ENOUGH.

PA (to attendant, who isn't paying the slightest attention):
I just noticed it this morning. I think it's a knock or somep'n—sounded like a knock. . . .

(Attendant goes away in the middle of the sentence. . . . Pa sits and waits for the mythical Jack . . . Jack doesn't show . . . it gets hotter . . . and hotter . . . somebody backs out, blowing clouds of black, noisome, suffocating gas from both exhausts—burning soft coal evidently . . . five more minutes, still no Jack. Attendant returns . . . looks at Pa blankly . . . has forgotten all about him.)

ATTENDANT: Going out?

PA (testily): I just came in. Somebody was going to look at my car. . . . I got a knock or somep'n. . . . I've been waiting here now for an hour. (It's been only fifteen minutes, as a matter of fact.)

ATTENDANT (gruffly):
Ya gotta wait your turn, ya gotta wait your turn. Some of you guys think everybody ought to drop everything and run to wait on you when you come in. If you ain't got no time to wait, go somewhere's else. We got more'n we can do now as it is. . . . O, Jack!

VOICE (from the dark):
Waddye want, huh?

ATTENDANT: C'mere, will ya.

VOICE: Aw, forget it; I'm busy.

ATTENDANT (proudly):
Ya see how busy we are, huh? (Walks away.) You can wait if you wanta.

(Pa waits . . . it gets hotter'n ever . . . more exhausts . . . more gas . . . ah, a mechanic.)

MECHANIC: You the one got a cracked cylinder?

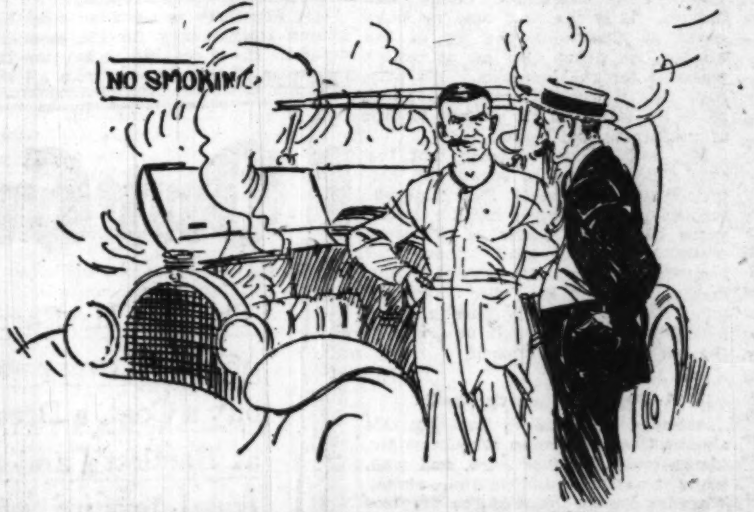
PA: Not that I know of.

MECHANIC: Let's see. . . . (Pulls up bonnet and peers into motor.) Not so good. Start the old oil can and let's hear her run.

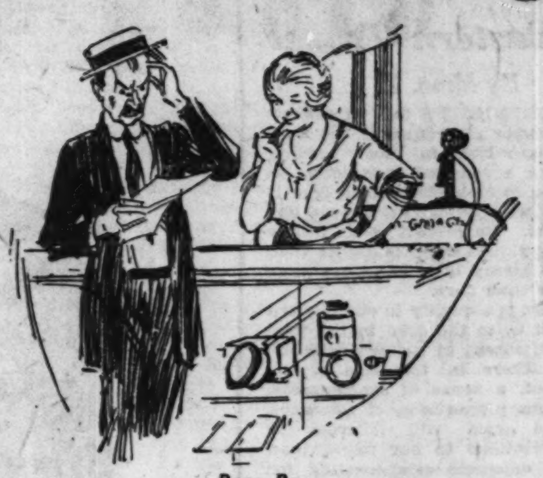
(Pa starts it . . . pretty girl drives a roadster in for gas. . . . Mechanic forgets all about Pa and rushes to wait on her . . . so do three or four others . . . she gets gas and oil . . . she wonders very prettily about her tires, maybe the horrid old things aren't inflated enough. . . . Pa's mechanic inflates the horrid old things—they had about thirty pounds in them. . . . All business suspended until the roadster leaves. . . . Pa's mechanic returns gloomily and listens to motor.)

MECHANIC: Leave it and I'll go over it tomorrow or the next day.

PA: But can't I get it sooner'n that?



"Ain't got no idea what it'll cost, have you?"



Poor Pa.

MECHANIC (contemptuously):
Should say not. Lucky to get it then.

PA (anxiously):
What's the matter with it? Knock or somep'n?

MECHANIC (mysteriously):
Can't tell till you take 'em down. May have cracked cylinder or somep'n.

(This particular mechanic has the cracked cylinder complex . . . just as some doctors always trace your troubles to your appendix or your gall bladder.)

PA (trying to make it sound offhand):
Ain't got no idea what it'll cost, have you?

MECHANIC (with infinite contempt):
I ain't got nothing to do with that part of it. I fix 'em, and the office does the rest.
(Chorus: I'll say it does.)
There! that'll do . . . shut her off . . . and leave the key in 'er; we might want to move her aroun' . . . go to the office and get your ticket.

PA (helplessly):
Where's the office.

MECHANIC (helpfully):
Look for it.

(Curtain.)

Scene III.—The Bill.

(Pa has come to get his car several days later. Nobody in the garage seems to know anything about it . . . walks around showing check to various people who look at him blankly for a minute, say "wait a minute," and then go away and never come back. . . . Finally somebody takes him to the cashier's window, where his name, address, telephone number, etc., are inquired about, and then he is handed something which knocks him for a row of baked apples. It is

Announcing our Initial Display of Advance Fall Fashions

Canton Crepe Frock with Russian Embroidery and Squirrel.

NEW styles again herald a new season! Already famous designers have sent to us marvels of exquisite line and coloring. Approved by the house of Leschin, they are authoritative. Confident in their unusual appeal to women who appreciate the fine art of beauty in dress, we offer this early collection—priced in a spirit of fairness.

FROCKS

The cloth dress in fascinating variations—Cantons with endless new quirks and details, dinner frocks, evening gowns—all of them embody just the features most in favor, most distinctive, and most becoming.

$55 to $395

SUITS

Leschin suits this season more than ever will appeal to the discriminating sense of the "better dressed." Especially attractive are the new costume suits. We have sketched one at the right.

$75 to $395

WRAPS

Nothing so serviceable and attractive as the new wraps! Most of them are coat-like in style, but with all manner of trimmings in fur and embroidery. The whole showing is delightfully new and clever.

$55 to $495

FURS

Furs should be chosen deliberately and with care, as to style, quality and ultimate value. Our collection embraces all the luxurious pieces of fine furs selected by master furriers.

Coats from $395 to $10,000

HATS

Already Paris has sent us large shipments of her choicest modes. These are hats for the woman of taste—and, of course, some for her whose taste is capricious.

$15 to $50

BLOUSES

With the fall comes increasing need of blouses. We have selected blouses that are a delight to wear—from the strictly tailored to the most elaborate of costume blouses.

$6.75 to $75

LINGERIE

Distinguished by delicacy of design and those clever touches which make of underwear a thing of infinite delight.

$3.95 to $150

SWEATERS

The sweater needs of milady have not been forgotten. Any number of them are here, from the silkiest silk to the softest, woolly ones.

$10 to $75

SKIRTS

Sports skirts have found a niche of their own in most women's wardrobes. The beauty of their stripes and plaids is quite irresistible.

$15 to $35

MISS HAZEL J. LUNDIN

Miss Alice Silverthorne, who resides with her aunt, Mrs. Francis E. May of 3330 Sheridan road, sailed in the late spring to pass the summer abroad. Miss Silverthorne recently joined Mrs. Howard H. Spaulding, Leicester Spaulding, and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Spaulding Jr. on a motor trip in southern Europe, and is now at Biarritz for a stay of several weeks.

Announcement is made by Mrs. Emma Lundin of 854 Waveland avenue of the engagement of her daughter, Hazel J., to John Lloyd Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lloyd Wright. No date has been set for the wedding.

Western Prairie Joy to Eye After Eastern Travel

By Mme. X.

A FORTNIGHT'S tour of eastern summer resorts sends the loyal citizen back to Cook county with a renewed satisfaction in his or her local habitat. The east is delightful with its aged mansions and great elms. Its perfect roads incline one to envy. Its hills are higher than ours. Its glassy little lakes are more numerous than ours.

But there is a quality in our western life which is, to the dyed in the wool westerner, absent in eastern daily existence. There is, this side of the Alleghenies, a sense of spaciousness, of generous proportions, of tolerance, of genial good will inherent in all our relations to our fellow man which is adequate compensation for the less fully developed social culture that the captious analyst notices as one of our attributes or defects.

We have no Boston Brahmins, but we do have sleeping porches and screens, which are often absent in eastern houses. Eventually these material improvements of ours may develop a race of philosophers and poets. If one does not have to scratch mosquito bites and can sleep under the stars, it ought to promote philosophy and poetry. Time alone, however, will show what environment can accomplish in this direction.

The Grand Old Man—Monadnock.

Having at last seen Mount Monadnock from the broad and stately terrace of Franklin MacVeagh's place near Dublin and from Prof. Laughlin's generously proportioned study window near East Jaffrey, the writer will henceforth look upon the Chicago godchild of this grand old New Hampshire mounatin, the massive block on the corner of Dearborn street and Jackson boulevard, with especial association. Instead of stone, brick, and tiles, the bold contour and densely wooded slopes of the granite state giant will rise above the turmoil of the city streets.

Mr. MacVeagh's place is reached by a charming wood road, which branches off from the black and glistening state highway. Ah, those smooth state roads which make motoring through New England such a delight! When shall we achieve them?

Arrived at Knollwood, the name of the MacVeagh estate, the traveler almost instinctively drifts swiftly across the hospitable entrance hall to the broad terrace which overlooks one of the loveliest views in that region of fine outlooks. An almost tumultuous vista of densely wooded hills surges away and away to the distant horizon, the house being set so high that most of the landscape seems below the spectator. An occasional "pond," as they call their mountain tarns there, gleams out of the leaping waves of foliage in the far distance.

At the right the grand old man of the range, Monadnock, leaps skyward serene and imposing. No other residence is in sight, though the district is well settled with beautiful country places. Adjacent to the terrace is a delightful formal garden, a place of low green hedges and winding walks, inviting to a contemplative stroll at sunset when the earth breathes its sweetest fragrance to the dying day.

In the Library.

The house is spacious and friendly. Its library is one of the most impressive rooms that I know of. Its proportions are unusually palatial, though just what they are I hestitate to record. It looks to be about sixty feet long by forty feet wide and twenty feet high. The floor is raised by three steps at one end to form a wide dais.

At the opposite end is a superb Venetian structure of twisted, gilded, and carved pillars, such as visitors to the city of Doges have seen only in some of the finest palaces there. It encloses a generous fireplace where almost every night of the summer a cheerful fire of huge logs is sure to be blazing.

The room is furnished with the most comfortable easy chairs and couches ever offered to guests by hospitable hosts. Many rare things gathered from all parts of the earth are scattered about, hanging lamps from Turkish mosques, vases from Persia, brocades from Rome, bronzes from Russia—old, departed, dead Russia—and the effect is delightful. It is a place for social intercourse of an unusually pleasant kind. Many large rooms are forbidding by reason of their size, but not this one.

One is struck in motoring through the east by the comparatively small distances that separate places. One can in a day motor from western Massachusetts to Maine, taking in New Hampshire on the way. It is no ride at all from Manchester By-the-Sea, Mass., to Manchester, Va., places which used to be separated in the pre-motor era by a long and intricate journey which would take the better part of a day.

Automobiles have changed the whole aspect of life in New England and New York. Owners of cars hardly ever use trains in that part of the world. The excellent roads have much to do with this transference of travel from public vehicles to privately owned ones. Two hundred and fifty or three hundred miles is no unusual record for a day's motor trip.

A Ball in London.

Commenting on the conspicuous careers of many Chicago born women, a well known man remarked that our women were much more enterprising as world investigators than Chicago born men were, citing the late Lady Curzon (Mary Leiter), Lady Beatty (Ethel Field), Lady Lavery (Hazel Martyn), Mrs. Gerard Leigh (Helen Goudy), Princess Cantacuzene (Julia Dent Grant), and various others.

Recent social news from London rather contradicts this. Our former fellow citizen, Harry Gordon Selfridge, who is the present tenant of one of the great London mansions, Lansdowne House, occupies a prominent position both in the British capital's business and social life.

Recently Mr. Selfridge gave his fine London residence to the present Lady Curzon of Kedleston for a great charity ball. It was a brilliant occasion, which was attended by all of British swelldom.

One of the picturesque incidents of the affair, described with much detail by the London press, was when, as the trumpets announced supper, the gay throng was parted and Mme. Selfridge, Mr. Selfridge's frail looking, white haired, little 88 year old mother, was escorted by the Earl of Pembroke to sit at the right hand of the Prince of Wales at the latter's special request To the same table Mr. Selfridge took out the Marchioness of Anglesey, one of the great ladies in English society. Not the least remarkable feature of the occasion was the fact that Mme. Selfridge had that day come by airplane from Paris so as to arrive in time for the ball.

Years Do Not Bar Adventure.

After all, however, perhaps the incident emphasizes the Chicagoan's contention that our women are more adventurous than our men. Aren't we all rather proud to claim as a fellow citizen that gallant little old lady who could fly through the air so eagerly across the British channel, and meet, with such simple, unaffected grace, royalty and the backbone of British aristocracy? For Mrs. Selfridge is the same gentle, kindly, unassuming woman she used to be here in Chicago, undaunted either by the weight of years or the exalted rank of the guests at Lansdowne House.

She is an adventurous soul, in spite of her years. It is only a year or so since she took two of her granddaughters to South America on an extended tour, and returned as alert as ever from a trip which would have tired out a much younger traveler. Hats off to Mme. Selfridge!

Kings and Lords and Ladies.

The list of the guests that night at Harry Gordon Selfridge's home sounds like a compendium of the British peerage. Besides the Prince of Wales there were the King of Spain, the Marquis and Marchioness of Crewe, the Princess Alice, Lord and Lady Pembroke, the Countess of Ancaster, Lord and Lady Curzon of Kedleston, Lady Sarah Wilson, Sir John and Lady Lavery, the Duke and Duchess of Alba, Lady Islington, the Earl of Athlone, Lord Ivor Churchill, the Countess of Ilchester, the Viscount Wimborne, and so many other tremendously high muckymucks that the brain reels at contemplating their splendor and grandeur. We've nothing like it, even at the Pageant of Progress.

The descriptions of the costumes include mention of a descendant of the house of Leiter, Lady Irene Curzon, who is recorded as wearing her favorite emerald and paste bandeau. The Countess of Drogheda is cited as appearing in aluminum tissue and fringes. It is the first time we have heard of aluminum, the joy of the kitchen, as being also an attractive material for the ballroom. We only hope that it won't become so popular as to lift it out of its present sphere of usefulness and beauty.

Mr. Selfridge is, however, not the only Chicago man to occupy an historic British residence. Harry Marsh, formerly of our burg, has for many years been the master of Warwick castle, one of the most famous and beautiful of England's ancient monuments. He and his wife entertain many American friends there in a hospitable style which would do credit to the old kingmaker himself.

A Day at Warwick Castle.

Apropos, there is an amusing tale about a Chicago woman, who knew Mr. Marsh when he lived here, and who, while traveling in England, visited Warwick castle. One of the provisos of Mr. Marsh's tenancy is that on two days a week the castle is open to visitors at a shilling a head, which money goes to the Warwick coffers. The touring Chicago woman happened to go to Warwick on one of the days when it was not open to the public. She was much disappointed when she was turned away from the door. At that moment she met Mr. Marsh. Not knowing that he was living there she expressed her chagrin to him.

He said: "Come along with me. I guess they'll let us in."

She was surprised at the facility with which he gained access to the hoary castle. When he further showed her around with a surprising knowledge of the lay of the land she was still more mystified. But the peak of bewilderment was reached when he invited her to have tea with him and his wife in the baronial hall. Then the situation was cleared up and one of the great adventures of her tour was established.

Another Chicago man to achieve renown and a famous dwelling is James W. Ellsworth, who owns both an ancient castle on Lake Lucerne and the historic villa Palmieri on the slopes of Fiesole, above Florence, Italy. This was once the abode of the great Medici family, rulers of Florence, and later, much later, the favorite residence of Queen Victoria when she traveled in Italy. The Ellsworths have filled it with beautiful and rare things, and there exercise much hospitality.

Mr. Ellsworth is no alien who has chosen Italy merely for his ease and delight. He is seeking to develop the resources of the country with all the ingenuity and enterprise which distinguishes Americans. He is said to be deeply interested in a scheme for harnessing the tremendous water power latent in the streams which rise in the Apennines. Were this accomplished, Italy's coalless state would no longer hamper her great industrial possibilities. He was a coal merchant here. In Italy he is—well, what is the opposite of coal merchant?

Long Distance Real Estate.

A long distance deal in real estate was that accomplished last spring when Charles R. Crane was still American minister at Peking. His son, Richard T. Crane III., who was American minister to Czecho-Slovakia, cabled his father asking him if he, Charles R. Crane, would buy for his son the well known old Virginia place on the James river known as "Westover." This is a beautiful estate which had been in the possession of the Byrd family for generations until a few years ago, when it was sold to a Boston family named, I think, Harrison. After a short residence there the Boston family, not finding life as exciting nor as interesting as a country place at the north, decided to sell it.

Mrs. Richard T. Crane III. is from Virginia, not far from Westover, and is related to the Byrd family, so when she found that it was again on the market she was desirous of owning it. Her father-in-law granted the request of his son, and from Peking the purchase was made of a home in Virginia for the family in Prague.

R. T. Crane II., with a party, is touring the shores of Europe in a yacht, if rumor is not mistaken. Great travelers the Crane family! Charles R. Crane is reported as having successfully negotiated those thousands of dangerous miles between China and Russia, via the Trans-Siberian railway. When his term was up as minister to China he bought a car and stocked it with pins, needles, and other articles which he thought might help make him acceptable in the strange and unfriendly districts he planned to traverse on his way from Peking to Moscow. Then the permit for the trip was rescinded, whereupon he sold all his equipment, including the car. The powers that be in Russia, however, again reconsidered, and the undaunted Mr. Crane bought back, at greatly increased prices, his original outfit and apparently accomplished what must have been a remarkable journey. Such is travel under the rule of the soviets!

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

ginning to take its place as a factor in social life there. Last Sunday about forty Lake Foresters took their lunch baskets to the groves which are a feature of the grounds. There they built bonfires and spread out their edibles. Soon the summer breeze was fragrant with ineffable perfume of ham and eggs, and the birds hushed their songs as the voices of the picnickers filled the air. After luncheon some played golf while others explored the club grounds from the beach to the railway tracks. The golf course promises to be one of the best in the west when it is finished.

Among those who took part in this al fresco party were Mr. and Mrs. George McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, and Clive Runnells.

Meanwhile, the summer is swiftly flying towards its finish. Apples are falling from the prolific trees in the Aldis gardens, and worms are eating them—a month too early for either apples or worms. The purple grackle, which greeted us vociferously in May and then fled further north, are once again clamoring loudly in the bushes 'neath our windows and announcing that they are on their way to Jamaica where they will be as vociferous in the gardens of the Titchfield hotel at Port Antonio as they are here.

Goldenrod has for some time been warning hayfeverites that it is time to sneeze. We have had our chimney swept for we have a "hunch" that in a fortnight open fires will be needed and that the most ardent summer known to the present generation will have passed into history.

ART and ARCHITECTURE

Art League Sets New Standard for Picture Postcard

By Eleanor Jewett.

AN institution universal in scope is that of picture postcards. Go east or west, south or north, from the Pacific to the Atlantic, from the Mediterranean to the North sea, and at each station you touch, each port you skirt, in obvious proximity to the newspaper which tempts the coin from your purse, you will find the postcard with its opportune call to send by its facile means a word home. There is no country town too insignificant but what has its pictures of Main street and the new bank buildings; no city too vast but what offers photographs of its wonders—and sometimes of its monstrosities.

It is to prevent Chicago being guilty of this last, that the Municipal Art league of Chicago has secured a set of picture postcards artistic and satisfying, showing the city in rain and sun at its most beautiful. The following letter reached me this week with a set of the cards. It is from Eames MacVeagh, vice president of the league:

"The long heralded Municipal Art league postcard series of Chicago are now on the market. We are hoping that they will not only spread the gospel of better taste and higher art in postcards, but that they will make us more appreciative of what we have and desirous of making our city a still greater and more beautiful one.

"If these cards are well received we are hopeful that what we have done in Chicago in postcards will be emulated in other cities, and that cheap and ugly cards that degrade the taste and caricature the city will no longer have an almost undisputed field.

"These cards will be sold principally through the hotels and book shops, though they will be furnished to any one on application. This is not a money making enterprise as far as the league is concerned. We trust that as a civic endeavor and a truly artistic creation you will give it all of the publicity possible in your valuable department.

"The cards are reproduced by photogravure, and are for the most part from photographs made by members of the Chicago Camera club, which conducted a competition for this series. There are twenty-four cards in a series, and they will be sold at 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen."

This tells about the cards up to a certain point. It says nothing of the extremely attractive qualities which will make the cards speak for themselves in the public mind. They really are, for postcards, remarkable. They give a bird's eye view of the high points in the category of charms which the Windy City, in spite of the fearful drawback of its stockyards, does possess. In addition, each card is perfect in itself. Evidently no care has been omitted which could add to the perfection of this enterprise.

Among the views are glimpses of our parks, of the Chicago university, of the old Field museum, of the Art institute, of St. Gaudens' Abraham Lincoln, of Michigan avenue, and of the sport with sailing vessels which the nearness of Lake Michigan makes easily enjoyed.

We miss, in the list of those whose pictures are represented, the name of George H. High. Mr. High does beautiful work in photography, his hobby, and at most of the Chicago Camera club exhibitions his pictures are well to the fore. Possibly the absence of his name from the Municipal Art league roll of honor is due to his prolonged excursion to London and the continent. Another whose name is missing is Bernard F. Rogers Jr. He, too, has shown some excellent things at various times.

Among those who are represented in the series of cards are A. H. Born, Paul Wierum, John J. Ryan, Harry C. Keane, E. L. MacMillan, E. E. Gray, Gordon C. Abbott, L. B. Mayo, B. J. Morris, and C. N. Bowen.

In line with the spirit expressed in the catalogue of the exhibition of introspective artists at the Arts club last spring are the paragraphs telling of the intentions and ideals of a new artistic group that some of these same exhibitors are fathering. It is not merely a group—that word is unfortunate—it is more a society; the bud of an artistic socialistic society which its founders hope may find lodging in all parts of the earth.

The following gives a suggestion of the organization's origin. The letter starts:

"Inclosed I am sending you the preamble and constitution of the recently founded international artists' organization, Cor Ardens.

"At the beginning of this year a small number of Chicago artists began to lay the foundation for this organization. In April Prof. Roerich, the Russian painter who may be remembered for his curious and instructive exhibit at the Art institute, came to this city and gave the greatest encouragement to us, saying that in London, Paris, and the many other art centers he has visited similar ideas and ideals were prevailing in certain artistic circles.

"M. Roerich joined the organization, gave valuable advice, and is now active in communicating with artists the world over who are in sympathy with the ideals of Cor Ardens. Those eligible for membership are architects, composers, writers, poets, painters, sculptors, and graphic artists."

Then follows an exposition of the inner meaning of Cor Ardens:

"Cor Ardens recognizes art as the universal medium of expression and an evidence of life. It realizes the phenomenon that ideals in art manifest themselves simultaneously in all parts of the world, and therefore acknowledges the creative impulse, irrespective of heritage. Art should be created with honest mind and from genuine necessity. Cor Ardens is a concrete move to bring together, at least in spirit, sympathetic isolated individuals.

"We must walk the rising road of grandeur, enthusiasm, and achievement with all the powers of our spirit."

The organization aims (so the commentary continues), first, to form a brotherhood of artists which is international; second, to hold exhibitions without uries, without prizes, and without sales; third, to create centers where art and artists of all countries will be welcome; fourth, to work for the establishment of universal museums where works donated by members may have a permanent home.

"Cor Ardens shall be the emblem as well as the symbol of this brotherhood of artists."

Some points in the outline of this new organization are almost smile provoking if one reads them with the slightest deviation from the line of strictest consideration. For example, put together the thought of exhibitions to be held with no sales permitted and the thought of the establishing of permanent homes for works donated by the members. That is a clever second thought, probably conceived by the wife of one of the organizers, who saw in it an honorable way of providing space for canvases that otherwise would litter her hard swept rooms until the blowing of Gabriel's horn.

Also consider the impressive sentence: "Art should be created with honest mind and from genuine necessity." The meaning of "genuine necessity" is far from clear. Is it the intention of these artists to do only potboilers? Such work, so we are generally informed, springs always directly from the direst necessity on the part of the artist—that most genuine necessity to keep the wolf from the door and the bill collector at least partially appeased.

It has not been stated as a rule that pot-boilers are of necessity the best art. It is admitted by many persons that a creative spirit does its best work in circumstances of comparative leisure and comfort. The garret is an excellent forcing bed. But for long years of successful work, of work that advances by being done, it would not be a forcing bed, but a morgue. Too much discouragement, too much poverty and bitterness, kills the artistic spirit as easily as too much luxury and too soft living.

Therefore the expression "genuine necessity" is food for thought. So also is the expression "with honest mind." The artist that works against his inclination, as many a man must do before he has made his mark, must he be stamped intellectually dishonest? Yet pot-boilers, those bits of necessitated work, are the result usually of their creator's working in ways contrary to those which he yearns to follow. How, then, amy "honest mind" and "genuine necessity" be reconciled?

Thus it might be continued, this tearing apart of the precepts back of Chicago's youngest art endeavor. But why should one go further, when the best proof of a pudding is always in the eating? Better far now to wait, having mentioned the society at length, and see what fruit is put forth from the bud. By its works shall we know it. With the coming season probably Cor Ardens will give at least some intimation of what kind of paintings and sculpture we may expect from its members. Those who wish it well, hope the exhibit will be of the greatest interest and significance.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

WELL, MEBBE SO, I DUNNO.

They say the Irish scrap will be
Soon settled satisfactorily,
Lloyd George and De Valera claim
They'll do their best to play the game
And everybody else agrees
They talk polite and strive to please.
And soon the Angel Peace will smile
Above the weary Emerald Isle . . .
Well, mebbe so,
But, I dunno.

The railroads we are told by some
Are going on the well known bum,
While others equally expert say
They're getting better every day.
"We need more waterways," some cry,
"Why, no such thing," some more reply.
But, who knows which and who knows what,
Or are they all a dumbell lot?
Mebbe so,
I dunno.

Some people in their places riz
To tell us what is wrong with biz,
And others say there's nothing wrong
And sing an optimistic song,
And others say it's shotohel
And others say it's going swell,
And some say this and some say that.
Do all these guys know where they're at?
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

Today we read the newest styles
Are guns that shoot three hundred miles;
And farther on we read that Greece
Is bent on fracturing the Peace;
And Japs don't care to parley-voo
If they must give up fighting too—
How sweet to hear some people say
The world grows better every day.
We—ll, mebbe so . . . mebbe so,
But, I dunno.

NO LUCK

By Guy Lee.

I wish I had the cuckoo's luck,
When on the L or surface faring,
Whose happy fate it is to pluck
Romance without a dash of daring.
He seldom fails to grab a seat,
A kindly fortune seems to steer him,
And right away he finds a neat
And nifty Vision dimpling near him.

Not me! I'm parked upon my dogs
In perpendicular position.
On every side a bozo jogs
My ribs as if 'twas his ambition.
And if perchance I snag a place
To snuggle down, I lamp no cutie
Next to me. Nay. No form of grace;
No face of charm; no dream of beauty.

Ah, no! My chance companion is
A fussy bird with whiskered fenders;
Or else a heavy waisted Liz;
Or else a nut who wears suspenders.
Or mebbe it's a tank who leers
With used frumenti to deride me.
But never yet in all the years
Has any pippin sat beside me.

FARM AND GARDEN

Cook County One of Richest Farm Sections in Land

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

ONE OF COOK COUNTY'S BEST.—This black and white is doing her share to help Cook county rank high agriculturally. She has a right to be called Lady Bessie Fayne Korndyke or any other long name, for she holds the state record for "manufacturing" butter, producing 38.13 pounds in seven days and 146.55 pounds in thirty days. This Holstein is owned by the Buffalo Creek farm.

WITH its task of producing food for 2,701,705 Chicagoans, Cook county has become one of the richest agricultural counties in America, taking favorable rank with Los Angeles county, Cal., and Lancaster county, Pa., the wealthiest counties from an agricultural standpoint in the whole country. The big job assigned to the 88,614 men, women, and children who live on the 348,161 acres of farm land in Cook county is getting bigger every year with the increasing population of its huge metropolis and the growing complexities of intensified agricultural problems.

The rural, as well as the urban population of Cook county, continues to increase, which has made it necessary to cut up the land into smaller and smaller tracts, until now there are more than 5,000 farms in the county. Four of them are operated by Negroes. About two-fifths of them are operated by tenants.

A Section of Truck Farms.

Cook county and Chicago are too often considered synonymous. Chicago does not spread over the greater part of the county, as some have supposed, for there is a strip of farm land north of the city and its suburb as large as all of Du Page county, and one on the south larger than Kendall county, used for the growing of grain, live stock, vegetables, and fruit. These two general and dairy farming areas do not comprise the total agricultural wealth of the county, for immediately surrounding the city proper and between the suburban towns is one of the richest truck growing sections in the United States.

In this district the largest greenhouses in the world have been built, and it is here that Chicago's big crop of flowers is grown. But Cook county truckers have more than that to boast about. The Chicago district—and Cook county farmers hold most of the stock in that district—produces from 85 to 90 per cent of all the onion sets that are grown in the whole United States.

Demand for Onions.

Last year it was estimated that onion growers in this district planted between 3,200 and 3,900 acres of onion seed for the growing of sets, producing, according to rough estimates, from 1,344,000 to 1,638,000 bushels of onion sets. This year it is estimated by good authorities that Cook county growers have grown approximately 2,600 acres of onion sets, using about 180,000 pounds of onion seed. That is an important phase of truck gardening in this country when it is considered that onions hold third place among the truck crops grown.

The great wealth and wide diversification of the county's wealth is hardly believable. Those who are in position to know say that there are about 300 acres of tomatoes growing in Cook county this year for tomato factories alone. Six to eight tons to the acre is considered a fair yield, which means that there will be produced from 3,600,000 to 4,800,000 pounds of tomatoes grown for canning purposes this season, if the weather is favorable.

At $15 a ton, which is the selling price this year, this would mean a return of from $27,000 to $36,000 for Cook county's tomato crop, and it is only one of the many important truck crops that are grown. A similar acreage of tomatoes was grown last year. This furnishes labor for a large army of men, for labor is one of the most important factors in growing tomatoes.

Where Nothing Is Wasted.

Onion sets, onions, pickles, sugar beets, and asparagus are considered the most important truck crops grown in Cook county. Growers are able to produce from 10 to 12 tons of sugar beets to the acre in this county, and the quality of the beets is considered superior to those grown in other districts.

In producing these crops much of the work is done by hand, furnishing labor for many thousands of workers. Cook county's band of horses is comparatively small. According to the census figures of last year, there is only an average of about three horses on every farm. With the county spotted with dairy farms, there is an average of about eight cows and an equal number of hogs on each farm. The truckers find that small herds of livestock work in with their general scheme of farming in utilizing some parts of the crops that would otherwise be wasted. C. G. Moehling, for example, has found that he can profitably utilize the green sweet corn stover by "putting it up green" after the roasting ears have all been pulled off and feeding it to his cattle in the form of ensilage.

Lady Bessie Holds the Record.

Out in the dairy district around Elgin, dairy herds of fifty to seventy-five cows are commonly found. Cook county claims the honor of having the largest accredited herd of dairy cattle, free from tuberculosis, in the state. This herd is on the Kate Miller farm near Barrington. When Cook county boosters sarted out to "Known Cook County First," they found that [illegible] county can boast of the state record dairy cow.

Over on the Dundee road, toward Wheeling, is the Buffalo Creek farm with the state record dairy cow, Lady Bessie Fayne Korndyke. She holds the state butter record for both seven and thirty days, producing 38.13 pounds of butter in seven days and 146.55 pounds of butter in thirty days. The Buffalo Creek farm herd also won more prizes for milk and butter records last year than any other herd in the state.

Until cucumber blight began stealing its toll from the pickle patch every year, Cook county ranked high in the growing of cucumbers. Thirty and forty acre pickle patches were common in Cook county until a few years ago. Added to the destructive work of this mysterious pest, truckers in this county have to deal with the potato leaf hopper, an insect that has cut Cook county's potato crop from 1,000,000 bushels annually to 546,250 bushels, last year's crop.

County Fair Looms.

Another blue ribboner on the long list of Cook county's accomplishments is the largest greenhouse in the world, at Morton Grove. It is owned by Poehlman Bros.

At harvest time this fall Cook county farmers expect to tell the whole country about some of the county's many achievements in agriculture. As the horn of plenty is being heaped to the brim, truckers, orchardists, dairymen, and farmers are going to pick the finest specimens from their gardens, orchards, barns, and fields, to be exhibited at the Cook county fair, to be held at Palatine Sept. 13 to 18.

Leading farmers of the county, by coöperating through their various organizations, particularly the Cook county farm bureau, are going to try hard this fall to show their customers, Chicagoans, and their neighbors at the other end of the county how they are struggling to improve the agricultural products they are placing on the market year after year. They are going to compare products as well as notes with their neighbors in order to improve their crops and live stock.

Farmer Must Study Constantly.

"We like to brush up once a year on the modern and successful methods of handling our intensified agricultural problems," said a truck grower.

"The problems of the Cook county farmer are so widely different from those of almost any other farmer in the state or middle west, and so intensified are his methods, that he has to make a constant study of them to be successful," said one of the fair officials. "He finds that the fair not only serves as a place to compete with his neighbor in the various contests, but it serves as a school.

"Fairs, particularly the county fairs, have always played an important part in bringing about rapid development in agriculture. Farmers in this county are finding it an easy task to prepare a few exhibits of their best crops or to bring along the choice animals of their herds, and it pays more than any other work they can do on tthe farm. When they display an exhibit they take more interest and begin to feel that it is their fair.

"The fair offers an opportunity for the farmer to show his products and also study the products grown by others. He often finds that his neighbor's crops are grown under different methods, and he learns to improve his own system of farming. The progressive farmer is always looking for something better than he has himself. The Cook county fair, being held close to the city, offers an opportunity for consumers and producers to discuss their mutual problems."

ASTRONOMY

THE MILKY WAY.

THE EDGE OF THE MILKY WAY

BY S.K.MAXWELL

GO out tonight and find some clear, dark place where there are no trees nor any lights to distract the view. Look up, and, spanning the sky in a belt running roughly from north to south, you will see the Milky Way. This blue-white glimmering band of light, here knotted with swarms of stars, here the merest haze of filmy light, here black and barren in its apparent emptiness, has excited the awe and wonder alike in the most savage and most learned men.

What is it? This question has no doubt been asked for many thousand years. And it is only very recently that this question could be answered truthfully to the slightest degree, and even now our answer is probably only the merest glimmering of the truth.

The Milky Way is made of stars, fully formed, still in shape of dust, dying, dead, and recondensing.

But let us take a journey in our fancy out to the regions of the Milky Way, that we may see what now we must infer. We leave the earth with the speed of light—186,000 miles per second is our rate of speed. In the merest fraction of a second we are far beyond our earth, where it is warm and breathable and habitable. We find ourselves rushing, rushing, rushing through a terrible, black, empty vacuum, and yet we appear to be standing still, for there is nothing near to indicate our motion.

In two seconds we pass the moon; five minutes later we leave Mars far below; we are leaving the solar system, with all that it contains of the life we know, and we will not pass another object for three long years or more. In an hour the sun has fallen far behind and shines like a brilliant star. In a day we are so far away that he is only one of the myriads of stars about, so clear and cutting, and seemingly so near, and yet so utterly far off that it staggers us to name their distances.

Four years later we pass a star, far to one side, near, as stars go, but not within a year's journey from us. Another four or five years, and we meet another sun, this time perhaps a little closer. We are passing through places where the stars are dense, for every few years we meet one.

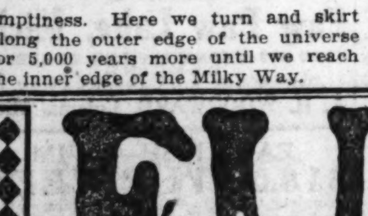
Time grows motionless, and we ask ourselves, What is this time, indeed, that the space between points in the sky that are as sands on the seashore should occupy such enormous periods for us? Time is relative. The span of our lives is an instant among the stars, and the span of their lives is too utterly long for us to encompass with our minds. And yet they are born, grow, die, and are resolved again in much the same fashion as we are.

After fifteen hundred years we reach the outer compass of the starry heavens on its shortest diameter, and find beyond us no more stars but only emptiness. Here we turn and skirt along the outer edge of the universe for 5,000 years more until we reach the inner edge of the Milky Way.



POSITION OF SUN AND STARS IN THE CENTER OF THE MILKY WAY

Beyond us we see swarms of stars, often wound with nebulae. Each star is a gigantic sun. We pass through dark masses of star dust, like filmy black fog before our vision. We see dead globes, large and black, prowing onward through the gloom, and yet we notice that the same space applies here that applies among all stars.

From earthly senses the space in the Milky Way seems terribly empty, and is dense only because of the great magnitude of the clusters and their riotous profusion compared with other stars.

PROGRESS

As the Pageant of Progress continues to attract thousands of visitors to our great city, all minds turn to the wonderful headway that we, as a city, have made.

We have only to consider that in the early nineteenth century the Indians were laying siege to old Fort Dearborn to appreciate this wonderful development—less than a century, from a frontier trading post to the third largest city in the world.

We had laid a splendid foundation for our future greatness when, in 1871, the Chicago Fire swept all before it. Once more our citizens put their shoulders to the wheel, and, almost before the embers were cooled, the beginning of a Greater Chicago was planned.

The World's Fair of 1893 marks a milestone. Little need be said of the splendor of that exposition. Many remember the general good that was accomplished in presenting the enterprise of Chicago to the peoples of the world.

Today we see Chicago as a great manufacturing center, the largest railroad center, and, with these industrial activities, also a university center. We do not only dwell upon the money-making side of life—witness the park systems, the bathing beaches and the numerous playgrounds.

Chicago is looking toward future development, and there is nothing that can stop her. Each month sees further completion of the Chicago Plan. Today we are earnestly talking and making plans for a waterway. St. Lawrence to the Gulf is the present aim.

Does not all this suggest that, to the wide-awake, industrious, and hard-working individual, business or city, great deeds are possible?

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Young Clergymen Are Seeking the Rural Pastorate

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

THE little crossroads country churcr has again come into its own. All over the northwest the deserted and rundown church buildings are being reclaimed and opened up for regular worship. The direct cause is the growing number of community centers in the suburban districts. Where a few years ago young ministers showed a decided preference toward a city charge, exactly the reverse opinion is now held. The ministers from the smaller city churches are seeking the growing country religious centers.

In a conference of country church ministers from three states held recently at Spokane some new light was thrown into public gaze concerning the community life of the agricultural and fruit growing centers of the northwest. The country church pays more per capita, has a larger average roll of membership, and more generally puts the teachings into actual practice. Some ministers fresh from a theological school have taken countryside charges, and in two years are getting salaries equal to some of the larger churches of the big towns and cities. Besides the ministers of these country churches are the men of the hour. They marry more couples, preside at all the social functions, have good homes to live in, and are the recognized legal adviser for scores of community organizations.

Entirely reversing their habits of a decade ago, country people of today more generally observe Sunday as a day of rest, recreation, and instruction. With automobiles in every farm yard it is a matter of only a few minutes' delightful ride to the little brown church in the vale. After the midday services long strings of autos are en route to the scenic places of the neighborhood. The world war caused the farmer's women folks to organize many societies for the mutual aid of the cause, and these today look for an outlet for their energies, and the little country church with its organizations solves the problem.

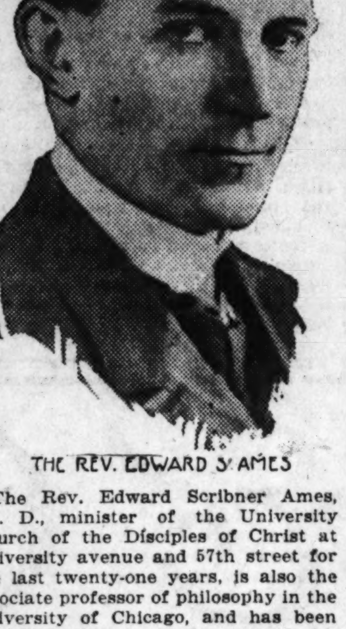
Among the summer preachers in Chicago churches this morning will be the Rev. Dr. John Hummon, general secretary of Carthage college, at the Epiphany English Lutheran church at Sacramento boulevard and Lexington street, of which the Rev. M. E. Boulton is pastor; the Rev. F. M. Silsley of Oakland, Cal., at the Second Presbyterian church, Michigan avenue and 20th street, of which the Rev. Dr. Josiah Sibley is the minister; the Rev. Alva V. King at the First Presbyterian church, Grand boulevard at 41st street, of which the Rev. Dr. William Chalmers Covert is minister; the Rev. Robert B. Kimber at St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn street, of which the Rev. Dr. Norman Hutton is rector, and the Rev. William H. Tomlins at St Paul's Church-by-the Lake, 7110 North Ashland avenue, of which the Rev. Henry Neal Hyde is rector.



THE REV. EDWARD S. AMES

The Rev. Edward Scribner Ames, Ph. D., minister of the University Church of the Disciples of Christ at University avenue and 57th street for the last twenty-one years, is also the associate professor of philosophy in the University of Chicago, and has been identified with the department of philosophy since 1894, with the exception of three years, from 1897 to 1900, when he was the professor of philosophy and pedagogy in Butler college, Indianapolis.

Graduated from Drake university, Des Moines, Ia., in 1889, where he also took his mater's degree in 1891, the Rev. Dr. Ames became a bachelor in divinity at the Yale Divinity school in 1892, and was a graduate student in philosophy at Yale university for the next two years, taking his doctorate in philosophy at the University of Chicago in 1895. For two years Dr. Ames was an instructor in the Disciples' Divinity house before going to Butler college as professor of philosophy, and ever since his return to the University of Chicago in 1900 he has been the minister of the University Church of the Disciples of Christ.

Dr. Ames is the author of "Psychology of Religious Experience," "The Higher Individualism," and "The New Orthodoxy."

A new chapel on the site of the present church and an educational building for the Disciples' Divinity house and a new church on the east side of the lot will be erected early next year, according to a recent announcement in the church calendar. The sum of $50,000 has already been paid in toward a fund of $200,000 for the erection of these buildings, designed by Architects Howard Van Doren Shaw and Henry K. Holsman.

Dr. W. E. Garrison, dean of the Disciples' Divinity house of the University of Chicago. is in charge of the services at the University church during Dr. Ames' vacation, with the exception of this Sunday, when the Rev. A. J. Saunders of the American college, Madura, India, will preach.

The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., which is the official title for the great national body of Presbyterians as distinguished from the so-called Southern Presbyterian church, recently completed its annual census and announced the result through the office of the acting stated clerk, Dr. George B. Stewart, Witherspoon building, Philadelphia, Pa. The census shows a total communicant membership in the Presbyterian church of 1,692,558, which is a net gain for the year of 55,453. The total Sunday school membership is 1,433,292. The total contributions to missionary, educational, and benevolent purposes for the year were $47,036,442.

The government of the church is divided into 46 synods—corresponding to states — and 302 presbyteries — corresponding to congressional districts.

The number of Presbyterian ministers enrolled is 9,979, the number of churches 9,842, and the number of churches that provide manses or homes for pastors is 4,550. The year's record of baptisms was: Infants, 46,296; on confession of faith, 43,015. There are 157 local evangelists and 228 licentiates, in addition to the pastors.

The whole number of communicants added on confession of faith in the year was 122,231. The number added on certificate from other churches was 84,858. A total of 12,345 was restored from inactive to active membership. The number dismissed was 63,386. Death took 19,058 from the rolls, and 61,157 were placed on the suspended roll.

The contributions included $3,701,369 for home missions, $4,200,144 for foreign missions, $1,077,067 for education, and $30,996,123 for local congregational expenses.

An official call for the annual convention of the National Council of Roman Catholic Men, to be held in Washington on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 21 and 22, has been issued by Dr. M. J. Slattery, executive secretary of the organization.

In the official call sent out by Dr. Slattery information is given concerning the number of delegates to which each diocese and each national society of Roman Catholic men are entitled. Every diocesan council of the National Council of Roman Catholic Men may be represented by one delegate and three additional delegates for every 50,000 paid up individual memberships or major fraction of that number.

National Society of Roman Catholic Men are entitled to three delegates each. Dioceses in which the men's council is not yet organized may send three delegates each selected by the ordinary.

Carl D. Gage of Chicago is one of the faculty for the school of city pastors now being held at Nebraska Wesleyan university. Mr. Gage is engaged in work among the Italians in Chicago. This summer he is lecturing before the various schools for rural and city pastors that is being conducted by the Methodist Episcopal church. In his addresses this week he discussed the foreign press and also the attitude of the country at large towards the foreigner.

Red Seal
HUMAN HAIR NET

You Love to Wear

Red Seal HAIR NETS

Natural and Invisible

KEEP the coiffure immaculate at all times by wearing a Red Seal Hair Net. It holds the hair without stiffening it to flatness.

Red Seal Hair Nets match the hair perfectly. Colors are dependable. Remarkably invisible. Edges never fray nor do they show. Only the finest superlustre quality of hair is used in their manufacture. Made in single and double strand.

Price 15c each or $1.50 a dozen for the single strand; 20c each or $2.00 a dozen for double strand. Grey and white 25c each.

For outdoor wear, the double strand Red Seal Hair Net is in particular demand.

America's Best

All Day Foot Comfort

Can you put on your shoes in the morning and then forget about them until you take them off at night? Or are they sending messages to your brain all day—messages of cramped toes, unbalanced weight, tired arches?

It is in these summer days that the mischief of the high-heeled, stiff-arched shoe is at its worst. But you don't have to endure it! You can learn the real meaning of foot comfort by changing to the Cantilever Shoe.

Because of its flexible shank, the Cantilever Shoe harmonizes with the motion of your foot. Your arch muscles, instead of being bound down as in ordinary shoes, have full freedom to exercise and grow strong.

There are other features you'll enjoy in Cantilevers. Their natural inner sole-line. The correctly placed heels. And the wonderful feeling of comfort which leaves you as smiling and happy at the end of a day as at the beginning.

Try on a pair and see how trim your feet look in them. Widths AAAAA to EE.

Send for Cantilever booklet. Mail orders filled.

THE LIFE OF ARTEMAS WARD

The first Commander-in-Chief of the American Revolution

By CHARLES MARTYN

A NEW BIOGRAPHY which clearly presents one of the most important of the early leaders of the American Revolution—a man whose attainments have been variously and contradictorily estimated.

Its carefully authenticated material includes contemporary documents, here published for the first time, which throw new light on the first stage of the war of the American Revolution. No student can obtain a correct understanding of the sieg of Boston without reading the chapters devoted to it in this biography.

A volume of 350 pages, well printed and illustrated, and handsomely and strongly bound.

The price is only $3.00—a low figure for such a work at present costs.

Your bookseller will supply you, or remit direct to

Centennial Exposition

Mexico City, Sept. 12 to Oct. 12.

It is not so hot in Mexico! The temperature in Mexico City is always springlike —65 to 70 degrees. Come with us to the great Exposition in celebration of 100 years of Mexican independence from Spain, to be held in Mexico City from Sept. 12 to Oct 12. Visit this quaint land of tropical beauty rapidly awakening to its heritage of commercial development. Plan today to make this trip.

The T. & S. Tours Co. invites you to join the first Mexican Special, which will leave Chicago about Sept. 1, under the personal supervision of Senor W. Hernandez, charge d'affaires of the Mexican Exposition. But you must make your reservation promptly—write, wire or phone today for particulars to Make This Your Summer Home

What more charming summer home could you ask than the Chicago Beach Hotel?

What location could be more ideal? Here you live in a beautiful secluded spot, the broad blue expanse of Lake Michigan's waters on one side of you and an exclusive park section on the other. Complete isolation from the noise and grime of the city—yet what convenience! Only 12 minutes from the heart of Chicago—from the business district, the shops and the theatres.

With its two splendid buildings (the new East Building just completed) the "Chicago Beach" stands as the most imposing edifice on Chicago's magnificent south shore boulevard system. Yet no hotel can be said to be more truly homelike in atmosphere. 1,000 rooms—some single, some in suites. All at moderate prices, and all tastefully furnished and completely appointed.

Pleasant cafes and dining rooms; unusually excellent cuisine; exceptional service.

Picturesque grounds—13 broad acres. Fine bathing beach; tennis courts. Boating—sailing and rowing—golfing, horseback riding and other sports in season also available for guests. Many indoor entertainments—dancing, concerts, moving pictures, card parties, etc. And with it all, association with people "one likes to know."

Call at the hotel or see our illustrated booklet to appreciate what the "Chicago Beach" offers as a summer home. Write or phone.
